LIE PASSED BETWEEN THEM FOR HIGHER TAXES

Dudley Chase was fined $5 in the police court this morning for assaulting Ernest Nightingale, on January 22nd.

The evidence given in the case proved that the two men had an altercation regarding the disposition of a case of concentrated lye and that, in the heat of the argument, the "lie" passed between them. Dudley struck Nightingale over the right eye, much to the discomfort of the latter. Frank Murray, alias Frank Murphy, was taken to the municipal court this morning for a preliminary hearing on the charge of forgery, but the case was not concluded. A continuance was given until Friday morning.

The complaint in the case alleges that on the 7th day of January the defendant forced the name of Frank Murray on Salt Lake City to a check, in the defendant's favor, for $20 and had the same cashed at the C. Cohn store on lower Twenty-fifth street.

The testimony showed that the forgery had been committed and that the young man had confessed to the same, but that the amount of the check had been paid back to Cohn.

MERCHANTS BROWNING IS GIVEN A JOLT

In expressing their ideas regarding the manner in which revenues for handling of city affairs should be raised, some of the business men of Ogden are unequivocal in their statement that it should be done by the taxation route. Here are some of the ideas:

B. P. Critchlow, Consolidated Waggon & Machine company—"Increase the rate of taxation and keep the increased tax in force until enough money is raised to place the city on a proper basis and lift the debt."

F. Burton, Burton Implement Co.—"I am decidedly in favor of increasing the tax levy, if we need more revenues. We don't complain about taxation if the money is needed, and we are perfectly willing to help pay the city government debts in that way."

H. McFarlane, Boyle Furniture company—"There is only one way to accomplish the result—lift the city from debt—and that is to increase the tax levy. Let everybody help pay the debt and the necessary expenses of the city."

J. W. Abbott, George A. Lowe Co.—"If we need more revenue, the tax levy should be raised. We will not notice the raise, and that is the only right way to get money for government purposes. I don't know how much revenue is needed, but whatever it is, it should come through the channels of taxation."

C. J. Herrick, Household Fair—"I object to any kind of license. Raise the revenues through increased taxation."

J. S. Carver, Grocer—"Raise it by taxation and not through the licensing of the merchants. I don't want the merchants licensed unless it will furnish them protection against hawkers."

P. T. Wright, Wright & Sons—"We have always been in favor of licensing the business houses, but I do not approve of the graduated license. A high license will do an injustice to the business interests. If it is necessary to raise more revenue, I should think it would be a good plan to increase the tax levy."

W. W. Boyle, Boyle Furniture—"I don't like the merchant's license idea. If we must have money for city purposes, get it through the taxpayers. Raise the tax levy."

THE CHAMPION BUCK DANCER

A Talented and Active Little Artist Who Is at the Orpheum

"Oh, say, did you see that girl?" Is the question that everybody is asking here. It is a question that will bring a twinkle to the eye, then a laugh, and then a "Hee Haw!" Those who have seen her in other cities laughed as they asked the question, and those who did not see her are going to see her and find out what is so funny about her, and then they are going out to ask their friends the same question. And who is "that girl?" No other than Ida May Chadwick, playing the one-act farce, "For Sale Wiggins Farm," at the Orpheum. It is one of the most ridiculously funny things ever seen on the stage. It is excruciatingly funny, if you will. No local audience ever before got as much fun, good clean fun, out of a turn as they got out of the Chadwicks last night. Ida May Chadwick, as one of the boys put it last evening, has all the other eccentric comedy people "skinned a mile." Her work is on the Sis Hopkins style, but if Sis is any funnier than Ida May, oh, well, she couldn't be. And that is all there is about that. Miss Ida has a medal that is about a quarter of an inch long. It is the Richard K. Fox medal awarded to the best buck and wing dancer in America, and is on display in W. H. Wright & Sons' window. She has held that distinction for four or five years—there's a bar for every year on the medal—and she is likely to hold it for some time, as she is still young enough not to be ashamed to tell the boys how old she is. She is not over sixteen and her fresh young beauty is a topic of conversation everywhere.

FIVE YOUNG PEOPLE SUPPOSED TO BE LOST.

Everett, Wash., Jan. 26.—Five young people of this city who sailed from Everett yesterday in a 16-foot boat on what was to have been a short pleasure trip, have not returned. It is feared they were caught in the violent gale of last night and drowned. They were Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Goldie, Roy Hall and Bert Willard. If the party were on the water when the storm broke, it is likely the boat was capsized.

TEXAS RANGERS CALLED OUT TO PURSUE TRAIN WRECKERS.

El Paso, Jan. 26.—Texas rangers were called from El Paso last night to a point near Del Rio, Texas, for the third time, where train wreckers had attempted to wreck a Southern Pacific passenger train by placing obstructions on the track.

BROWNING IS GIVEN A JOLT

PRESIDENT OF COUNCIL ATTEMPTS TO APPLY A "GAG."

Republicans Sit Down on Him, Dickson, in a Clever Manner, Replying to a Personal Attack.

The first tilt of a partisan nature in the present city council was started last evening at the council meeting by President Browning, when, in anticipation of an opinion from the city attorney which was in the hands of the recorder, passing upon the right of Mr. Browning to retain his seat as presiding officer, the president of the council announced that he withdrew all standing committees formerly appointed by him.

