LOVE and MARRIED LIFE by the noted author Idah McGlone Gibson

JOHN'S FRIENDS SEND FLOWERS

There must have been a tiny smile about my plain-drawn mouth when the nurse returned, for, although she said nothing, she knew I was awake, for I heard her preparing medicine for me. As she held the spoon to my lips I opened my eyes and for the first time carefully examined her face. Immediately I was drawn to her, for she looked capable and competent—the sort of person to be depended upon. In answer to my unspoken question she said:

"I will see, Mrs. Gordon, that your physician gives orders that you shall see no one who will in any way annoy you."

"That you," I said gratefully. I relaxed and soon again came blessed sleep.

"I do not know how long it was that I was oblivious to my outward surroundings. In fact, I must have been conscious for more or less time before I was really ready to analyze my thoughts."

"I remember that I had seemed to sense what a pleasure one had in dreamless sleep. And then I thought: 'Why should one have fear of death. It must be just such blissful peace.'"

When one's body becomes weakened its function with its accustomed vigor, death might come as a welcome respite. Even when I heard John's step in the hallway I could not bring myself to the point of really wishing to take up the cares of responsibilities of everyday life again.

John's grasp of the knob or the door was like him. By its very sureness I could tell of what he was thinking. He had regained his spirits, as he had come to the conclusion that I would live. Even the nurse's admonishing finger and her sibilant warning failed to have its desired effect.

John slammed the door in his usual unthinking fashion, but I loved him for it.

"Is she asleep?" he asked in tones that were meant to be soft, but I was loud enough to wake me had I been asleep.

"No," I answered, "she is not asleep."

John came forward swiftly and then caught sight and smell of my violets.

"There," he said, irritably, "I intend ed to bring you some flowers and I forgot it. It's just as well, however, as I see someone has dolled your room extravagantly for you."

Armed Full of Flowers

"Alice came in with her arms full of them," I explained. "She said that when she was buying flowers Karl Shepard insisted upon adding his quota."

A queer shade shut down over John's face. It was as though he adjusted a mask.

"Yes," he said, "I heard that Karl had made a lot of money on a flyer he took in stocks the other day, and he probably has expended a good share of it on you. English violets are about the most expensive flower in the market just at present. I know they were your favorite flowers, but it seemed to me foolish to buy them this morning when I priced them."

"So John did not forget to buy me flowers!" I said to myself, but he decided that they were too expensive for a convalescing wife.

"I don't see how you can stand this odor! It is overpowering!" he said after a moment. "Haden't you better tell the nurse to take them all but one bunch, into the charity wards. It seems rather selfish of you, doesn't it, dear, to keep them all for your self?"

"Perhaps so," I answered perversely, "but it gave me a great deal of pleasure today to know that Alice and Karl had been foolishly extravagant in their regard for me. Neither of them stopped to ask the price of my favorite flower."

John Shows Displeasure

John opened his mouth and then his lips tightened. I was fully aware that had I not been quite so ill he would have said something ugly to me.

Instead, however, he remarked: "I will see you again this evening, Katharine. You look much better than you did when I was here before. I rather like you in those short curls, although I never before had cared for a short-haired woman or a long-haired man."

"I am glad you rather like me, anyway," I whispered shyly.

"Dear girl," was his comment, and I knew that in his usual brusque manner he had dismissed any unwelcome thought of Karl Shepard's violets, or his own parsimony in the matter of buying flowers for my sick room.

Dorothy Dix Talks

THE OTHER FELLOW'S JOB

By DOROTHY DIX, the World's Highest Paid Woman Writer

The chief reason why there is so much friction in the average household is because the husband has always been a man, and the wife has always been a woman, and neither one has any understanding of the difficulties and problems of the other, or any sympathy with them.

You often hear a man say to his wife: "Good Lord, you don't know when you have things easy! All you have to do is to stay quietly, and safely at home, and keep the house, and look after the children. Seems to me as if any half intelligent woman could do that with one hand tied behind her. I only wish I had that sort of a snap!"

