WHAT OF OTHER WORLDS?

Are other planets inhabited? That question is an old one, but it remains unanswered. A French astronomer, Abbe Moreux, has written a book on the subject, which has brought the following comment from C. de Kirwan:

"What we call the sun is really, as we know, but a modest unit among the millions and millions of other suns which we call 'stars' because of their immeasurable distance. Now, if each of these is attended, as ours is, by eight or nine planets, as is the case with the former suns Jupiter and Saturn, the field of possible life is immense, one might almost say infinite. Even if we admit only a single planet to each star as the seat of possible life, this field would still be almost unlimited, since the total number of stars is estimated at several hundred millions. It can scarcely be asserted that, among such a prodigious number of suns, our own is the only one privileged to gather life about it.

"However, before founding conjectures on assumptions or analogies, we should look for light to the facts. Now, it has been shown by recent discoveries, extended in unexpected degrees by spectroscopy and photography, that the stellar systems are generally very different from that of which our planet forms a part; so much so that it is rather the exception than the rule for a sun to keep within its sphere of action several small, dark bodies, revolving in almost circular orbits.

"A very large number of stars which, to the naked eye or even with the aid of powerful telescopes, appear simple have been discovered to be double—by spectroscopic observation. In these binary systems the two members of the couple revolve, according to Newton's law, around their common center of gravity, but in a remarkable circumstance that the satellite star always describes about its principal one a nearly circular orbit, but a very elongated ellipse, like that of our comets. And orbits of this kind are traversed not in one year, like that of our earth, but in a century, or sometimes in several centuries.

"It would appear more and more probable that the far greater part of the stars that we have hitherto thought to be simple are really double, which seems to exclude the possibility of retinues of burned-out stars circulating around these couples. Supporting the satellite star to become dark in course of time, the great eccentricity of its orbit and the extreme length of its revolution are still obstacles to the development of life on its chilled and solidified surface.

"We must thus recognize that the more astronomical science progresses—the greater its acquired knowledge of what is taking place in heaven's immensity—the smaller become the chances of seeing physiologic life extended therein.

"Is this to say that we must absolutely refuse to admit the possibility of other habitable globes than ours in the universe? Assuredly not. It is the late Hervey Taze says, in his fine book on 'The Origin of the World,' 'It would be puerile to pretend that there could be only one inhabited globe in the universe, it would be just as untenable to assert that all these worlds are or should be inhabited.'

"Science, however, is powerless to tell us anything in this connection. To reason about it, we must leave its proper domain and enter that of philosophy, and of that part of philosophy named by Leibnitz 'theodicy,' which is nothing else but natural theology."

ANOTHER ROAD TO BUILD INTO OGDEN

A stranger entered a local real estate office a day last week and gave an order for the purchase of property on Twenty-fifth street. A real estate dealer is as inquisitive as a newspaper man, and this particular fellow lived up to the reputation of his kind by asking questions, and the replies that he got were in substance: "I am a railroad employe from the north. A new road is to build into Ogden and I am taking advantage of my information by buying property here before the news gains general circulation. One of your prominent business men will give you further particulars, if you can persuade him to talk on the subject."

Now there may not be much foundation for the visitor's confidence in the coming of another railroad, but that the stranger was firmly convinced a new road is headed this way was made evident by his desire to invest in local real estate. An Ogdenite received a letter from Omaha yesterday, stating that the Burlington planned 150 miles of construction west from Caspar toward Ogden and work is to be started this season.

Lately a number of real estate deals have been made in the railroad and warehouse district, bordering on Wall avenue, that, rumor says, are for railroad interests, either Oregon Short Line or some other road, perhaps the Burlington.

All these reports tend to prove that Ogden is about to enjoy the benefits of new railroad work. The financial conditions east may delay the activity, but eventually it is almost certain there will be heard the whistle or the electric gong of one or more roads that now have no entrance into this city.

LET US SALUTE THE FLAG

This is the 136th anniversary of the adoption of the Stars and Stripes as the flag of our country.

Congress on June 14, 1777, declared "that the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

On April 4, 1818, congress changed the flag arrangement by enacting "that from and after the fourth day of July next, the flag of the United States be thirteen horizontal stripes alternate red and white; that the union be twenty stars, white, in a blue field, and that on the admission of a new state into the union, one star be added to the union of the flag, and such addition take effect on the fourth day of July next, succeeding such admission."

The flag this Fourth of July will be 48 stars in the field of blue, and it promises to remain unchanged for years to come, as the last of our territories, with the exception of Alaska, has been admitted as a state and has gained recognition as a star on Old Glory.

This evening the Elks of Ogden are to observe "Flag Day" with patriotic services. All true Americans should attend and join in the tribute.

