JUSTICE STEPHEN J. FIELD. His Early Life in California—His Literary Training and Plans for the Future—Probable Successor.

(New York World.) Justice Field will remain upon the Bench three years longer. He intends to retire when he has served twenty-five years upon the Bench. This will give President Cleveland an opportunity of filling his place with a Democrat. Undoubtedly Attorney-General Garland will doubtedly Attorney-General Gariand will be selected if there is no earlier vacancy. Justice Field intends to devote the re-mainder of his life to literary work. Very few men who have lived eventful lives as public officials ever take the time or the trouble to sit down in the quiet of their libraries and record their observations. Washington to day has a great many men libraries and record their observations. Washington to-day has a great many men who have abundant leisure to contribute, and a rich experience with which to make contributions to the history of their time. None of them, however, have had a more eventful life than Justice Field. He was one of a family of five brothers, four of whom are now living and are prominently before the public. When the Justice was a young lad, thirteen years of age, he before the public. When the Justice was a young lad, thirteen years of age, he went to Smyrna with his sister, who married a missionary. He was in Smyrna for several years, and acquired during his stay there quite a knowledge of Oriental languages. He also learned to speak French. It was his idea when he went to the East to fit himself for a professorship of Oriental languages. of Oriental languages in some Eastern college. During his stay in the East he went with a Mr. and Mrs. Hill to the southern part of Greece for a visit. The Hills went from Connecticut to Greece for the purpose of establishing a school for the education of young ladies. This school became afterward a great success. In it have been educated all of the young ladies of the leading families of Greece. Several years ago Justice Field revisited the Eastern places where he had passed so much time in his boyhood. Although over fifty years had elapsed he found the Hills still living. Mrs. Hill died only the other day at the age of eighty-three. Mr. Hill, too, is now dead, but he lived to reach the age of ninety-two. THE ASIATIC PLAGUE. In this reminiscences of the past the Justice will describe the incidents of the ing a number of the cholera patients. But in the plague he was able to no noth-He says that dread disease is beyond human help or knowledge, so far as any present discoveries have reached. The touch of a man who has the real plague is sure contamination. Ninety per cent, of those who have the plague die. When a man is taken every one flees from him. He is instantly deserted and left to fight with the most terrible of epidemics alone. His death is almost sure to follow within the twelve hours sure to follow within the twelve hours following. The Judge recalls a very dramatic scene which occurred at a dinner at which he was present during the early days of the epidemic. The guests were seated about a brilliantly lighted board. The social spirit among the guests was high. A toast was about to be drank. The guests to the guest to be drank. The guests, too, turned to pledge each other and saw one of the servants who one had fled, leaving the wine standing in the glasses, the toast undrank. No one entered that house for a year afterwards, and when they did, after employ-ing in advance the most powerful disin-fectants, they found there the dried and decayed remnants of the feast with the grinning skeleton of the servant who had waited upon them lying in his clothes just where he had fallen the night of the banquet. BARLY LIFE IN CALIFORNIA. After the Judge has finished his remi-nicences of the East he will be able to recall some very interesting chapters of early life in California. He was one of early life in California. He was one of the first to visit that country after the gold fever had broken out. He has been through all of the exciting periods of the growth of California into a State, and has had a number of thrilling personal ad-ventures. This grave and staid Judge, who appears so solemn and passionless in his silten grown upon the Supreme Court his silken gown upon the Supreme Court Bench, when a young man in California carried the weapons of a duellist and asserted himself in the only way that a serted himself in the only way that a man could hold a footing among lawless men who had no respect for any man who could not prove his physical courage. The most interesting chapter of his California life was when he headed the Union movement and helped to hold California tree to the Government. It was doubttrue to the Government. It was doubtless owing to his prominence in this that caused Mr. Lincoln to appoint him to the Supreme Court Bench. HISTORICAL INCIDENTS. The record of his twenty-five years of life as a Judge in Washington covers one of the most interesting periods in our his-tory. He has talked with all the leading heroes of the war and has preserved from their stories many historical incidents. His own part in the Supreme Court has been an important one. Some of its most valuable decisions have been made during the last quarter of a century. Justice Field has a fondness for writing. His literary training and his wide experihis literary training and his wide experience must combine to make most read-ble books. He hopes to secure before he retires from the Bench an increase in the number of Justices of the Court and of the Circuit Court Judges. He believes in raising the number of the Justices to fourteen, with a quorum requiring only six. He says that the present adminis-tration of justice in the Federal and Supreme Courts amounts to a practical depreme Courts amounts to a practical de-nial of justice. The Judges are all over-worked and have more than they can do. He has already talked with the President upon the subject, and has asked him to recommend such legislation to Congress. If such a measure could be passed during Mr. Cleveland's time it would still leave the Surgeana Court under the control of the Supreme Court under the control of the Supreme Court under the control of the Republicans. Eight out of the nine Justices are Republicans. The President observed in his conversation with the Justice upon the subject that such a bill would probably affect his cabinet. This was a plain intimation that there were one or two candidates in his Cabinet for the next vacancies upon the Supreme Court Bench. Mr. Garland's wishes in this matter are well understood. It is now said that Mr. Bayard also would like to retire at some future time from the Cabinet to secure a position upon the Supreme Court Bench. He has hardly enough reputation as a lawyer to justify any such appointment. It is understood that the Republican Senate will oppose any attempt to increase the Supreme Court Justices during Mr. Cleveland's term. It is a metter

