The Most Destructive Gale on Record. Extending Through Several States.

Wrecking Hundreds of Houses and Killing Hundreds of People.

Partial List of the Killed and Wounded. Later Particulars of Sunday's Terrible Blow.

St. Louis, 19.—A special to the Post-Dispatch from Lebanon says the tornado which caused such frightful havoc at Marshall last night passed entirely through Green and Webster Counties, following the course of James River, in a northerly direction. It struck the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad in four places, and left it near Franks Station, 110 miles this side of Marshall.

The latter place presents a terrible appearance, there not being more than a dozen houses unharmed in the entire town. The court house and many other buildings took fire, and the scene and effects were a dreadful character. At one house two children were killed, and another badly mangled, but still alive. The parents could not be found. In another case a woman was not entirely safe, she seems to have been carried away bodily. No details of the calamity have yet been received. The force of the wind struck back from trees, and other objects entirely out of the ground, and telegraph poles and wires were carried hundreds of rods into the woods and tied and knotted together in all directions.

Everything possible is being done to assist and comfort the wounded, not only at Marshall, but at other places. Physicians throughout the county are flocking to the points most injured, and doing all they can to alleviate the suffering. Doctors went from Springfield to the James county, six miles south, as well as to Marshall, and scores of kind-hearted people have volunteered as relief agents. The St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, is sending special trains with relief wherever good can be done, and all are doing everything possible to aid the injured and dying.

The storm did no serious damage in this city, but caused a general shaking up. Telegraph communication with Marshall was restored to-night, but only one wire working, and it is reported that Rogers, general manager of the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, has just received the following from D. H. Nichols, his chief superintendent: "The news coming in constantly from different parts of the country show that many were killed or injured in remote districts. It is believed that the cyclone which destroyed and not yet reported. Seven of the wounded on James River died this afternoon, and were buried at Marshall. The latter place all is confusion, and the people are in such an excited state that it is almost impossible to get any reliable report. Many families are homeless and have taken refuge in the depots and empty cars standing at stations. The front rooms of the court house are being used as a hospital. The school building is used for a hospital. Up to 7 o'clock this evening, there have been 147 deaths, and the prospect of increasing it before morning. Many are yet missing and a number have been buried of whom records are kept. It is impossible to get a list of the dead, but the following names are of some prominent persons and their families, who were discovered early in the day: Mrs. Judge Egan, Dan Wright and wife, Rev. E. Condo, Mattias Widenmeyer, Mrs. W. L. Loomis, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. W. Leeds, wife and two children, Sheriff Johnson's wife, a child of J. L. Kuhl, Mrs. Todd, Dr. Bradford, Sidney Bradford, Mrs. J. H. Adams, Mrs. M. G. Adams, Holley and child, Mrs. Malinda Potter, Mrs. Florence Moore, Hugh Kelsie. Eighty-five of the wounded are in the schools, among whom are the following seriously injured: Adlie Widenmeyer, Mrs. E. Condo, James M. Hicks, Mrs. C. Smith, Mrs. M. G. Moore, F. N. O'Neil, Fannie Rush, Bettie Rush, Mrs. J. L. Kuhl, Nathan Smith, Sam Smith, Samuel Crisman, wife and six children, C. Smith. The list includes the most serious cases and many of them will die. A great many wounded people are killed or injured, and no list has been prepared. Only fourteen buildings are left standing and there is not a house in town but is more or less damaged. The cyclone was low, but it was a car load of provisions was sent from Springfield to Marshall, by the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad, and a passenger train from that point, and a passenger train from the west ran into the city, bringing four hundred dollars worth of supplies. At Rolla, for the sufferers at Marshall and twelve doctors and nurses left here for that point.

At Gray's Creek four miles from Jefferson City, seven houses were demolished and several of their inmates killed. The Missouri Pacific Railroad at that point, and a passenger train from the west ran into the city, bringing four hundred dollars worth of supplies. At Rolla, for the sufferers at Marshall and twelve doctors and nurses left here for that point.

Another special to the same paper, from California, says a terrible storm visited that State on the night of the 19th. The storm first broke in the mountains, and then descended, destroying almost every house in the place; then passed down the valley towards the North River, demolishing nearly every building in its track. Following is a partial list of those killed: A. G. Campbell, two children of Henry Schaffer, two children of Cordean Green, a son of George Hartox, and Jack Wilson. Several others were killed, but the names are not reported.

The first dispatch direct from Marshall, Utah, says that the night, by the Globe Democrat. It gives the following description of the storm: This town and country were visited by one of the most destructive cyclones on record last evening. After passing through several miles of country, in Christian, Green and Webster Counties, destroying everything in its pathway, leveling houses, barns, mills and timber, it struck this town at 3 o'clock. The wind was from the east, and the rain was a heavy, driving, proscribing storm. It was a frightful, looking black cloud, lined with fleecy white, funnel-shaped, and moving in the manner of a screw propeller. It moved with wonderful velocity, literally destroying and blowing away everything in its path, which was about half a mile wide at this point. Large-sized trees were twisted off, telegraph wires snapped, and bark literally peeled from small trees; houses were blown from their foundations, cattle, hogs, sheep, horses and poultry whirled into the air and carried a great distance. The noise of the storm, the crash of falling houses, and the cries and screams of terrified people, made a scene of horror that beggars description. What was a beautiful, quiet town of 800 was a waste of desolation. Out of 200 dwelling houses not more than twenty are left standing, and but a few of those remaining are uninjured. Of the business houses around the public square, all but three are utterly demolished, and their contents blown into the air. The public school building, which was not badly damaged, was carried to the only available structure left standing. The public school building, which was not badly damaged, was carried to the only available structure left standing.

The loss by this terrible calamity is estimated at $200,000. Every business house in the place is in ruins, and stocks are all destroyed.
