Berkeley's Marshal Strongly Enforces the New Liquor Ordinance.

SEVEN DEALERS IN TROUBLE.

An Exciting Day in the Usually Quiet University Town—Arrests to Be Made.

BERKELEY, Oct. 10, 1895.—The wave of reform has reached Berkeley, and there is prospect not only of "dry Sundays," but dry weekdays as well. All the "speak-easies" are closed, the cigar-stores with small rooms in the rear no longer sell "temperance drinks," the billiard-hall signs reading "soda" are now true to reality, and the drug-store clerks ask would-be purchasers of a private supply of fluids, that cheer, for physicians' prescriptions. This sweeping change in Berkeley life was wrought in one short hour this morning when Marshal Lloyd and several deputies started forth to exert the authority accorded them by the new liquor ordinance of Berkeley. The visits of the officers were as startling as bombshells to the unsuspecting keepers of the various places where Berkeley users of liquor have been wont to satisfy their appetites for the various liquids which are legally supposed never to approach within a mile of the University of California. For years half a dozen or more cigar-stores, amusements and saloons, and a few small drinks in sufficient quantity to satisfy the wants of an accomplished explorer of the cocktail routes of San Francisco.

They have readily admitted total strangers to the place, and in the meantime, questions being asked, no open sesame being necessary but the price. Marshals have succeeded one another, temperance agitators have come and gone, and candidates have taken pledge after pledge to close "speak-easies," but the officers have smiled and still continued to quench thirsts of all kinds.

The immediate cause of the tremendous change in the ordinance recently passed by the town trustees, is the fact that the one great requisite needed to enable enforcement of Berkeley's liquor laws—the right of search. Hitherto there was no way for an officer to secure evidence of violation of the law, except by finding some one who was willing to testify to having entered the sanctum sanctorum of a "temperance house" and sampled its beverages.

But the new law forbids even the storing of liquor in any part of the town without a license, and permits the Marshal ostensibly to guard against dangers of fire from inflammatory liquids, to enter any establishment without notice, and to search and seize any liquor found therein.

A small room, with a pretty little bar, in the rear of George H. Stricker's cigar store, Shattuck street, was the scene of the first raid, when the Marshal, Lloyd, and a few minutes later the executive officer of Berkeley was loading an express wagon with some excellent whiskey and a valuable stock of cigars and beer. Fonz, kept by Fred Fonz, on Center street, near Shattuck avenue, was entered by Lloyd and Deputy Rawson, and the wagon received another stock of contraband goods.

The California Hotel, connected by a Doran on the corner of Shattuck street and University avenue, was visited by Deputy Marshal Edmond and Deputy Sheriff Davis, and the Archer Hotel, on the opposite corner of the same street, managed by A. Berg, also received an official visit from the officers of the law, who had by this time received a supply of liquor.

The billiard-hall of S. Salomon was searched, but no spirituous beverages were found there. Mr. Salomon's sign, "Soda and Cigars," appeared to be fully descriptive of the salable stock he owns. The officers of the law, however, in the vicinity of Berkeley station, the officers turned their attention to other stores in the town. A notion, soda water and cigar store on Telegraph avenue, just across the street from the station, was entered by the officers, and a search was made. The officers found three demijohns of fire-water, eight bottles of pale lager and a bottle of native wine.

The stock seemed to be small considering the reputation the stationery-store, which is owned by Mrs. Silvershield, has long enjoyed, and the officers proceeded to pry for further discoveries. Four dozen bottles of the late style of liquor, five gallons of whiskey were found in a dark corner of one of Mrs. Silvershield's rooms. In a stationery-store kept by Mrs. Mullagher, opposite Mrs. Silvershield's, Deputy Rawson and Edmond found four dozen bottles of the same pale lager, with which Mrs. Silvershield has presumably been regaling her customers, and four demijohns of stronger stuff.

Mrs. Mullagher had a trapdoor in front of her room, and by means of this she was able to get the bottles of beer were found in a store kept by Mrs. Thompson at North Berkeley station.

The officers' copy of the finds of the officers, and the whole collection, barrels, cases, crates, demijohns and bottles was carted to the Town Hall, in the lobby of which there is now a stock of liquor, probably the largest ever gathered together in Berkeley.

Everything in the way of "bracers" is there. There are wines, beers, whiskey, brandy, and even the mysterious bottled concoctions that help to give a drugstore appearance to the place.

The proprietors of the seven places in which liquor was found will all be arrested under Berkeley's new liquor ordinance.

The charge to be placed against the persons named in the story is the violation of holding it for sale in violation of the ordinance.

Marshal Lloyd stated this evening that he has no evidence of the actual sale of liquor by any of the named persons, but that the storing thereof can be no question, and convictions are certain in every case if the ordinance stands in the courts.

The ordinance in question provides a penalty for violation of the ordinance of imprisonment for both the first and second offense of not over $300, and the imprisonment for not less than one month and not over three months.

The raid has caused much excitement in Berkeley. It is the most successful one ever made against the illicit liquor traffic in the town and gives promise of future rigid enforcement of Berkeley's liquor ordinances.

The total value of the liquor secured is about $300. It is expected that those who are to be arrested will vigorously contest against the new ordinance, but local lights in the legal profession say there are no holes in the law.

The only places among those raided to-day that received any patronage from university students were those of Mrs. Mullagher and Mrs. Silvershield. These two stores were within ten yards of the university grounds. It has long been common report that liquor of all kinds was to be obtained in the places in question, and few students were unaware of the fact.
