CASE OF MAJOR GILLETTE

Queer Point Raised as to Right of Army Man to Resign.

Washington, March 1.—A peculiar situation has arisen in the army as to the case of Major Cassius Gillette, United States engineer, who is now superintendent of the Philadelphia filtration plant. According to the press dispatches, Major Gillette, who has for some months been acting in the capacity of an expert assisting in straightening out the affairs of the filtration office, yesterday accepted the office as superintendent of the filtration bureau.

Up to that moment there was no question about his status as he was simply an army officer employed by the city of Philadelphia under detail from the war department, but when he accepted office yesterday and took the oath as a civil officer he raised the point as to whether or not he had brought himself within the provisions of section 1222, revised statutes, which in substance cancels the commission of an army officer on the active list who accepts a civil office.

Today the officer's resignation was received at the war department. The questions, whether an officer can resign an office which he has ceased to hold, or whether such a resignation can be accepted, or to be determined by the president, for he alone is authorized to accept a resignation of this kind. Secretary Taft will take it up with him tomorrow.
