The Grand Fancy Dress Ball at Provo.

CONDUCTORS' BALL AT OGDEN.

The Opera House Masquerade—Western Star Council—They are Not All Dead.

A Social Sensation.

One of the grandest social events that has transpired in Provo for many years was the character dress ball given at the Academy Hall, under the auspices of the Provo Silver Band, on Friday night, the 23d inst.

At about 9 o'clock the bugle was sounded and the grand march formed. From that hour till early morning dancing was indulged in apparently with the greatest enjoyment by the large number of participants and spectators. It was one of the largest assemblages of representative society at a ball that has been seen in Provo for a long while.

It was announced at 11.30 o'clock that supper was ready, and the dancers filed into a large hall, where there was prepared a feast of good things equal to Delmonico's. Justice was done the collation and the inner man was well satisfied. A large number were dressed in character, and each sustained his part in a very creditable manner.

Just before supper was announced the characters formed in line, and were introduced to the audience by J. C. Graham, Esq. Among the number were noticed the following well represented characters:

Miss Edith Bee, as Nature and Art.
Miss Annie Jones, as the Huntress of the Mississippi.
Miss Zella Webb, as the Lady of the Lake.
Miss Lily Roberts, as the Child of the Regiment.
Miss Grace Bee, as Evening.
Miss Zina Wood, as Aurora.
Miss Hattie Doolan, as Winter.
Miss Dolly Roberts, as the Pueblo Squaw.
Miss H. Billings, as Lobster Salad.
Mrs. C. S. Taylor, as the Gypsy.
Miss Hannah Stubbs, as Cupid.

Of the gentlemen characters who did themselves credit were noticed:

W. D. Roberts, who presented General Beauregard.
John P. Doolan, the Flour of the Family.
J. M. McEwan, the Vagabonds.
Willis Lewis, the Irishman.
W. Long and companion, the two Dutchy.
William Brinton, Sitting Bull.
Prince Albert, Spanish Cavalier, Clown, Shepherdess, Sailor, Fortune Teller, Advertizing Lady, Satan and Shadow. Five o'clock Tea, Toby Welch, Horseman and Lady, Jack and Nancy, and the Waiter were all noticeable for their dress and acting. After supper time the awarding committee announced its decision.

Four prizes were selected: a silver card receiver, a silver fruit dish, an ink stand and a napkin ring. The first prize for the best sustained character, was awarded to Miss Dollie Roberts; the second prize to Mr. J. H. McEwan; the third to Miss Zella Webb, and Miss Edith Bee was the choice of the committee for the fourth prize. It was universally considered to be as just an award as could be made.

It was commendable to see so many well chosen and creditably executed characters. A slight hitch in regard to the supper happened, but it was unavoidable. Mr. F. W. Hathenbruck deserves much praise for his excellent management. Withal the ball was a success, and it is an event long to be remembered.

The Academy Ball at Provo.

Although following close upon the heels of the above social event, the ball given for the students of the B. Y. Academy, last evening, was well attended, and the enjoyment experienced seemed scarcely second to that of the night previous. It was a joyous occasion, and one long to be remembered by all who participated. We regret the lateness of the affair precludes further mention this morning.

The O. R. C Ball at Ogden.

The first annual ball of the Order of Railroad Conductors, which has been the cause of much favorable newspaper comment and private expectation, took place at Ogden on the evening of the 23d inst. Elaborate preparations, attendant with great expense and labor, had been made by the projectors of this the grandest event of the season in the Junction City, and the successful termination of the party more than realized the wildest anticipations of any member of Wasatch Division. As early as 8 o'clock the invited guests commenced filing in through the spacious hallway of the Opera House, and were received in a royal manner by the Reception Committee, headed by Conductors Allen, Babcock, Wood and Metcalf. At 9 o'clock the signal for the grand march was given. Through the circuitous but graceful changes of the most imposing of dances Conductor Wood and lady were followed by over two hundred elegantly attired ladies and gentlemen. Among the ladies whose toilets were marvels of beauty and whose costumes shown out resplendently over this magnificent throng we noticed Mesdames Lutz, Anderson, Boyle, Carannan, Metcalf, Allen, Millis, Peterson, Smith, Conklin, Marks, Doddridge, St. Clair, Young, and Misses Mack, Stephens, Chase, Nelson, Robbins, Dee, Chaplord, Hansen, and many, many others whom the reporter was unable to recognize. The most prominent gentlemen on the floor during the evening were Conductors Peterson, Allen, Lutz, Metcalf, Wood, Babcock, Page, White, Hubbard, Jeffries, Howell, Lightner, Shields, and Messrs. Carnahan, Marks, St. Clair, Young, Dreyer, Schramm, Mack, Rollins, Boyle and Smith. Guided by the entrancing strains of the orchestra, and rapidly changing from the mazy waltz to the airy polka, and tripping from the whirling schottische to the fascinating mazourka, the dancing continued until the hour of midnight approached, when an adjournment was taken to the dining room below, where a banquet of unusual excellence was spread. After supper had been disposed of, the merry crowd returned once more to the hall, dedicated to Terpsichore and danced without cessation till 4 a. m., when the weary but happy participators wended their way home, and as the musical rhythm of their voices floated back on the crispy night air, it seemed to say "Success and prosperity to the Order of Railroad Conductors." VIVIAN.

