MULLAN DEFENSE OPENED

Additional Testimony Tends to Show a Combination.

SOBRIETY OF THE ACCUSED

The Credibility of Engineer Ainsworth Attacked by the Prosecution-Bias Suggested-Witnesses Declare They Had Seen Accased When He Had Been Drinking.

The Mullan court-martial was resumed at the pavy yard at 10 o'clock yesterday morning

Paymaster General Stewart was called as a witness by the prosecution. He testified that he visited the Pensacola Navy Yard in December, 1896, and met er Mullap, then commandant of the yard, at the house of the latter. Under direct examination Paymaster General Stewart testified that the manner of the was courteous and his speech The judge advocate objected to the answer of the witness on the ground. was not a direct answer. Atforneys McCammon and Hayden, comseldefense, protested against the tactics of the judge advocate and mainmed that the answer of the witness was a direct one. After a legal tangle, witness was told by the court to answer directly to the question of the prosecutor as to whether the accused was infoxicated or sober. The es then said that the impression which he at the time received was that the ac cused had been drinking, though he could not state that he was intesicated

The testimony given before the court of inquiry at Pensacola by A. B. Chaffin, James A. McDanald, and W. G. Chipley was read. The first named witness testi-fied that the accused had been drinking but was not drunk; the second named witness thought that on one occasion the no cused had been drinking because he talked more than usual, and the last witness for the prospection testified that he had seen

The presecution closed at 12 o'clock and a recess was taken. The defense opened after the noon recess. Attorney Hayden proceeded to read the testimony given be fore the court of inquiry by the witnesse for the defense. The first testimony sub-mitted was that of John Morrill, a ship wright at the Pensacola navy yard. The irst prestion was, "What was the condition of Commander Mullan at the times you

The defense sought to introduce this of the specific charge of intoxication on prosecution objected, but would be willing to have this evidence admitted as tend-ing to establish the good character of the accised. The testimony was admitted on this ground. Morrill testified that he had seen the accosed several times each day during the period in which the cases of intextention are charged to have each time. Movnil testified that he had anything to indicate that Communder Mullan was a drinking man-

He was always polite and courteous.

Attarney Hayden then read the testimony of Thomas Curran, who said that he saw Commander Mullan on an average of four times a day, but never saw him under the influence of liquor. He usually knew when a man was drunk by seeing blue drink and by noticing a change in his gait and manner John J. Keefe, a latorer in the Pensacola yard, testified that he saw the commander daily six or eight times during the period when the offenses are alleged He saw the commander at his quarters at the yard. He never saw the accused under the influence of liquor. His man-ner was normal. He had never smelled liquor on the breath of the accused.

The testimeny of Mrs. Rhoda Armstrong, of Fort Faranceas, Fig., was then the commander several times for the pur pase of securing the use of a Governm building for the use of charity. The commander was soller and courteou

The next testimony introduced was that of Miss Winifred Simpson. She had met had never called with Mrs. Armstrong upon the same business. The accused was always sober. She had been close enough to the commander to smell his eath, but she had never smelled liquor

The testimony of Horace Greece wa introduced to support the testimony of Mrs. Amustrong and Miss Simpson. He remembered that they had called to see the commandant. The testimony of both Mrs. Armstrong and Miss Simpson had been that a caller whom they did not know had called upon Commander Mollan. The ladies and the cook testified that Commander Mullan was sober. This testimony contradicted that given by Kessler was a witness for the prosecution, and who testified that, when he called ander Mallan, that officer was intoxicated.

The testimony of Charles T. Ainsworth, engineer of the steam launch upon which Commander Mullan was said to have been seen drunk by the government witness inder drunk.

