SERVILITY, SUBJECT OF A SERMON BY REV. CARVER

Speaking upon the "Sins of Today That Crucified the Christ," Rev. Carver spoke briefly last night upon the sin of "Servility" and, said in part: "And Pilate willing to content the people delivered Jesus, when he had scourged him, to be crucified." That is the story of a man not being his own master. Pilate confessed that he did not find the Christ worthy of criminal death and yet he was not a free man to carry out his own convictions. He was bound by tendencies, habits and desires for what he considered the goal of life till he would deliver an innocent man to an awful death. This servility that so characterized him was one of the sins that crucified the Christ. Pilate was one who was supposed to be master and yet he was servile to the clamor of a multitude.

Economists tell us that slavery was a great step in the progress of humanity for it marks the time when the worth of a man was realized as an economic asset and captives that had formerly been killed were kept as slaves. We have long passed that and now we know that slaves are not an economic asset. We demand free men. The same is true of the deeper life. No city or state is blessed when masses are voted as a boss dictates. We demand free men in political life. We also realize the same truth in worth of men as men and before God.

In olden times slaves were made by conquest or capture, by purchase, or by being born in bondage. The same is true today. Men surrender independence because enraptured of some desire or seeming pleasure. Temptation conquers them and they become habit bound. They give up God for lower standards. Again, they sell themselves to factions, society, or trends of life for worldly recompense or they are born in an environment that they never have power or desire to be freed from. The result in all cases is the same. It is the servility that aided in crucifying the Christ.

But why not serve God? The general answer either denies God's power to enable them to do so, or implies a fear that the Lord will be a hard master separating them from all that is desirable.

Servility to self or evil grows so gradually and easily that it is unnoticed. Like the other three trends it creeps our ruin until its very weakness is our guiding factor. No criminal ever became one at one bound. The talent, toll and training, the risk of death. These are powers that could win in lawful means. The case of yielding to a desire to ill gotten reward through surrender to wrong tells the antidote that is needed. It is a desire and faith a goal and conviction of right that will assert the right in no half hearted way.

scientists and philosophers, of whom he spoke in the previous lectures, shown and reviewed the great researches and discoveries they had made. He also told of the bearing these discoveries had on the development of the science of eugenics at the present day.

Among the men whose pictures were shown were, Vesalius, the first man to carefully study the human body, Harvey, who discovered the circulation of the blood, and Fabricius, his teacher. Aristotle, the greatest of the Greek philosophers, and Galena, the first man to study comparative anatomy, were also among the scientists of the early centuries spoken of.

The next lecture will be on the "Mendel Law Governing Heredity."

UTAH PRODUCTS DAY TO BE OBSERVED BY MERCHANTS

On Wednesday next, "Utah Products Day" will be celebrated throughout the state and the merchants are, one and all, preparing to make displays of Utah made goods that will give a splendid idea of the manufacturing resources of the state.

Committees are working hard to make the coming "Utah Products day" the biggest one in the history of the state and they ask the people to co-operate with them by making calls on the merchants for "home-made" goods of every kind. The merchants are also being urged to put these products in plain view of their customers. A list of Utah made products has been printed and every Ogdan merchant will have a copy for every person who is interested enough in Utah to ask for one.

While the merchants are displaying the goods, essays will be written on the subject of "Why Utah products should be used" with a view to adding to the spirit of boosting for the home-manufactured goods.

NO RATTLESNAKES OR TYPHOID FEVER IN TETON COUNTRY

H. B. Maris, wife and infant son, and Mrs. Barbara Kelly are in Ogdan for the winter from Jackson, Wyo., and will reside at 1029 Capital avenue. Mr. Maris is the forest assistant for the Teton National forest, of which Robert E. Miller is supervisor. This forest embraces nearly two million acres, an area more than fifty square miles, and is the largest in the Ogdan district. By the canyons and passes by which travel is possible, Supervisor Miller can not get from one side of his forest to the other with less than one hundred miles' travel.

Teton Celebrities. The Teton forest contains the highest point in this district, the Grand Teton, 13,747 feet altitude, which has perhaps been scaled only once—by the Bishop Spalding party. This can be seen from the mountains along Gray's river, 70 miles south, rising distinctly above intervening ranges, from the northeast corner of Yellowstone park, and from Baldy, beyond Dillon, Mont., 150 miles away.

No rattlesnake or other poisonous reptile has ever been seen in the Teton country, and typhoid fever is unknown.

If at no other time in his life, a stranger may temporarily become a "dude" while sojourning in Jackson's hole, in the heart of the Teton forest; indeed, he can not avoid doing so, for every tourist is here a "dude," every canyon roadhouse is a "dude ranch," and every guide and packer is a "dude wrangler."

The old timers of Jackson's Hole maintain well stocked wood piles, or wood sheds, and when the supply begins to wane, the long-legged frontiersman (citizens of Jackson's Hole are long-legged for convenience), climbs the butte back of the house and heaves over the cliff another winter's supply. This slight exercise can not be done before breakfast, however. The Douglas fir saws splits and burns admirably, and there is enough dead and dry lodgepole for kindling. The other essential for hot breakfast biscuits—good flour—must as yet be brought "over the hill," although wheat is grown abundantly in the upper valley and along the Grosvent.

Nowhere else are elk so numerous and gentle. Spring and fall they gaze coyly at the tourist from over the rim of a butte. In mid-summer all but those not in captivity hike back to the hills, but in the deep snow of winter they are too tame, necessitating the strongest fences to protect the rancher's haystacks from the starving herds. The characteristic pile of elk antlers in nearly every yard, though attractive, is a pathetic reminder.

Balsam Park Beetle.
In his examinations this summer Mr. Maris found that over an area of six or seven thousand acres on Grosvent river, the balsam beetle has been killed in the last three years by a bark beetle. Deputy Supervisor Stewart states that he encountered this beetle on the La Sal in southeastern Utah, in 1910. It was in 1911 that the work of this beetle was first observed on the Teton range.

THE WORLD'S MARKET NEWS

WALL STREET

New York, Dec. 8.—Sentiment in the street was more cheerful today. The change in feeling was attributed chiefly to improved conditions in the money market on Wall Street's estimate of the probable attitude of the Washington administration toward corporations. Emphasis was placed on a statement attributed to the attorney general that enforcement of the anti-trust law would be undertaken, wherever possible, without recourse to the courts.

The strong showing of the banks in Saturday's statement was followed by an easing off of money rates, call funds renewing today at five per cent.

New Haven was weak throughout the morning on its showing of a shrinkage in October net of $83,000. It fell 2 5/8 to within a fraction of its recent low record. Sugar dropped three points to 193, the lowest since 1908. Tobacco shares were bid up vigorously. Bonds were irregular.
