THE BOARD'S NEGLIGENCE TO BE PROVED BY ITS OWN RECORDS.

DECEIVED THE DEPOSITORS.

WHAT IT IS CLAIMED THEY DID IN BEHALF OF THE BANK'S

A. J. Clunie, as attorney for the depositors of the Merced Bank, has sent to Governor Budd a statement of the facts upon which he asks for the removal of the three Bank Commissioners, Kilburn, Magee and Fuller, for failure to report the insolvency of that bank to the Attorney-General.

Mr. Clunie opens his statement by say-ing that he had several days ago placed before the Governor a complaint against the Bank Commissioners and demanded their removal under the section of the bank act which provides that if any Commissioner shall have knowledge of the in-solvency or unsafe condition of any bank and shall neglect to report the same to the Attorney-General he shall, on conviction, be punished by a fine or imprisonment or both, and his office be declared vacant by

As to the source of his information he says: "The greater part of the matter here presented is taken from the files and here presented is taken from the fires and records of the Bank Commissioners, and, as against them, must constitute the highest degree of evidence."

Mr. Clunie goes on to say that the bank failed October 16, 1894, when it telegraphed the Commissioners in San Francisco simply that it had supposed business.

the Commissioners in San Francisco simply that it had suspended business.

On the same day Commissioner Kilburn, who was in San Francisco, telegraphed to J. B. Fuller, then in Los Angeles, that the bank had suspended, and that he would attend, and wrote on the same day a letter to Mr. Fuller in which he said that he had sent Mr. Dunsmoor, the secretary of the board, to Merced.

Mr. Clunie then continues:

7, 1895. This was all the concession that the creditors were able to secure, and this was not granted without a great deal of demurring.

The report of Mr. Hastings is quoted, showing that he found assets with a book value of $151,736 17 and an estimated value of $71,229 95, and liabilities amounting to $134,032 01. Mr. Clunie continues:

A meeting of the commission was held at Merced October 7, 1895. Mr. Clunie then continues:

Mr. Clunie then continues:

Following the last letter Mr. Dunsmoor, the Commissioners' secretary, went to Merced, and while there, and with his knowledge and consent and that of the Board of Bank Commissioners, the board of directors of the bank passed a resolution putting the bank into what they and the Bank Commissioners have been pleased to call voluntary liquidation. While there Mr. Dunsmoor forwarded to the office of the Bank Commissioners at San Francisco, directed to Mr. Kilburn, the following statement of the bank's condition as taken from its books.

The statement referred to by Mr. Clunie gave the total of the value of the bank's as-sets as $230,873 03, and liabilities the same. Mr. Clunie goes on to say that accompanying the report was a letter from Dunsmoor to Kilburn informing him that he was proceeding to verify it. But no verification of the report is shown on the records of the Bank Commissioners, and shortly after the failure, with the knowledge of the Commissioners, negotiations, were opened on the bank's part with another bank of Merced to afford some relief, and in this negotiation an appraisement of the assets, made by Milton Huffman and E. T. Dixon, fixed them at 50 percent of their face value, provided they were realized upon at once, and this fact was reported to the Commissioners.

It is then recited that on the 3d of November, 1894, a letter was received by the Commissioners from J. W. Howell, cashier of the Merced Bank, containing the following language:

That on said date it was their duty to have restricted such facts to the Attorney-General, and not having done so they had rendered them to release the attention of the Attorney-General, and not having done so they had rendered them to the subsence at was made in this report in white to the Attorney-General, and not having done so they had rendered them not having done so they had rendered th ing the report was a letter from Dunsmoor lowing language:

A part of the depositors of this bank held a meeting and appointed a delegate to make an examination into the condition of the bank, and we think from our knowledge of the principal agitators that the idea is born of idle curiosity more than of an honest endeavor to give information concerning their interests. The condition of the bank, its assets and liabilities are familiar to you, and it is hardly necessary to state that it would be of no benefit to any one interested to have that knowledge common property of this vicinity: it would to those who did not know intimately the situation create anxiety and apprehension, where there is now a large measure of confidence, there would be distrust, and our labors in liquidation consequently increased. In making collections and to prevent defeat of our movements against persons owing the bank, we deem it highly important that every one in the community be kept in the dark.

