RED CROSS.

The following personification of the Red Cross is timely as the drive for funds is on in Ogden today:

I am the Red Cross of Peace; a the outgrowth of war's travail; a reawakening to the interests of a nation. Consecrated to the needs of humanity and inspired by the love of man for his fellow, I go forth to help the unfortunate, to make strong the weak, to teach the gospel of clean living and well. being. I give aid to the needy and help them lift themselves up out of adversity. I welcome into my house those who are heavy laden. and give them rest. I lave the wounds to men's souls. I am a refuge from fire, and flood, and pestilence; a sheet anchor ugainst the tempest of calamity. The love of little children is mine, that they may grow to the full fruit of manhood and womanhood. My interest is in the welfare of the community. I ease the way of the cripple. I am compassionate of the aged. My exultation is in the strength of mankind. I teach. I lead. I serve. I am the Greatest Mother, broading over the sons and daughters of men, that they may go forward, strong and well and happy to the upbuilding of the nation. I am the Red Cross of

ARMISTICE DAY PLEDGE

By F. W. GALBRAITH, JR. National Commander, American Legion.

TWO YEARS AGO TODAY.

At midnight the whistles and bells announced the third anniversary of the day of days, when the most herrible of all wars ended.

Two years ago today, the people of Ogden were too excited to stay at the property of the property of the present century in American affairs. Victories such as Armietice day examinements are not the fissues solely of classes of flesh and steel. They have a finer quality than that. They are triumphs as well, of all unconquerable spirit.

blood had stopped.

At the time, this paper said that perhaps Ogden never would witness an occasion of such extreme emotion. Men were parading, women shouting and children screaming in shrill voices. Washington avenue was a sea of hu manity from early morning until well into the night.

Suddenly there had come the news that brought relaxation from a tense strain which was gripping everybody, and, with the quick let down, there
