

that the company would have to take care of something like $144,000 that the Western Securities company is asking to recover in the courts from the Western Agency company, which is practically controlled by Tyree. This amount, Dr. Mayo said, represents the money collected under the contract with the latter company. In addition to this amount, Dr. Mayo also says there is something like $45,000 to be taken care of, that the insurance company advanced the present year to make up a deficiency so as to make a proper report to the insurance commissioner. Tyree professes to know nothing about these amounts talked of by Dr. Mayo, but he declared that a surplus would be raised to handle any emergency that may have arisen in connection with the tangle.

Wylie Explains System.

Secretary Wylie, however, explained the working of the scheme under which the parent company has been operating. He said that the company found that it could not handle its business independently, so it became necessary to form a trinity of companies to keep the business afloat. Therefore the Western Agency company was organized, which was given a twenty-five-year contract to handle all of the business of writing insurance. The agency company then entered into a contract with the parent company, whereby the parent company was to sell all of the stock of the securities company. When an insurance policy in the Continental Life Insurance & Investment company was sold to a person, four shares of Western Securities company stock were given him for every $1,000 worth of insurance he purchased. This stock has a par value of $10 and the policy holder is guaranteed an annual dividend of 7 per cent. This is given him as an inducement to take out his policy. Under its contract with the securities company, the agency company agrees to pay the securities company 3 per cent to the good, which is declared was to be handled for the benefit of the policy holder. The 10 per cent continues during the life of each policy.

The parent company contracted to pay the agency company what is known as the "expense loading" of the company, which, Mr. Wylie says, is a percentage on all the business written, and ranges from 5 to 10 per cent, according to the kind of policy taken out. Here is where the suspicion arose that all was not right in the peculiar business arrangements of the parent company. The men who control the Continental Life Insurance & Investment company also control the Western Securities company, but do not control the Western Agency company. Tyree owns the majority of the stock of this company.

Defends Agency Company.

The statement has been made that the agency company, by paying the Western Securities company 10 per cent per annum on all of the insurance premiums taken in it simply originated a scheme by which it made 10 per cent for its own benefit. Mr. Wylie, however, says he does not believe this. He says that the agency company realizes such a handsome income, but that it would make practically nothing on the deal; that the agency company was created simply as a means to an end, which was to get business for the company. However, that may be, some persons do not believe this to be true and were uncharitable enough to think Tyree, who was the father of the insurance company, had simply built up a fine machine for himself that would shell out dollars into his coffers in large heaps after he got his mechanism to going nicely. Be that as it may, the company is now striving to straighten matters out and put itself right with the public. Just what scheme will eventually be carried out remains to be seen.

Mayo says the company will have to stand upon its own bottom without the assistance of a trinity or any other number of other companies. On the other hand, Secretary Wylie says the scheme as originated was a good one for the reason that the report of the Armstrong committee which inquired into the affairs of the big insurance companies in New York shows that insurance companies pay a percentage of 25 per cent—an expense that no business organization can legitimately pay.

The following resolution was adopted last night by the directors:

"Resolved, That the board of directors hereby exonerates former President Tyree and Secretary Wylie from all intentional wrong in the preparation and filing of the statement of this company in January, 1906, which is claimed to be inaccurate and upon which criminal charges were preferred against them."

APOSTLES ARE IN OPEN REBELLION

dents of stakes and the ward bishops, he said, were always practical men, and it was their duty to counsel the Saints temporally, and the duty of the Saints to heed such counsel to the end that the people might prosper. Mr. Clawson said it was difficult to find the dividing line between temporal and spiritual things, and that he doubted if there is a dividing line.

Apostle Clawson counselled the Saints particularly to keep out of debt, and to do business on cash basis. He cited the Z. C. M. I. and the sugar industry as two institutions which had been built up as a result of the church's exercise of its right to counsel its members in temporal things, and quoted statistics to show the success of these two institutions.

Elder Jesse N. Smith pronounced a benediction after the choir had sung "We Thank Thee, O God, for a Prophet."

Missionaries Do the Talking.

At the afternoon session the talking was all done by presidents of missions. The music at this session was furnished by the children of the Pioneer stake singing classes. Frank C. Parkinson of Hyrum stake offered prayer.

Nephi Pratt, president of the northwestern states' mission, was the first speaker. That missionary field includes Oregon, Washington, northern Idaho, Montana and British Columbia. In the past three years, Elder Pratt declared, a gospel had been preached to two and a half million souls. At first, he said, the people had shown great indifference, and at times the elders felt that they had warned them enough, and were inclined to shake the dust of the northwest from their feet. Of late, however, he declared there had been a considerable revival, with the result that the church numbers now between 700 and 800 members in that section.

Elder Pratt charged ministers of other denominations in Vancouver, B. C., with attempting to hamper the work of the elders, but said that in other portions of the northwest the people were friendly, as was the press. Joseph E. Robinson, president of the California mission, told of the work in his field, and found especial cause for congratulation in the fact that the California Mormons are conscientious tithe-payers. He said there was a general feeling of friendliness on the part of the public toward the Mormons, and related several instances showing this feeling, particularly one wherein Governor George C. Purdee of California spoke highly of Apostle John Henry Smith. He referred to the fact that some of the early settlers of San Bernardino will soon visit Utah as guests of Senator William A. Clark.

Build Meeting House in Nauvoo.

German E. Ellsworth, president of the Central states mission, told how a Mormon Sunday school had been established in Nauvoo, Ill., whence Joseph the prophet was taken to the Carthage jail, where he was assassinated. The people of Nauvoo, he said, were anxious to welcome the Mormons back. One prominent man in the town told him, he said, that the country around Nauvoo had been cursed ever since the Mormons were driven out.