In announcing the withdrawal of the committees, Mr. Browning stated that he was doing so for the purpose of leaving the legally declared president of the council in the hands of the recorder, passing upon the right of Mr. Browning to retain his seat as presiding officer, the president of the council announced that he withdrew all standing committees formerly appointed by him.

Strictly partisan lines were drawn between the Republican and Democratic members of the council. The vote was six Republicans against four Democrats, when the council refused to sustain President Browning, declaring out of order Councilman Dickson's motion that the committees formerly appointed by President Browning and concurred in by the committee of the whole, be retained.

Animated words followed on both sides and President Browning became personal in his address to the council after he had called Dana to the chair.

The president said that the motion of Dickson was out of order and would not be considered at all, that there were no committees before the council because he had withdrawn them, and that he would proceed to name his committees. He also contended that it was a rule of the council that the president has the right to name the committees, and that if the council desired to change the rule it would require a two-thirds majority vote to do so.

Councilman Austin appealed from the decision of the president. A strict party vote Browning failed to sustain, the Democrats voting to sustain the presiding officer and the Republicans voting against him.

Councilman Frye and Peery of the Democratic side of the house insinuated that Councilman Dickson and others of the majority side were disrespectful to the president in depriving him of the right to appoint his committees at that time.

Retorts from Dickson, Dana and Austin were to the effect that the majority had yielded a number of committee positions to favor the minority, and that they felt they had been more than fair all the way through. They took exception to Browning's attempted "gag" rule, believing that the majority of the council should have the affairs of the city in hand, and conduct the business of the council, as they were held responsible in city affairs.

To tell the majority in its determination to retain the committees formerly appointed by the president, Councilman Peery made a motion that the matter be referred to the city attorney for a legal opinion. Austin immediately moved to Brownning's motion, and that he was not referred to the attorney. This question brought forth a more heated discussion than the previous one, Austin commenting adversely on the former opinions of the city attorney, referring particularly to the advice of the attorney in the resignation of the Frye franchise, which involved the council in a middle. President Browning, sweating under the collar, took the floor and assailed his colleague, Dr. Dickson, of the Fifth ward.

In paying his respects to Councilman Dickson, Mr. Browning stated that there was a certain councilman that aspired to the presidency of the council, who had been the mover of the proposition to get a legal opinion on the question as to whether the present president could legally remain, and that because his plans had been thwarted and his "wings clipped" he was disgruntled. Continuing further, he said:

"There is one councilman in the Fifth ward who imagines that he controls the whole ward and because of other councilman is a mere figure-head."

Dickson's reply was most courteous, but carried some rich irony which struck home with force.

When the amendment was carried by a 6 to 4 vote, the matter was dropped, the Republicans gaining a complete victory and thwarting what they considered an attempt on the part of the president of the council to enforce "gag" rule and foist upon the council an entirely new personnel in the committees.

GREWSOME EVIDENCE PRESENTED IN VACOS TRIAL.

Marks on the Dead Man Show Where Bullet Entered and Came Out.

During his testimony yesterday afternoon in the Nick Vacos case, Boukus disputed in nearly every instance the testimony given by Trakos.

This morning, at the opening of court, the first witness called was S. T. Whitaker, a photographer, who said he had known John Contos for a number of years and about a year ago was called in to do some photographing of Contos' place of business. Two photographs were identified as having been made a few days ago from the negatives taken a year ago.

On cross-examination a witness was asked if exact measurements could be gotten from a photograph and he said a photograph was only illustrative of distances, but he could almost tell with accuracy on account of his long experience.

H. L. Taylor was called to the stand again and said he was at Contos' store when one photograph was taken, coming in just after the first exposure had been made. He said the fixtures shown in the picture were in the same position as at the time of Contos' death, except in the amount of candy on the different counters. He said that he and Contos had been partners at one time for five or six years and were in partnership up until a few months before Contos' death.

O. H. Hassing, another photographer, identified some photographs he had made of the body of Contos a few days after his death, the photographs, back and front views, showing the bullet wounds. He said it was exactly correct as to the front view, as the camera could not be placed exactly in front, but the view was the same as the eye could see from the same angle (ten degrees side view).

John Cosmos was recalled and told of the conversation between himself and Vacos at the time of Vacos' arrest. He asked defendant why he had shot Contos and Vacos said: "I said I do that and I did it."

He was a partner of Contos at the time of his death and had heard from general conversation that Contos had brought suit against Vacos. He was in the store when Vacos came in and asked Contos to let him go back to work, but didn't hear Contos' answer. However, he asked Vacos what Contos said and defendant said: "He won't do anything." Witness then told Vacos he would try to fix it up. Defendant said, "Alright," and went away, returning at about 8:30, when he heard deceased and Vacos talking. Defendant later told witness that Contos would do nothing and then Cosmos promised again to fix matters

It was feared he would injure himself, so he was told the first news was wrong, that his father and mother had only been injured.

"But I knew they were lying to me," said the lad frankly yesterday. "So I sneaked down to the porch and waited for the paper. Right on the front page was my papa's name and mamma's and Mr. McGuire's, and it said they had been killed."

The boy's excess of grief had passed yesterday and he was bravely looking forward to the comfort of relatives.