The flag is the emblem of justice as defined by the constitution of the United States. It stands for the equality of men and for human rights. To those principles we all can subscribe. The flag has been abused more than once, but that was the fault of men who failed to be inspired by all that the flag stands for.

No well meaning person, of whatever nativity, will decline to salute the Stars and Stripes, knowing the history of that flag and the full meaning of that symbol of liberty.

We should teach our children to love Old Glory as an emblem of purity, of right, of mercy. The higher our conception of what the Stars and Stripes signify, the grander shall be the history of our country as those ideals are written in deeds.

As a boy, with each returning Fourth of July, when the flag was unfurled, we wondered if the flags of other countries appeared so beautiful to the boys in foreign lands as Old Glory did to us. That was a boy's natural love of and pride in native land, intensified by reading a history of his country's mighty triumphs for humanity. Keeping before us the declaration of independence, in which it is set forth that all men are created equal and bearing in mind the salient features of the constitution—the fundamental law of the land—we all can salute the flag, without mental reservation, as the most lovable emblem of all nations.

OUR COMIC SECTION Beginning with today's issue, the Standard discontinues the Saturday colored comic supplement. The colored supplements were printed in New York and shipped by express or fast freight and were expensive as well as inconvenient to handle. The Standard has decided to take the money spent for the colored ink supplement and put it in to an extra page or two for the daily issue. Hereafter the daily Standard will consist of ten pages more often than eight pages and some times twelve pages, while on Saturday the daily Standard always will contain sixteen pages instead of twelve, fourteen and some times sixteen pages, as in the past. One page on Saturdays, however, will have two comic subjects in black and white.

We have arranged for Kid Trubble and Yeneveve Olson, "the best Swede dialect comic in the world, to start with us in July, and 'Jimmie the Messenger Boy' is with us today and is promised regularly each Saturday. These two comic subjects are having the run in the nation now, and if the children will watch for "Jimmie the Messenger Boy" and the older people will take to "Yeneveve Olson" both will find something very interesting.

"Snoodles" and "Scoop" too promise to remain with us for some time. Hence, there will be plenty of humor for all.

FLAG DAY WILL BE OBSERVED BY ELKS

Appropriate decorations, consisting of large flags draped upon the walls and smaller flags suspended from various points, have been placed in the beautiful lodge room of the Elks' home in preparation of the Flag day exercises to be held there at 8 o'clock this evening.

By an enactment of the grand lodge the B. P. O. E. in all cities observes the anniversary of the birth of the United States flag with appropriate exercises in which the public is cordially invited to participate. The lodge is strictly a national organization and patriotism to the flag is one of the features of the order.

The seating arrangement in the lodge room is capable of caring for nearly 1,000 people. It is expected that the audience this evening will fill the entire seating space.

Attractive programs have been printed which may be retained as souvenirs of the occasion, which is the 136th anniversary of the adoption of the Continental congress of the flag made by Betsy Ross.

The program of the evening is as follows: Selection—"The Star Spangled Banner," Mrs. Mary V. White. Introductory Exercises—Exalted ruler and other officers. Prayer—Chaplain.

CARRIERS ARE TO HAVE A BIG TIME

Through the invitation of Manager Foote of the Foote-Cloninger Stock company, which is playing at the Ogden theater, 30 members of the Standard force of newspaper carriers will be guests of the company at the production of "Dad's Darling" this evening.

There was a big excitement in carrier circles when the announcement was made and every carrier declared that the bicycle would be pumped fast and the pony would be urged to great speed on the evening rounds in order that there be plenty of leeway between business hours and the time of the performance.

Arrangements have been made by the company to seat the boys in a body so that additional pleasure may be secured from the performance.

With the production of "Carmen" tomorrow evening the successful engagement of the Foote-Cloninger company comes to a close. During the time the players have been here they have been favorably received by Ogden audiences. Another engagement will probably be played when the weather is cooler and more favorable to indoor productions.

GRASS OF THE FIELD, A SERMON

A series of Sunday morning sermons upon the commonest of the natural outdoor beauties of nature will be commenced tomorrow morning in the First Presbyterian church. Sunday morning's theme being "The Grass of the Fields."

The Sunday evening sermon for the next few Sundays will be upon the four cardinal trends of Christian life and happiness.

Mrs. Myrtle Ballinger-Higley will render the solos at these services.

I AM FOR UTAH

This should be the sincere, never-ending sentiment of every man, woman and child living within this great and glorious state — native-born and Utahns by adoption. It can be made the vitalizing power behind all our civic and commercial growth and prosperity. A state can go only as far as its citizens carry it—and no further. It's industries will multiply, grow and remain just as they are backed by the buying public. Just stop a moment and figure what it would mean if every man, woman and child in Utah would put into practice the full meaning of "I AM FOR UTAH." They would have to go further and say:

I AM FOR UTAH PRODUCTS.