Court Justices during Mr. Cleveland's term. It is a matter, however, which will be very warmly pressed. The Democrats are specially anxious to secure representation upon the Bench of the Federal Courts throughout the country.

DOMESTIC LIFE

As Seen in Germany by a Young Lady Traveler.

The domestic machinery of the Germans is much simpler than ours, and in many respects more economical and practical. One truth is soon made apparent to a stranger, that is, that economy is a necessity in Germany. In a family of seven there is usually but one servant. She rises at 5, makes the kitchen fire, washes the floor and puts her own room in order. At 6 the baker comes, then in order. At 6 the baker comes, then the man with milk and butter (the Germans never put salt in their butter, so they buy it fresh every morning.) The children are awakened, and the maid helps them to dress, then makes the coffee and serves it, first to the older children, who are obliged to be off for school at 6:30 in summer and 7 in the winter. This done in our family the maid puts my 6:30 in summer and 7 in the winter. This done, in our family, the maid puts my sitting-room in order, washing the floor, dusting the furniture and shaking the rugs. At 7 we have coffee and by 7:30 I am ready to begin my work. After the rest of the family are served with coffee and rolls, the sleeping and other rooms are put in order, each being washed or waxed and rugs thoroughly beaten; then the maid goes to the market to buy the dinner. There are no supplies in larder in Germany as at home. If cold boiled dinner. There are no supplies in larder in Germany as at home. If cold boiled ham or any cold meat is needed for supper, the maid goes to the butcher and buys just enough for the meal.

A custom that struck me curiously was that of having shops in the basements of even the handsomest houses on the most fashionable streets—butchers, bakers, shoemakers, notion stores, jewelers, all who can be found within a radius of a block from any given point. It is unwho can be found within a radius of a block from any given point. It is undoubtedly convenient for the people, but it mars the beauty of the streets very much. My maid has gone to market I believe, so by the time she has returned and is preparing the second breakfast, which is served at 11, and consists of a couple of eggs and a slice of brown bread, and rephanes a class of milk for a hoarder. and perhaps a glass of milk for a boarder; but for the children and the rest of the family it is usually only a slice of brown bread an inch and a half thick with a little cold meat. Occasionally a cup of chocolate varies the monotony.