The defense presented this as direct evi-lence to relat the testimony of Chipley. To this the presention objected and the objection was asstained. Ainsworth's testimony was strong evidence in fehal of the accused, and much of it was directly in opposition to some of the specific allegations of the presecution. der cross-examination Ainsworth was asked this question:

Were sou drunk on a certain night and were you reported by Paymaster Jewett? The defense objected that this was question not pertinent to the case. The prosocution wanted the question admitted in order to attack the credibility of the witness. Attorney Hayden stated that testimon; going to show that a man had been intextcated did not affect his credity. The judge advocate agreed with Mr. Hayden in this, making the observation "The best of us are liable to do this." But the prosecution desired the question that it might show bias on the part of the witness in favor of the accused. The prosecution wanted to show that Ainsworth had been reported to Commander Mullan fer intoxication and that the offense tad been condoned by Commande

The testimony of T. M. Skarret, a wit ness for the defense, was then read. He was a "writer" at the navy yard at Pensa-inquiry, at Pensacola, by C. A. Hig-gins, stated that the behavior of Com-mander Mulian was always correct. The accused was sober at each time the witness had seen bim, and had the respect of all the workmen at the navy yard.

The testimony of Mary E. Carroll was positive that Commander Mullan was not Solomon Comp, a business man at Pen sucola gave testimony as to the sobriety of the accused, as did W. E. Woolford, a conductor on the Pensacola Traction Company The testimony of Worlford was offered in rebuttal of specification 5, of charge 1, and to this the judge adve cate objected. He moved that this testi mony he stricken out. The presecution maintained that the charge was not specific, that Capt. Cotton has testified that "some time within ten days he had seen the accused drunk on one of the cars." train and but one conductor. Every time Commander Multan traveled over this road this conductor must have seen him, and yet the testimony of the conductor was that he had never seen the accused Tough-Looking Crank's Cheerful Visit to Sir Julian Pauncefote.

Oswell Abbington Imagined the Ambassador Was Custodian of His Alleged Fortune.

A young man about twenty-five years of age, of very shabby apppearance, sau tered leisurely up the broad stone sleps of the British Embassy, at Connecticut avenuand N street, about 11 o'clock yesterday morning and rang the bell By skillful maneuvers, he managed to get by the oorkeeper and reached the presence of Secretary Towers, where he modestly asked edated with a draft on the Bank of England for five thousand pounds sterling.

The demand from such an ill-looking estomer and under such conditions fairly aused the diplomat to gasp for breath, but a few moments quiet and dignified conver sation with the man convinced the secretary that his guest was a crank. A telephone message was sent to No. 3 precinct police station, and the intruder was taken there and locked up, charged with being a sus picious character. He gave his name as Oswell W. Abbington, a pative of Kennington, England, neu-Loudon, where he said his father had a Miss Sessford, a sweet-faced, nearly not required to testify; as, by arrangement of counsel, the trial was continued until today. Miss Sessford's counsel is posteve of an acquittal, as he holds that the Government has to prove a specific case of medical attendance on the part of his client, as that term is generally understood, or an attempt on her part to pass as a graduate of a medical school. The Government, it is understood, is dightly doubtful as to the strength of its ase and is looking about for any other law under which those responsible for the neglect can be held.

The feeling among the medical profession and others interested in the case is very strong, and it is everywhere contended that f there is no law in the District covering the case one should be enacted.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE TO CLOSE.

Best Talent Caly Employed and the Stars Not Available.

In spite of the wonderful financial suc cess of the vandeville experiment here the Grand Opera House will be closed tomorrow night for the remainder of the summer, and the attractions billed for next week will be switched to one of the seaside resorts on the circuit. This arrangement was made last night when word was received that "Fritz" Emmet and others of the performers re-fused to play in Washington during the hot months, and this was followed by similar "back outs" from Calart Cooper and Clara Morris. These stars are not obliged to work during the supplemental season, and, even in cases where they do, prefer the seaside resorts and cooler places. Manager Isaacs, who will run s show here next year, refused on his part to put on an inferior show, and hence the closing.

The son, a man of about thirty, ill-class and unshaven, had no defense to make forther than the statement that drink ad brought him so low. 'I want to see you a moment, mother," he said, as he escended from the stand. "I never want to see you again as long as I live." was the reply, and the mother went back to her seat and wept bitterfy "Drink is no excuse for such conduc as yours," said Judge Kimball. "I only wish I could give you the sentence vo leserve, but the amount you are charge with stealing is so small that to my orrow I cannot give you more than sixty days in the workhouse. But you