We write this matter to procure your views A part of the depositors of this bank held a community be kept in the dark.

We write this matter to procure your views upon the rights of these depositors, as well as the propriety and advisability of making such disclosures.

A letter from you, to be shown to these un-easy creditors, will allay their anxiety and re-move a cause of much annoyance. Mr. Clunie continues:

In answer to the above cry of distress on the part of this bank, and in response to the re-quest therein made for a decoy letter, over the signature of sworn officers of the State, to lull and deceive depositors, whose rights they were sworn to conserve and protect, the Bank Com-missioners forwarded the following as of the date of November 8, 1894. The letter which is quoted says that the

Commissioners believe that the bank will with judicious management pay the de-positors in full, and with it was inclosed a report on the condition of the bank dated

Mr. Clunie goes on to say:

The statement in the letter referred to was the one previously forwarded to the Commissioners by Dunsmoor and hereinbefore inserted and showed assets valued at $230,873 03, against liabilities to the same amount. The letter of the Bank Commissioners shown to the depositors seems to have had the desired effect.

Mr. Clunie then says that no important movements are recorded by the Commissioners until April 5, 1895, when Commissioners Fuller ane Magee reported the bank's assets as valued at $202,738, and liabilities the same amount, and sent this report with a note of transmission simply to the Attorney-General, and, dated May 27, is a letter among the records of the 27, 18 a letter among the records of the commission signed by a committee of depositors of the Merced Bank, which states that they were appointed to ascertain if there could be a receiver appointed. The letter which is quoted recites that they find that the bank is insolvent, with a liability of $253,000, and but $81,000 of good assets: that since closing there has been a trading of accounts with a few favored persons that has been unfair and unjust to the other depositors, and that during the the other depositors, and that during the following six months would be the best time to settle the affairs of the bank. The letter concludes by asking that a receiver be appointed, because the management of the bank was very unsatisfactory. A report accompanies the letter.

Mr. Clunie continues:

The report, in the above letter referred to, is that of Mr. R. Graicy, and will be here inserted in full. It is but fair to the Bank Commissioners to say that the same does not bear the file mark of their office until September 12, 1895. How much sooner they may have actually seen it is a matter of surmise, but certainly knowledge of it was conveyed to them by the foregoing letter as early as May 27.

Mr. Graicy's report states that the cashier reported April 22, 1895, that the assets were $202,209 60 and the liabilities the same; that he (Mr. Graicy) after careful examination finds that the value of the assets is but $81,802 50 and the liabilities 1805 770 100 that the tablibilities 1805 770 100 that ties $205,779 10; that the liabilities, less the capital stock, is $157,779 10.

ASKS THEIR REMOVAL Merced Bank cannot be put in the hands of a receiver, and that the Supreme Court has so decided in two cases recently, and goes on to say:

The action of the board in sending this letter shows either a willful and deliberate attempt to mislead the depositors or such a desire on their part to shirk the duties of their office as amounts almost to criminal ne gligence. Mr. Clunie adds that amendments to the bank act were passed by the Lexislature and approved by the Governor May 26, 1895, giving the Commissioners full power in the matter, and continues:

It will thus be seen that at the date of the Commissioners' letter to the creditors, to wit, March 28, 1895, the new act had been in effect two days, and that under it the commission had full power to afford the relief desired by taking the control of said bank from its directors and throwing the same into liquidation, where it properly belonged.

