CHAPLIN CAVORTS TODAY AT ODEON

His Sidesplitting Comedy, "Police," is an Exclusive Attraction There.

"Police" is the title of the two reel Charles Chaplin picture to be shown at the Odeon theater today and tomorrow. Chaplin says that this is his funniest comedy. Chaplin appears in his old clothes and shoes, but with new stunts that are funnier than ever. This is a late release and has never been shown in this city before.

The second chapter of "The Secret of the Submarine" is also being shown at the Odeon again today. This chapter is intensely interesting. It pleased large crowds yesterday and everyone states that it is the best serial that has ever been exhibited at the Odeon.

seen where she is taken and informs the judge, her father. The finish is thrilling in the extreme, and eminently satisfying.

A fast Keystone comedy, "The Moonshiner," is also presented on the Triangle program.

Margaret Livingston is to appear shortly in a farce by Avery Hopwood called "Just for Tonight." Its first production will be made at Atlantic City July 4. Walter Jones, C. Aubrey Smith and Effingham Pinto will be in the supporting company.

Klaw and Erlanger will next season produce an operetta called "Little Miss Springtime," taken from a Hungarian source. The piece, originally entitled "Miss Rabbit Foot," will have in its cast, Mary Robson, Georgia O'Raney, John E. Hazard, George MacFarlane, Flavia Arcaro, Charles Meakins, Ted Prouty and the dancing team of Fred Nice and Aa May Weeks.

The Bijou feature today, "A Woman's Naked Soul" with Neil Craig and Darwin Karr in the leads, is an attractive picture for lovers of fine emotional acting by a company of artists who are capable of handling this class of feature presentations. Miss Craig, an actress of note, is a lady of remarkable talent, and an emotional drama of this kind gives ample scope in which to display it. Her support with the eminent Darwin Karr playing opposite makes a picture of the long remembered kind. A chapter of "The Iron Claw" serial and one of George Ade's fables, "The Collegian Who Wanted to Get a Foothold" are also shown.

Special attention is called to the Bijou's Saturday feature, "At Piney Ridge." This is a purely southern story all scenes and incidents being of the South and the principal parts being enacted by southern people. It is pronounced by critics to be one of the best V. L. S. E. productions. Fritz Brunette as a girl of the Tennessee mountains, and Frank Clark make an interesting couple.

"Buried Treasure," a new play by Rida Johnson Young, was produced this week at Atlantic City under the direction of Cohen and Harris and was well received. The scenes of the play are laid in New York City and Cape Cod, and the plot revolves around the search of an eccentric character for supposed treasure buried at the latter place. The cast included Zella Sears, Josephine Stevens, Otto Kruger, Ernest Stallard and Martin L. Altop.

Another new program is being presented by the McDonald Musical Comedy Company at the Palace theater today. It is "The Bogus Pasha," a tabloid full of good musical numbers and good comedy. This is one of the best singing shows that has ever played the Palace and the comedy is also very good. "The Bogus Pasha" will be shown tomorrow, also.

The feature at the Robinson Grand today is William Farnum in the latest Fox release, "Battle of Hearts." In this picture Mr. Farnum is seen at his best. It is a romantic drama of the sea. The added attraction is the latest Pathe News.

Tomorrow, Marguerite Clark will again appear in "The Pretty Sister of Jose." The added attraction tomorrow will be the Paramount Bray Cartoons.

The reception by the newspapers of America of William Gillette in the film version of "Sherlock Holmes" testifies conclusively to the never-ending popularity of this star and his play. The press agrees that Essanay has filmed a classic, a picture that will live on as long as its title remains a household word.

West Virginia Briefs

CHARLESTON. The "Old Thurmond House" at Alderson is to be torn down and rebuilt. It stood for 128 years before it fell with a crash, endangering the lives of J. S. Thurmond and wife, present occupants. The old house sheltered the records of Nicholas county in Civil war days.

MARTINSBURG. In order to make a record breaking mobilization, Captain George L. Weaver, commanding Company F of the First regiment, West Virginia National Guard, stationed here, has arranged with city officials to have the fire bell tolled at city hall should the company be called to the colors.

MONTGOMERY. By the breaking of a rope in a swing in which she was swinging, Jeanne Fuertosen fell upon an iron fence and was impaled upon the pickets at Layland, sustaining probably fatal injuries.

CHARLESTON. To fight the ragweed is the mission in West Virginia of the National Hay Fever Prevention Association, of which Dr. S. L. Jepson, state health commissioner, has been made a director. It is supposed to rid the state of these weeds and blossoms, the pollen of which is blamed for the annual epidemic.