Woman Answers Husband.

And the woman retorts by saying: "Much work you do; sitting around in a handomely furnished office, smoking twenty-five cent cigars, and swapping stories with other men who are tired business men like you, until you go out to eat a two-dollar lunch that takes you two hours to consume!"

"Your working day is from nine until five. My working day runs through all the twenty-four hours because there is no minute of the time when a wife and mother isn't on her job. I don't see how a man has got the nerve to even mention his work to his wife."

And there you are. Each one believes that he or she got the hot end of the matrimonial bargain, and that life is a perpetual picnic to the other.

Lack of Understanding.

It is because husbands and wives do not understand that the other one goes through that they complain of each other, instead of pity each other, and it is unfortunate that some way cannot be devised by which they can occasionally swap jobs for a week or two. If they could, each would return filled with admiration for the ability of the other, and sloshing over with sympathy for the worries with which the other must daily contend.

Sometimes a man does get a taste of woman's work when his wife is sick. Then he ascertains that it is easier to manage a thousand dissatisfied men on the verge of a strike than it is three children, and that one small teething infant can reduce an able-bodied man to the verge of nervous prostration in the course of a single afternoon.

Husband Learns Respect.

Wherefore, when his wife gets well the husband treats her with a respect that he never had for her before, because he does not see how she gets away with her job. He knows he could not run his business if he could get no more efficient help than his wife had, and he feels that she should be made secretary of the treasury for getting the result she does out of the meekly chicken feed of an allowance.

And how she has ever kept out of the insane asylum with the baby howling, and the children fighting, and that incessant call for M-o-o-o-ther, is more than he can understand.

Business Woman Knows Why.

The only woman who ever got the man's sense of the proposition of life are the wives who were the business women in their girlhoods. They know from experience that the lot of the average business man is not all beer and skittles, as the domestic wife paints it, but that it is a battle in which he fights a life and death struggle for his family. She knows of the anxieties that tear his nerves to tatters; of the labor that exhausts his soul and body. She knows that every dollar that he makes is stained with his life blood. She knows of the sacrifices that he offers up to keep those he loves safe and warm in the shelter of home.

Therefore, the wife who has been a business woman, is almost invariably economical and thrifty, and spends carefully the money that her husband has earned at so great a price. Also she considers her husband in a thousand little ways that the woman who has never done a man's work, never shows to her husband.

She does not lay upon him her own burdens, because she knows that he is already staggering along under all the load he can carry. She does not resent every impatient speech, because she remembers times when her own nerves were raw, and every word bruised them like a blow. Nor does she expect her husband to trot around with her to places of amusement in the evening, because she, too, has been so weary after a grinding day in an office or store that all she asked in the world was just a chance to flop down on a couch and relax.

"Danderine" will check that ugly dandruff and stop hair coming out

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Surely your hair grows long, thick and strong and becomes soft, glossy and abundant—Advertisement.

Of course it is impractical for husbands and wives really to exchange jobs, but it does seem as if their imagination might enable them to put themselves in each other's places, and so get a realization of how hard life is on the other. Surely that would give them more patience with each other, and make them have more pity and understanding of what the other must endure.

GAME SANCTUARY PLAN FAVORED BY OGDEN ASSOCIATION

Business of importance to the members of the Ogdene Game and Gun association held Friday evening.

The association passed a resolution placing them on record as favoring the proposed game sanctuary, embracing some of the choice hunting and fishing preserves in the vicinity of Ogdene.

Attention was called to the proposed rabbit drive to be given by sportsmen of Box Elder county in the near future.

The county game warden stated that arrangements had been made to plant a large number of trout fry in the streams of the county during the month of May. He also stated that the game commission was feeding from 5000 to 10,000 quail in the county during the winter months.

A resolution was passed opposing the opening of the dove season, except during the open season for chickens.