Because Utah products are first class in every respect. They are honestly made, honestly branded, honestly priced—and are never excelled in quality.

Because every dollar I spend for Utah Made Goods remains in Utah—helps to furnish employment to thousands of our citizens—and I have a chance to get some part of every dollar back again.

From a purely selfish standpoint—for the protection of my own interests—it pays me best to buy the goods that are made in my own state.

No matter what I'm going to buy, I first ask "Is it made in Utah." If it is, I BUY IT. It's a good thing to tion of "The Girl of Eagle Ranch" to a fair audience. E. J. Marsh, Lorenzo Ward, George Randall, Elizabeth Berrett, Martha Holmes and Grace Bailey will have charge of the old folks of this place in the annual old folks' outing of Weber county at Lagoon next Friday.

SUPPORT THE STATE THAT SUPPORTS YOU.

Two of our young men have returned from missions in the last week, Edward Berrett, from the state of Kansas, and Heber J. Randall from the state of Massachusetts. Elder Berrett addressed four meetings last Sunday, in a very favorable report of his labors during the 24 months of his absence in the mission field and we may be favored with a similar report from Elder Randall next Sunday. We expect also to have the privilege in the near future of hearing from Elder William Ellis of Pleasant View, but a former resident of this place, who has spent nearly five years in far-off Japan.

Arrangements are already under way for a rousing celebration of the Fourth of July. It will be under the direction of the band and ward choir.

The organization of a baseball team to enter the county league is in the hands of baseball enthusiasts and no doubt will be consummated in the near future.

June 13 at 2:30 p. m. John Richards, an aged member of this community, and 32 years a resident of North Ogden, died at his home in this place of old age and general debility, after a lingering illness of many months.

He was a son of William Richards and Elizabeth Bowers, born at Neath, South Wales, August 24, 1838, married Ann Williams, by whom he had a large family, all dying in youth except Elizabeth Daniels of North Ogden and Mary A. Bradshaw of Evanston, Wyo., who survive him. His wife had preceded him "beyond" July 30, 1901.

He was baptized September 15, 1881 five weeks later embarking at Liverpool for the New World on the ship Wyoming, arriving in North Ogden November 11, 1881, where he has resided practically ever since. He was ordained an elder June 23, 1912, by B. B. Blaylock. Funeral will be held in North Ogden meeting house Monday at 2 p. m.

WRESTLER HAS MONEY TO BET ON HIMSELF

Ernest Kartje, who is training Harbertson, went to Pocatello today, accompanied by the local wrestler. Kartje received a telegram yesterday from the promoters of an athletic carnival to be held there and they made a proposition to him which was accepted, although Kartje did not know when he left here who he was to wrestle.

The two will return to Ogden Monday to finish training for the match with Irslinger.

Since the contest at the Fair grounds on Decoration day, which was witnessed by a number of ladies, the fairer sex are becoming enthusiastic wrestling fans and Manager Goss of the Orpheum has made arrangements to seat several at the match on Thursday.

Irslinger received $125 from England on Wednesday and he has been quietly placing a good portion of the money upon himself.

BANDAGES ARE PLACED ON TREES

Professor W. E. Bassett of the Bassett school for blasterers of this city, has an apple orchard at Clearfield and he is busy just now fighting against the ravages of the codling moth. His trees are from six to ten years old and are bearing heavily.

Mr. Bassett is resorting to the "bandage method" as well as spraying. Spraying is important, but many fruit growers resort to wrapping their trees with burlap.

Mr. Bassett is placing a four-inch piece of guncapack around the trunk of his trees folded at the lower edge, the fold turning in toward the tree.

It is claimed that the moth seeks a cozy place for laying its eggs, as a hen does for nesting, and the folded burlap supplies that place. The insect enters the folds of the burlap and deposits its eggs. Every ten days the cloth is removed and burlap moth eggs and all destroyed by fire.

The first experiment of this kind was by George Clinger, a horticulturist of Provo Bench, who discovered that it was an effectual way to get rid of millions of moth eggs. Each ten days the trees are wrapped during the egg season of the moth, the result being that not nearly so many larvae are deposited in the apple blossoms. The spraying reaches the tops of the trees and kills the small insects that succeed in finding their way to the blossoms. By employing both methods for the destruction of the moth, Mr. Bassett says, the apple can be kept quite free from worms.

GENERAL STRIKE AT MILAN, ITALY

Milan, Italy, June 14.—A general strike of the workmen of all trades was proclaimed here today as a protest against the condemnation to prison of eighteen workmen who were arrested for various offenses during the recent strike at the iron works.

Thus far quiet has prevailed. A party of strikers last night cut the gas pipes in one district.

The strike was called off at noon and most of the men returned to work.