Mr. Clumber over one to show that the

Mr. Clunie goes on to show that the Commissioners knew of these powers as is shown by a circular letter sent out by them April 9, 1895, and continues:

shown by a circular letter sent out by them April 9, 1895, and continues:

Notwithstanding the amendment of this act greatly increasing the powers of the commission as above stated by them, and under which they assumed such great responsibilities, absolutely no step was taken by the commission for the relief of the depositors of Merced Bank until about the 12th of September, 1895. * * * About the 1st of September, 1895, the creditors of the bank again awoke and this time determined to employ counsel to protect their interests and secure their rights. As a result of this a call was made upon the Bank Commission and a demand made that they proceed to afford some relief to the depositors of the bank. On this demand two of the Commissioners, Magee and Kilburn, went to Merced and were there waited upon by the creditors of the bank for a consideration of its affairs. At this time an offer was made to prove the continuous insolvency and unsafe condition of the bank for a consideration of its affairs. At this time an offer was made to prove the continuous insolvency and unsafe condition of the bank for years, and the fraud and negligence of its directors in its management; but this attempt was shut off by a statement of the Commissioners that without any proof other than their own examination and the statements of the bank officials, they found the bank to be wholly insolvent and unsafe. They, then, instead of taking the action contemplated by law, and reporting the condition of the bank to the Attorney-General, proceeded to arrange a compromise between the directors of the bank and its creditors with a view to reorganize its board of directors, giving three directors to the creditors and permitting three of the then directors, and the president of the bank to retain their positions as such, and considering this arranged they left Merced and took no other steps whatever, and made no report of the condition of the bank as found by them to the Attorney-General.

Subsequently, about the 15th of September, Dr. W. N. Sherma Notwithstanding the amendment of this act

A meeting of the commission was held at Merced October 7, 1895, at which possession of the bank was taken by the commission and subsequently the insolvency and unsafe condition of the bank reported for the first time to the Attorney-General. At the time of this meeting it was known to the commission that charges against them had been made to you as Governor and were then under consideration by you.

Governor and were then under consideration by you.

These are but a few of the facts showing the actions of this commission in the matter. Innumerable others could be cited to you, but no doubt you have already become familiarized with the same in connection with your investigation of the matter. From what we have here shown we say that it conclusively appears that the members of the commission must have had knowledge of the insolvency and unsafe condition of the Merced Bank at least since October 16, 1894, if not before, and that on said date it was their duty to have reported such facts to the Attorney-General, and not having done so they had rendered themselves amenable to the penalties of section 6 of the bank act.

Mr. Clunie then goes into the law on the subject to show the liability of the Commissioners and the power of the Governor in the case to declare their offices vacant.

Durrant was considerably worked up last evening when a report reached him that confidence workers had been attempting to mulct the residents of the West End by soliciting cash subscriptions to assist in defraying the expense of his trial.

Mrs. Durrant is also being annoyed from another quarter. For several days past a woman has followed her wherever she has gone, keeping up a most persistent shadowing. She has several times tried to turn and meet the woman, but each time her shadower has cleverly that woman would strike a man with any breatward to the collection of an old Frenchman in Portland, who fell into straitened circumstances a few years ago and sent his pictures and other valuables to a commission man here. The picture which has become Stanton's love is a pastel somewhat after the style of a portrait by Greuze. The woman represented is stately and beautiful, with a pale, transparent skin and dark dreamy eyes. Her hair is powdered and she is dressed in the fashion of a woman of high rank during the early part of the last century. Her white satin dress is looped with pearls, and the heavy blue mantle across her shoulders is held together with a string of the same jewels. The frame of the picture is battered and tarnished, and the canvas nailed across the back is wormeaten, sad to tell. Spots of mildew have also invaded the creamy whiteness of the lady's neck. The date, which is partially effaced, is either 1718 or 1748. The name of the artist begins "La —," but the end is almost illegible. There is more than one French portrait painter, Stanton says, who might be fitted into one or other of these dates—Lancret, for instance, who died in 1743.