CHINESE INTERESTS BOYCOTT JAPANESE

Will Buy Raw Timber in Future from the Philippines—Business Enormous

SHANGHAI, Dec. 10.—Lumber interests in China and particularly in Shanghai, as a result of the boycott movement against Japan, are reported engaged in a project to obtain raw timber in future from the Philippines.

In former years the volume of Japan's lumber trade with China has run into millions of taels annually.

David N. Hsia, a graduate of the Philippine School of forestry, said to have been sent here by the Philippine government with the approval of Governor General Harrison, has just completed a survey of China's lumber market and a study of means by which Philippine lumber may be most economically brought here.

Chinese wood workers, carpenters and builders are said to manifest an increasing aversion against the use of Japanese lumber.

Upon the completion of Mr. Hsia's survey it was announced that in future the Philippines would undertake to supply a large portion, if not the bulk, of China's lumber needs. An intention expressed was to apply to the United States shipping authorities with the request that boats be supplied to encourage the growth of the new business.

FEW APPLICATIONS FOR LAND TRACTS

Lottery Method Used For First Time in the History of Wyoming

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Jan. 10.—All persons who filed applications for tracts of the 10,000 acres of government land which was to have been disposed of by lottery here on December 23, will be enabled to have just what they wanted instead of "drawing straws" for the desirable portions, this condition being due to the fact that there were not enough applications filed to cause any contests.

With the stockmen busy trying to save their herds from total extermination during the stormy season, and with a lack of understanding on part of many persons as to the procedure to be followed, not as many responses were received as had been expected.

Applications were received for approximately 5000 acres, each bidder being limited to a maximum of 160 acres. The state land board will meet soon to determine whether the remainder of the tract shall be disposed of by lottery, and it is likely that the plan will be given another trial.

All persons, taking this land must agree to pay at the rate of not less than $15 an acre for it. After the land has been thoroughly advertised through the state, it will be assigned by lot. The numbers of all applicants will be placed in a receptacle and the board member will draw one out at a time, the applications being given new numbers as they are drawn. In view of the fact that the price of land scrip is now worth from $17 to $25 an acre, the price fixed by the state seems unusually attractive.

This is the first time in the history of the state that the lottery method has ever been used in disposing of public lands. It is also the first time that the state has fixed the acreage at so small an area.

"Cascarets" for Liver and Bowels bring back Smiles

Turn out the bile, the congestion, the ache, biliousness, indigestion, the sick, sour stomach and misery making gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascarets now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels, or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great.

A Cascarets tonight straightens you out by morning. They work while you sleep.—Advertisement.

Four New Enlistments at Recruiting Office

Corbett C. Heim, of South Dakota, has enlisted in the army at the local recruiting office. He requested assignment to the canal district, stating he wanted to get "where it was nice and warm." William A. Kinross, of Lyndell, Utah, and Harry H. Moore, of Springfield, Utah, re-enlisted with the request to be sent to Lakehurst, N. J., to take up studies in chemistry. Don Brown, Olympia, Wash., enlisted for duty in the tank corps, to study gas engines and tractors.

These assignments were made following word that a man can now enlist in the service and be sent to the organizations of their choice without further orders, thus enabling them to take up studies and work that will be of benefit to them on the expiration of their enlistments and work of their own choice.

Perhaps the reason Mr. Garfield resigned was because while he could shut most everything down he couldn't shut anyone up.

Good Manners are True Capital

GOOD MANNERS ARE TRUE CAPITAL

Among the many gifts received by a certain young woman telephone operator in a New York hotel last Christmas was one of the most insignificant from an old gentleman, a patron of the hotel. The gift was accompanied by the following flattering letter:

"Dear No. 1706: I am sending very cheerfully the enclosed $5 to a nameless number. Whether you are Irish, French or Dutch, doesn't matter. If you look half as well as you talk and are half as generous as your voice is, you are an aggregation of superlatives and entitled to a very merry Christmas and a young sweetheart, which I sincerely wish for you."

The writer had never seen the girl, nor did he know her name,