Then comes the dinner at 2—soup, meat and vegetables, and dessert, the latter the children only are allowed to have on Sundays. After the soup has been served the lady of the house puts what she intends for the maid in a dish, and on a company would a servent be allowed. and on no account would a servant be al-lowed to take more than had been given terrible plague which he witnessed when he first lived in the East. He saw both the Asiatic cholera and the plague. Although he moved in the very midst of these two terrible epidemics, he escaped sickness. He acted as a nurse in attend-time and the plague and the kitchen put in order, the maid dresses and takes the children out for a walk in the park, resickness. He acted as a nurse in attend-time for 5 o'clock coffee, which even the little 3-year-old boy of my land-lady drank every day. It was a problem to me how these children kept their health, with coffee in the morning and afternoon and at night. I am sure American children could not endure it. At 8 supper is eaten; cold meat, tea or milk or beer and bread and butter com-pose the meal. The laundry work is always done out of the house; so that it lessens the work of the one maid very materially. All bread, cake, pies, and even puddings, are bought ready-made, as we say of clothes. The bread is much better than ours, because it is always thoroughly done. A good maid is not paid more than $20 a year, and in many families only $12. They are allowed one Sunday evening out in two weeks, and if they should come home later than they have promised, they do not go out again for a month. was waiting upon the table dead. Instantly they all cried, "The plague!" and in the briefest moment of time every was in the quarrels were so frequent that They are very tenacious of their titles, and if a lady's husband is a doctor or professor, and you do not call her Frau Doctor or Frau Professor, you offend her mortally. I told my German teacher that I had some friends in Berlin whom I had met some years ago in Rome, and asked how I should address the lady, as I was going there to dine. I thought the gentleman's title was Justizirath; then I must call her Frau Justizirath. "But," I said, "he is also Geheimerath." "Oh, then, that is still higher, and she must be called Frau Geheimerath." Later on in this conversation I mentioned that he was also professor in the university. The look of amazement and surprise I got, and the way in which she said, "How lucky that you told me; you must call her Frau Piofessor," convinced me that I would have made a serious mistake if I had used either of the first mentioned titles.

> There is a journalist in Baltimore, a man of long experience and with habits almost Puritanical in their steadiness, who spends his vacation in a very novel way. He is a man of family, and in his residence there is a large and comfortable cellar. If his family desire to go away he interposes no objections, but he says that, as far as he is concerned, he is not going to pay three or four dollars a day for being cooped up in a summer resort hotel room when he has right at hand so many facilities for comfort. So, when his holiday comes, he has the cellar thor-oughly cleaned and fitted up with sofa, easy chairs, hammocks, etc. He collects the best things in literature, lays in a stock of provisions and plenty of cigars and tobacco, and for two weeks he enjoys the luxuries of life like a king, exiled in his own cellar.—Baltimore American.

The village of Elmsworth, in England, was recently visited by a remarkable plague of flies, which simultaneously covered an area of a mile. At some places it was impossible to move without closing the eyes and mouth. Around every lamp in the town the spectacle was most curious. Attracted by the light thick swarms abounded and their buzz resembled a hive of bees. At the postoffice, where the upper portion of the door is open for ventilation, and where necessarily the light is kept burning till the early morning, the insects covered the sorting boards, The village of Elmsworth, in England, the insects covered the sorting boards, letters and bags, and had to be continually swept off with brushes. At one lamp they simply hung down in clusters.

A friend said to General Sherman lately, apropos of the Grant funeral, that his—General Sherman's—funeral would be more quiet. Sherman said: "No!" and added "I want to make all the noise while I am alive." Then he added, with great emphasis on the first sentence: "My grave is bought and paid for. I shall be buried at St. Lonis, where my children be buried at St. Louis, where my children are buried. When I go they can put me in there and drive a stake in to mark the spot.

You can not find in Washington, says a correspondent of the Boston Record, a better satisfied man than the new regisbetter satisfied man than the new regis-ter of the treasury, General Rosecrans.
