BOOTLEGGERS BUSY AT PARK CITY, UTAH

Judging by the following random references which appeared in the last issue of the Park City Record, under the caption "Stroller Notices," they are not free from the nefarious traffic of the insidious "bootlegger" in that neck-o'-the-woods. It is, however, good to note that almost universally of law and order, and this in time is certain to have a profound effect upon moral conditions, and particularly the enforcement of the prohibition laws:

That at soda fountains in Salt Lake placards read: "Plain Drinks only five cents."

That similar signs should make their appearance at our local fountains.

That water costs no more here than in the metropolis and the rents are not near as high.

That ALL who "booze up" should pay the penalty.

That those who peddle the "kick water" should be apprehended and given the limit.

That home-made "brew" caused more than one "stew" at a well-known Park City hostelry last Sunday.

That a manager, a superintendent, and an equestrian were soaked good and plenty.

That as it is you must guess who they are.

That if they had got what was coming to them their names would have been on the police blotter.

That no one need take offense unless the shoe fits.

That they can then take another drink and forget it.

That many an automobile is purchased from the revenue of "bootlegging."

That Park City has its "lucky" ones in this respect.

That from those who know the information is given that there is more bootlegging being done in Park City than at any time since the state went dry.

That it can also be truthfully said there are fewer arrests and less efforts on the part of the officers to apprehend the unlawful liquor traffickers than ever before.

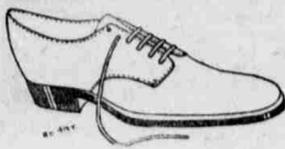

That some officials forget that it is their duty to enforce the law.
