FOREIGNERS COMING TO AMERICA.

Discussing the immigration problem, F. J. Haskin urges the necessity of strict regulation and makes the following observations:

The whole make-up of the immigration stream has been radically altered. As is generally well known, American immigration was made up for many years of Englishmen, Welshmen, Irishmen, Germans and Scandinavians. These immigrants made up the America which was until 1890. Then the south Italians and the east Europeans began pouring in, while the influx of north and west European races

Now all is changed. With the growth of Japanese, negro and Mexican immigration as new factors, the east and south European immigration has greatly declined. The proportion of south Italians, for example, was only about a tenth in 1919 what it was in 1913, and the proportion of Hebrew, Magyar, Russian, Slovak, Rumanian, Syrian and Turkish immigrants has also declined enormously. At the same time, the proportion of Englishmen. Scotchmen and Frenchmen who came to this country in 1919 cach increased about four times what it was in 1913.

This is the encouraging feature of the immigration outlook-that Frenchmen and Englishmen are seeking the home of their late allies in ever-increasing numbers.

Of course, the character of post-war immigration is still in the making. The influx of aliens is much greater today than it was in 1919, threatening to reach prewar proportions. Also it is different to some extent in character. Thus the recent Polish debacle is said to have sent a horde of Poles in this direction, while in 1919 comparatively few of them arrived. But the important fact is that the character of immigration has radically altered. The old immigration problem has become a new one. Intelligent legislation on the subject should be based on a complete new survey of the

A new immigration bill is undoubtedly to be a part of the work of congress. The house committee on immigration has been holding hearings out on the Pacific coast and also in Washington. Various bills have been drafted, and one of them by Johnson of California, the chairman of the committee, will doubtless form the basis of legislation which authority on fiscal matters. There is talk of former Senator Sutherland entering the cabinet or being placed on the supreme bench.

Former Governor William Spry has been mentioned prominently as the next secretary of the interior, or commissioner of the general land officie.

It is even probable that Senator Sutherland will be named atterney general.

With all these rumors, it begins to look as though Utah is to receive at least one very high position and perhaps a number of bigappointments.

Utah would be highly honored if given a place in the cabinet. However, Utah looms large in the political field and seems destined to be better cared for than any other western state.

A PLACE OF HEALTH.

With a very low infant mortality in Ogden and Salt Lake, and Utah in general, the favorable health conditions in this state are beginning to receive wide comment. Recently, in the Chicago Tribune, Dr. W. A. Evans said Utah stands at the top of the list of states in birth rate and, what is most unusual where birth rates are high, the birth rate and, what is most unusual where birth rates and been death rate and the lowest death rate and the lowest death rate and the lowest of the largest number of votes at the close of the largest number of vote Dr. W. A. Evans said Utah stands at the top of the list of states in birth rate and, what is most unusual where birth rates are high, the state has a low infant mortality, in fact the lowest death rate and the least sickness among babies. In 1917 Utah had a death rate of 10.2 as compared with 14.2 for the country at large.

Dr. Evans then declares the birth rate in Utah in 1917 was 30.3.

"Duchesne county had a birth rate of 52 8, twice that of the country at large; Garfield 51.5, Piute 51.5, and Washington 45.
