During its progress, one of the most thrilling plays ever pulled off on any diamond was seen, a play that would be a credit to a Home Run Haggerty yarn, a play which would tax one's imagination and a play which one would have to see to believe could be accomplished.

As a result, two men were knocked unconscious, both had to be carried off the field, ene was taken home in a hack badly shaken up and a triple play instead of a double would have resulted had the team in the field needed three put-outs to retire the side.

Collision of Outfielders.

Harry James, the left fielder, and Eddle Hahn, the middle fielder, for the Salt Lake Hahn, the middle fielder, for the Salt Lake team, were the injured players and James was much the worse hurt of the two. After a thorough drenching and a rest Hahn was in condition to continue the game, while James was taken home. It happened in the tweifth inning when, with one out, Johnson reached first on a hit and stole second. Wall, the next man up for Eureka went to first on Hall's muff of a pop up, making a man on first and second with one out. Northrop hit a long, high fly to the outfield between left and middle and both Hahn and James made for the ball.

Coing at Full Speed

Going at Full Speed.

As both reached for it, runing at full speed, they collided, James stabbing the ball with one hand. Both went down, Hahn lying like a dead man, while James barely raised himself from the ground and tossed the ball to Beck, who ran toward the play and was not far from the men when they crashed. As the ball left James' hand he reeled and fell across Hahn, and both lay like dead men.

Beck's first thought was what to do with the ball and seeing Johnson had started for home, thinking the ball had been missed, he ran toward second in the been missed, he ran toward second in the excitement of the moment and touched the bag, making a double. Wall had also run from first down to second and Beck touched him, which would have completed a triple had another output been necessarily.

Carried Off the Field.

By this time the crowd had broken out of the stands and with the players went to help Hahn and James. Both were carried in, completely knocked out. Hahn recovered the more quickly of the two.

It was some time before it dawned upon the crowd what had taken place, but when it was all over Umpire Dutch retired the side. Eureka disputed the play, admitting that James had held the ball, but that Johnson had not left second base until after the ball had been caught. Dutch ruled that he had. The remarkable part of the play was the part played by James, who although knocked out, had enough baseball instinct left to raise himself and throw the ball before becoming unconscious.

Sensational Pitching.

Sensational Pitching.

Another sensational bit of work was that of Jensen, pitching for Salt Lake. Hall started the twiring and was doing excellent work until the eighth inning, when Seare was forced to retire from behind the bat as a result of a broken finger. With no change catcher Hall was called in from the box and Jensen was sent out to relieve him. Without a chance to warm up, Jensen jumped into his work and struck out eight of the first nine men who faced him.

Still another feature of the game was the remarkable hitting of Bert Margetts. The Salt Lake first basemen faced Pitcher Rush just six times and got away with six clean hits, one of which was a two-bagger. Rush allowed but fifteen hits in the fourteen innings and Bert captured six of these.

men, Hall and Jensen striking out fif-teen between them.

A two-bagger by Northrop brought in two runs in the fourteenth inning, and this hit bordered on the sensational. Pa-trons of the game have often noticed The Herald score board in the left field near the foul line. The board is high and tow-ers four or five feet above the fence. Northrop's hit struck the top of the score board and but for this would have cleared the fence, giving Eureka a four-teen inning contest with a home run.

Park City, June 17.—Dad Gimlins brought his bunch of ball players to this city today and took the miners into camp to a tune of 14 to 8. It was one of those kind of games that tends to disgust the fans and make the national game a very poor paying sport, as the members of both teams played more like a bunch of beginners than semi-professionals. Zimmerman was on the slab for Park City and pitched a fairly good game, considering the support his team-mates gave him. Hopkins started to deliver the shoots for the Lobsters, but in the third inning, after five runs had been made by the miners, was taken out and Blexrud finished the game. The weather was very disagreeable, it being cold enough for winter climate. The attendance was, therefore, unsually small. races were pulled off without a hitch.