Citizens of the town, he said, had rented a hall for a year for the Mormon Sunday school. This hall stands on the site of the residence which President John Taylor occupied before the exodus to the Rocky mountains.

A year ago, Mr. Ellsworth said, two Mormon elders had been expelled from Zion City by order of John Alexander Dowie. Now, however, labors of the elders among the Dowies look favorable, and many conversions are expected.

After the children had sung "One Hundred Years," J. C. Duffin, president of the central states mission, told of his labors. He reported how a Mormon elder was recently whipped at night by an Arkansas mob, and of the promises made by Governor Jefferson Davis of Arkansas and the judge of the district where the outrage occurred that efforts would be made to ferret out and prosecute those responsible for it. Mr. Duffin urged that German elders be sent out to labor among people of their nationality.

Rich Tolls of Troubles.

Ben E. Rich, president of the southern states mission, and believed by some to be slated for apostolic honors, was the last speaker of the day. His field, he said, contains 10,000 members of the church, and embraces the states of Ohio, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee and Kentucky. Mr. Rich said that during the years he has had charge of this field, 1,400 elders have worked under him.

Mr. Rich related a story of trouble which the church is having on Harker's island in one of the North Carolina sounds. The elders built a fine meeting house on the island, he said, and the "enemy" burned it down. Then they tried holding meetings in houses, and the owners of the houses were warned by anonymous letters that if they continued to open their doors to the Mormons, their houses would go the way of the meeting house. Then they tried open air meetings, with the result that the mob now threatens to burn the houses of those who attend the meetings.

Roast for the Governor.

"I wrote to the governor of North Carolina and demanded from him the protection which the United States guarantees its citizens," declared Mr. Rich. "The governor replied that the people of North Carolina didn't like our religion, but that he would see if something couldn't be done. I replied and told him that the people of my section didn't like his religion, but that we believed in freedom of conscience. I told him further that 1,400 of the people of North Carolina do like our religion and belong to our church." Mr. Rich protested over a disposition of the high priests to keep members of the quorum of seventies away from the mission fields on the plea that they are needed at home. The place for the seventies, he declared, was on mission fields.

sions, and the high priests were supposed to labor at home.

He Exhorts Obedience.

Mr. Rich concluded with an earnest exhortation to the Saints to obey and refrain from criticizing the authorities of the church. God himself, he said, honored his prophets on the earth. "Let us take the beam out of our own eye before we try to remove the mote from your neighbor's eye. You remember Brigham Young's cry: 'You must mind your own business.' When you feel like criticizing the authorities of the church first take a look at yourself in the mirror."

Secret Priesthood Meeting.

The general priesthood meeting of the church was held in secret at the tabernacle last night at 7 o'clock. The gates of the tabernacle grounds were closed at 7:15. Anybody who arrived after that hour was unable to enter the meeting.

There was a religion class held in the tabernacle after the regular session of the conference adjourned, and a meeting of primary workers at the same hour in the assembly hall. Last evening there was a reunion of workers in the Norwegian mission field. It was held in the Fourteenth ward meeting house.

UTAH WILL BE REPRESENTED

State Federation of Woman's Clubs Decides to Display State Products.

The board of directors of the State Federation of Women's clubs met yesterday morning and took definite action in regard to the proposed display of Utah products at the next biennial in St. Paul. The request to make two exhibits, one characteristic of woman's industry in the state and one of the pure food manufactured here, which was received recently, was acted upon, and it was decided to make the first-named a four-fold exhibit of salt, sugar, silk and possibly honey. These were thought to be characteristic of the state industries and at the same time were thought to be more readily prepared than any other exhibits. The silk industry, which is the one typical woman's industry of the state, is not in a flourishing condition, but the directors have no fear but that they will be able to make a sufficient display to be typical of the state.

The pure food exhibit will be secured from the manufacturers through the M. & M. A. the auxiliary board of which will work with the federation. Those in attendance at the meeting yesterday were Mrs. C. S. Kinney, Mrs. E. H. Bonnell, Mrs. Gould B. Blakely, Miss Margaret Kennell, Mrs. A. Hammer of Ogden, Mrs. W. B. Seale of Provo, Mrs. A. J. Knoll of Springville, Mrs. Charles Wells and Mrs. C. H. McMahon.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, be careful what you use. It is used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten-fold to the good they may derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by E. J. Hart Schaffner & Marx Makers of Fine Clothes for Men

Chicago, March 30, 1906.

Messrs. Richardson & Adams,
Salt Lake City, Utah.

Dear Sirs:

You will very soon have a call from our Mr. C. R. Paul who will come to show you the Hart Schaffner & Marx line.

When you see the goods you will agree with us that such a line has never before been offered to you, even by us. The models are correct; our reputation as style leaders was never greater than now. The fabrics are our own exclusive patterns, absolutely all-wool, and hand-tailored.

We have no use for the mercerized manipulations and cotton mixtures with which the market is flooded—"Frenzied Fabrics," one of our customers calls them. We are building up the high quality standard in clothing, not pulling it down with the mercerized cotton fraud.

We offer you in our line, an opportunity to build up your business in the same way. You will hear from Mr. Paul himself a little later.

Yours very truly,

Hart Schaffner & Marx

The letter above refers to the Hart Schaffner & Marx line for fall and winter, but it might be equally applied to this spring's suits. Mr. Adams started 16 years ago to sell H. S. & M. clothing and in all the time since has never found the makers of that clothing anywhere but on the side of good goods, good fit and just prices.

The H. S. & M. clothes stand today without a peer in the ready made clothing line, and this "Good Clothes Shop" backs them with its whole reputation.
