A CHAT WITH GENERAL JOHNSTON.
Proud to Be One of General Grant's Full Generals—Stonewall Jackson as a Leader.
General Joseph Johnston, the well-known Confederate leader, who at Mrs. Grant's special request was selected as a pall-bearer by the President, arrived at the Palmer House yesterday from Portland, Ore., on his way to New York. General Johnston, though now well along in years, stands erect and looks every inch a soldier. He is about five feet ten inches in height, and his closely cropped hair is more white than black. What remains of his hair is also white, but the locks are scanty now, although the eyes are bright and the voice pleasant.
"Where you pleased at being invited to be a pall-bearer at the funeral, General?" the scribbler inquired.
"Yes, I was very much gratified at having the opportunity to pay my respects to the memory of General Grant," the General replied; "and I think that both North and South should do honor to his memory. The South has, and what is more, the General had many as many friends in the South as in the North. At the time it was proposed to reinstate General Grant the Southern Representatives supported it quite as strongly, if not more so, than the Northern, and I am sure the South mourns his loss."
"Would it be fair to ask your opinion of General Grant as a General, you being an old foe?"
"No, I should not deem it right to talk on that subject; but I will say this: At the close of the year 1864 things were about equal between the two armies. The Federal troops were stretched out in such a long line, so that when an attack was made by the Southern army, who were on the defensive, a sufficient force could always be collected to stop the advance of part of that line, and such being the case, the rest of it could not advance without their communication being broken. When General Grant took command he massed his forces into two great armies, one under himself and the other under Sherman, and by this means completely crushed the armies opposing him. I do not say the result would have been different in the end, but I am sure of this—that General Grant hastened the conclusion of the war in a remarkable manner."
"Then you give no opinions?"
"No, I have had a bad experience of opinions. Particular attention was paid to the Mississippi during the war, an English officer came to me with a strong letter of introduction from Mr. Mason (at that time Commissioner to England), asking me to show him all the civility I could. Of course I welcomed him to the camp, at least he got most of the civility as he had no tents, but only some cooking utensils, and during the time he was there he had frequent talks over the camp fire. In one of these, in speaking of the respective merits of Longstreet and 'Stonewall' Jackson, I said that the former was the better General from a strategical point of view than Jackson. Six months afterward I received a book in which the whole conversation was printed. Now, as Jackson was a perfect idol among the Presbyterians of the South, you can imagine that I became exactly the opposite."
"Then you do not consider Jackson a great General?"
"Not as a strategist, but as a division commander and fighter, yes. The action for which he got most praise was really a defeat, and that was the battle of Cross Keys. Jackson and Ewell's corps were opposed to Fremont and Shields, and Jackson was in command. Shields was advancing on the opposite side of the river from Fremont, and had a comparatively weak corps. Fremont had a strong one. Jackson's corps was the stronger of the Confederates. Jackson detailed Ewell to attack Fremont, while he watched Shields and prevented him crossing the river. Ewell defeated Fremont, and then Jackson crossed the river and attacked Shields, but he was beaten until Ewell came to his assistance. Yet Jackson for this received the thanks of Congress. The idea of a man with a superior force watching an inferior while he dispatches a weaker force against a superior is scarcely strategy."
The General left for New York by the 5 o'clock train. A gentleman who traveled with General Johnston said that the General told him it was one of the proudest moments of his life when he received the request to be one of the pall-bearers, and that he had ridden seventy-five miles, and driven 200 by stage before he could get at the train. The old General spoke in the highest terms of the generalship of the late General.—Chicago Herald.

Had Lots of Fun.
Little Jimmy Jones, aged 7 years, came running home crying, and spitting blood and teeth out of his mouth, while his eyes were black and burned and swollen.
"Oh, mercy! Is my boy killed?" shrieked the agonized mother.
A hasty examination revealed the fact that most of her boy was at home, and that his life and health were also in the vicinity.
"Stop your noise!" she commanded; "you are not much hurt. Tell me all about it, and mind you tell the truth."
"Me and Tommy Toodles," said the boy between sobs, "was playin' in the stable, when my holler tooth combed me to actin', and Tommy said he could cure it. He put some black powder in my mouth and touched it off with a match."
"Didn't you blow any more noise than to let him blow your teeth out with gunpowder?" asked Mrs. Jones, severely.
"Tommy said it wouldn't hurt, and we'd have lots of fun," said Jimmy, brightening up and attempting to laugh.
"It was awful funny—wasn't it—to have your mouth burned and your teeth blown out?" said the mother ironically.
"No, he didn't mamma. I lost all my teeth, I guess; but you order see Tommy! Two of my teeth is stickin' to his nose, and one of his ears is clean gone!"

Our Sympathies.
The Conservative newspapers of London are carping at the Grant funeral service in Westminster Abbey and criticizing the display in the United States. It is characteristic of the acrimonious Tories to disparage eminent Americans and to find some reason for ridiculing everything American. This fact is so well known that it is very strange that any number of Americans should be found to give their political sympathies to the party of the acrimonious pretensions and insular prejudices, instead of to the Liberals, the friends of progress and free government.—Alta California, Aug. 8.

3. There never was any contract.
It is better off than the defendant in the kettle suit who pleaded:
1. The kettle was cracked when he borrowed it.
2. The kettle was whole when he returned it.
3. He never had the kettle.—Chicago Inter-Ocean, Rep.

A Sensitive Judge.
A Texas judge fined a man for calling him a liar while court was in session. The judge, in explaining to the man's friends, said: "I know that I am a liar, but not while court is in session, gentlemen."

An Unreasonable Boy.
A fourteen-year-old boy writes us that, wanting a little money that should be all his own, he bought a pig last spring with his saved-up pennies and managed to buy enough mill feed to keep it growing all summer, and last fall he earned the corn to fatten it by husking nights for every eighth bushel. He has just sold the pig for $20, and his father took the money, saying the boy had no use for it, and that he would give him another pig in the spring. The boy asks was that right.—Rural New Yorker.