They are Not All Dead.

The following letter dated Salt Lake was recently received by a young gentleman at Provo. It is written in a fair hand, and evidently by someone with more ardor than sense:

Mr. ——: You will no doubt be very much surprised to receive this letter from a total stranger. Be surprised if you will, but look upon it favorably as coming from one, whose only wish is to know you, and, knowing you to be a friend. Need I say more? I have betrayed my passion and confessed my weakness, (the fault of my sex.) I will confess no more. While visiting friends in Provo, I saw you several times, but unfortunately, it was not my good fortune to meet you. Fate deemed it otherwise, and perhaps for the time it was best, for she w aves her charms in a mysterious way, and we are obliged to bow in submission to her sway, so like all mankind, I am forced to abide by her decrees. To many, she is merciful, and cruel to multitudes. All I ask is that to me, she will be in this case—merciful. Will you aid her? I have now returned to my home in S. L. and have taken the unpardonable (?) liberty of addressing you, and sincerely hoping that you will not consider it a breach of etiquette, but will give this letter due consideration until you see the writer, which I hope will not be long. In the meantime, I will look eagerly forward for an answer. Will you answer — or am I to be denied the greatest boon I crave, that of knowing you? and now I say farewell until I receive an answer. Address —— In my next letter my name will be revealed, I promise you this solemnly.

Wonder if she is a relation of Pearl's?

The Opera House Masquerade.

Among the many successful masquerades given in this city, the one occurring at the Opera House on Tuesday evening last is entitled to distinction. It was a pleasant and sociable affair, and the general order and good will were remarkable. The costumes were among the best ever seen at a similar gathering. Prizes were awarded as follows:

Ladies first prize—Miss Annie Miller, whose "Jockey" was admirable. Second prize—Miss Carrie Saville, who appeared as Belva Lockwood's Body Guard. Gents' first prize was awarded to Mr. W. R. Stratford, as Imperial Prince. Second prize—Mr. Hebar De Longville for his Prince of Normandy. Among the other more noticeable characters on the floor were those of "Before and after Marriage," "Snow" and others who were so successful in their disguise that their names could not be learned. "Jumbo" and the "Skidmore Guards" came in for a large share of appreciation. The ball was ably managed by the committee, Messrs. Frank May, T. K. Little, Geo. Yeadon, J. H. Hoagland and A. G. Bechtol, while Mr. May eclipsed himself as floor manager. There is talk of another bal masque to be given very shortly under the same management.

Western Star Ball.

The ball given by the Western Star Council Uniform Select Temples, T. of H., on Wednesday evening in Sheldon's Hall freely sustained our prediction in last Sunday's HERALD. A good attendance of the members of the order and their friends were present, and the festivities lasted until a late (or early) hour. The different committees are entitled to great credit for the success of the entertainment.

Mr. and Mrs. Dr. Benedict received a few friends last evening; whist was the only point discussed.

There is romance even in fashionable life, for in Philadelphia recently the officiating clergyman at a wedding had at one time been engaged to the bride. For the bridegroom, it was a genuine case of dense ignorance and perfect bliss.

"That would be very natural, my dear," he replied.

The Latest Wrinkle in Spain.

It is said that the latest wrinkle in Spain is to have women bull-fighters, instead of men. It must be a noble sight to see one of those dark-eyed females in the ring facing a mad bull, but how different would be the scene if one of our American girls should attempt it. The sight would bring tears to eyes that never wept before. If any one has ever seen an American girl climb a rail fence at the sight of a cow in an adjoining field they can form no idea of what she would if brought face to face with a mad bull. No wall would be too high for her to climb, and you can gamble on it that she wouldn't let any grass grow under her feet while going into the next county. Of course, there are some girls, like Lulu Hurst, for instance, who would take a bull by the tail and toss him over the fence, but the majority of them would want to go home to their ma.—Peck's Sun.