MORGANTOWN. Mrs. Lucien Bucklew worried so much because she had her husband jailed for sixty days for failing to support her and her two small children that she became a raving maniac. She is now a prisoner in the same jail, awaiting to be taken to an insane asylum.

CHARLESTON. Maryland physicians practicing by courtesy in West Virginia must comply with the law requiring reports on communicable diseases, according to Dr. S. L. Jepson, head of the state health department.

PARKERSBURG. Because he could not muster courage to propose to his sweetheart, Alfred B. Manning a prominent business man, recited his proposal to a dictograph and sent the record to her. The next day he received another record. Putting it on the machine and turning the lever he heard the one word "Yes."

CHARLESTON. Union labor men and Socialists will confer with a view to putting a third ticket in the field in Kanawha county. Five per cent of the voters are required.

FAIRMONT. Frederick Blome, Jr., a three-years-old boy, has been rushed to Pittsburgh specialists for relief from a large metal ring from a bath room fixture, which he swallowed and which lodged somewhere down his chest. He was in a serious condition when he left here.

HINTON. Edward, three-year-old son of E. E. Cales, of Brooks, was saved from death by being rushed to the Hinton hospital, where surgeons removed a quarter, which he had swallowed and which lodged at the top of his breast bone.

CHARLESTON. Following orders from Major General Loomis, of Terre Haute, Ind., West Virginia companies of the Uniform rank of Knights of Pythias, are submitting to headquarters reports of the men available for military duty. A battalion was formed a few years ago in Wheeling.

BLUEFIELD. A hundred persons armed with revolvers, rocks and clubs engaged in a hunt for a big black bear, discovered near the tipple of the American Coal Company. The mining plant suspended operations so employees could take part. A score of dogs also took part but it was not until some one obtained an automobile to pursue the beast that he was finally brought down by a shot from the gun of R. S. Patterson.

CHARLESTON. Deaths due to mining accidents during the month of May were thirty-five, from the following causes: Falls of coal and roof, twenty-one; mine cars, four; electricity, one; gas explosion, four. These in McDowell county; machinery, one; powder explosion, one; miscellaneous, one. The accidents were distributed in the counties as follows: Boone, one; Fayette, one; Harrison, one; Logan, four; Marion, two; McDowell, four; Mercer, one; Ohio, one; Raleigh, five; Randolph, one; Taylor, one; and Wyoming, one.

FAIRMONT. James Voyle, an electric trainman in the Consolidation Coal Company's mine at Highland, fell against the controller of a car, tipped it on and was caught and crushed to death beneath the wheels. He was 40 years old and had worked for the company fourteen years.

BECAUSE IT'S A Studebaker's

The Blacksmith of the Twentieth Century

Let us take you back to your boyhood days and stand with you in the old-fashioned blacksmith shop, "under the spreading chestnut tree." The "village blacksmith," too, was a forger, but instead of using a steam hammer operated by an engine as strong as a locomotive, his fashioning strokes were made with a hand hammer. He had to guess at the heat of his forge. He had to determine the "treatment" by the color of the heated metal, or by some other trick of the trade of which he was supposed to be a master.

Today, in the drop-forging shops of the Studebaker factories, engineers know to a degree, by electrical apparatus, just exactly how hot the steel is before it is ready for the hammer. They know, exactly, to an owner, the pressure that a hammer weighing tons will exert upon the surface of a piece of steel. It is pre-determined. It is figured out. There is no guess work—no "trick of the trade." The giant forges in the Studebaker factories are operated with scientific accuracy, yet the principle is exactly the same as that of the old blacksmith shop—with the guess work left out.

There were two things that the blacksmith of old did when on his anvil he hammered his horseshoe, or hammered his file into a knife blade. He not only shaped the piece, but he also "tempered" it. By tempering it he fixed the grain of the steel; but he had, unfortunately, no way of accurately knowing just what condition the grain was in after he fixed it. So some of his file-made butcher knives or carving sets were good enough to make him famous; others were so hard that they would chip off when they struck a turkey bone, or so soft that they would turn when they hit the edge of the platter.

But today the Studebaker scientist knows in advance exactly what results a certain heat treatment or a certain pressure will give. There is absolutely no guess work in the drop-forged parts that enter into a Studebaker car.

Drop-forging work requires, first, great resources to establish the plant, and second, a force of the most expert steel workers to operate it.

We believe that Studebaker's drop-forging experts are among the best in the manufacturing business. They have spent years in the Studebaker plants. A photographer four years ago took a picture of a certain drop-forging machine and a few weeks ago was asked to take a similar picture for this book. He was surprised to find at one of the machines selected for a picture an operator whom he had photographed in the Studebaker plant four years ago. "That's nothing!" the plant superintendent told him; "many of our men have been here longer than that. You see, Studebaker men stick."
