Superintendent Langdon's Report to Board of Education Tells Its Own Tale.

BY LAURA HODGE POWERS.

The Parental School in the San Francisco school system is an outstanding example of the benefit of parental participation in the school and home life of their children. The Parental School was organized in 1900 by Mr. William E. Sherry, who was the Superintendent of the San Francisco schools at that time. The Parental School was established to promote the interest of parents in their children's education and to foster a better understanding between parents and teachers.

The Parental School is open to all parents of students attending public schools in San Francisco. It meets at the Central School on the third Monday of each month. The meetings are open to the public and are free of charge. The Parental School also sponsors various activities and programs throughout the year, including a Parent-Teacher Association, a Parent-Child Club, and a Parent-Teacher Conference.

The Parental School is an excellent example of the importance of parental involvement in the education of children. It provides parents with an opportunity to learn more about the school system and to contribute to the improvement of education for all students. The Parental School is a valuable resource for parents who are interested in being actively involved in their children's education.
