RICH S. F. SHIP OWNER IN MEXICAN JAIL

F. JEBSEN ARRESTED ON TRADE TOUR

Smart Set Leader and Shipping Magnate Celled as Political Prisoner; Washington Urged to Aid

Jebesen's Mode of Life Here and in Guaymas Prison

WHAT JEBSEN DOES
IN SAN FRANCISCO
Lives in a palatial flat, which he shares with Baron von Berkeheim, friend of the Kaiser and member of the Imperial diplomatic service.
Takes a morning canter in the park on his famous thoroughbred.
Does a hard day's work, but finds time for a luncheon de luxe at the St. Francis.
Says goodby to his office at 5 p. m., enjoys another canter in the park, takes his first cocktail and spends his evening in the ranks of the idle rich.
IN GUAYMAS
Lives in a prison cell, which he shares with an unknown number of dark skinned brothers in misery.
Helps his prison comrades roll up blankets and sweep out their barred apartment.
Breakfasts on beans, indifferently cooked.
Luncheon, ditto.
Dinner, the same.
Says good night to his fellow prisoners about 7 p. m. and spends the night listening to the wild bugs and dreaming of San Francisco.

Frederick Jebesen, curly haired idol of San Francisco society, and one of the best known shipping men on this coast, is a political prisoner in Guaymas. He was arrested Sunday a week ago by the federal authorities, and has been held ever since incommunicado, in the stuffy confines of a Mexican jail.
Friends in the gulf port learned of his predicament Saturday and the information was received here today through a wireless message sent north by the armored cruiser Maryland. The Cahner of Commerce, of which he is a member, will take steps today toward obtaining help for him through Washington, and an appeal has been made to the German government to interfere in his behalf.
No details have been received as to the reason for Jebesen's arrest, but his friends regard his predicament as serious in view of the disturbed conditions in Guaymas, where martial law has been in force several months.
Jebesen, his friends say, has fallen victim to his own intrepidity, but they have enough faith in his rectitude to believe that he will be released in a few days.

In his inaugural address Harrison declared that every step taken by the administration would be toward ultimate independence of the Philippines. "The administration will take one step at once," he said. "It will give to the native citizens of the islands a majority in the appointive commission and also in the upper as well as in the lower house of the legislature."

LOVERS DIE TOGETHER IN SEA

Man and Girl Engaged to Marry Caught by Treacherous Tide and Drowned

A terrified woman's glimpse of the last struggles of a drowning man in the turbulent waters of the ocean at the edge of Tennessee cove, Marin county, Sunday afternoon, is believed to have revealed a double tragedy, the death of Miss Susie Johnson of Sausalito and De Witt Livingston of this city. Entrapped by the tides, it is thought that Livingston and the girl met death when they attempted to swim back to safety from the trap of rocks that were surrounded by a sudden change to flood tide.
The identity of the couple has been settled with certainty to the brothers and mother of the girl. Livingston wore a blue jersey and the girl wore a red sweater coat. These were worn by the couple seen at the beach by the only witness to the tragedy, and the arm of the drowning man disclosed a blue covering.
WOMAN SEES DROWNING
Mrs. William Helms of Kentfield was the witness. With a party of five friends and her husband she had gone to the beach to picnic. They saw a young couple pass beyond the headland of the cove, while the tide was low, at 10 o'clock. The water was smooth and the picnickers thought nothing of it. About 2 o'clock screams were heard. Mrs. Helms, followed by the other picnickers, rushed up to the top of the headland. She was in advance of the others.
In the breakers she discerned a man struggling and attempting to swim. She recognized the blue sleeve, and is sure he was the man who passed with a companion four hours before. An instant later he was dashed against the rocks by the waves and then disappeared from view.
Another object was floating on the waves a few hundred feet from shore, but Mrs. Helms was so terrified that she did not look closely at it.
On returning to her home Mrs. Helms notified Coroner Frederick E. Sawyer. Early this morning the three brothers of the Johnson girl, with a number of men from the coroner's office, went to Tennessee cove to conduct a search for the bodies.
COUPLE WERE ENGAGED
Miss Johnson was the daughter of Mrs. Mary Johnson of Locust avenue, Sausalito, and was 20 years of age. De Witt Livingston, a government employe at Mare Island, was 24 years of age and lived with friends at 1211 Divisadero street in this city.
The couple had been engaged for several months and they were making arrangements for their wedding, to be held on Christmas day.

Women Scream When Plumes Are Plucked From Hats

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—With the passage of the new tariff bill the customs of social must tear out the plumes and the plumage of foreign birds that women passengers are wearing in their hats when they arrive in American ports. On Saturday, when the Underwood bill went into effect, a score of women on the French liner Lorraine were subjected to this treatment.
Reclamations were heaped on the inspectors, who were acting in the only way that insured the execution of the clause forbidding the importation of plumes or the plumage of any wild bird.
Try as they could, the customs men were unable to make the women understand they were carrying out orders. Disorder and confusion prevailed.

25 KILLINGS CONFESSED BY SPENCER

Man Who Slew Tango Girl Admits Joining Church to Find Victims

I have always had a natural hatred for women.
I killed women just like I would flies.
I wouldn't look at a woman who didn't wear diamonds.
I spent a lot of money around the cabarets on the entertainers. That's the way I picked out the ones I robbed or killed. I got their confidence by spending money.—Statement by Henry Spencer, confessed murderer, under arrest in Chicago for the death of Mrs. Mildred Allison-Rexroat, the tango teacher.
CHICAGO, Oct. 6.—Henry Spencer, slayer of Mrs. Mildred Allison-Rexroat, made a second and new confession today, in which he related 25 killings. He was uncertain as to two of the murders, but told Captain Halpin of the city detectives a logical story of each of the others. He made the second statement after he had been kept awake all night, reciting what the detectives declared to be the most remarkable tale of crime in history.
"I hit 'em with a hammer or shot 'em, whichever was easier," he said, nonchalantly, after he had finished a hearty breakfast and lighted a black cigar.
ENTERED CHURCH TO JOIN
Spencer's statement that he took up worship in the fashionable Immanuel Baptist church in Michigan boulevard, with hands hardly dry from the blood of his latest victim, was confirmed today. Dr. William Day Hoyt and Dr. James Goodman, assistant pastors of the church, recalled Spencer and remembered the services that he attended in the last 10 days since the murder of Mrs. Rexroat.
On Saturday, September 27, the day after his last crime, Spencer attended the wedding of Miss Martha Meyers, daughter of the pastor of Immanuel church. He rubbed elbows with the wealthiest members of the congregation while the police were hunting the murderer of the woman.
LED PRAYER MEETING
On the following day he attended a four hour prayer service and led in prayer seven times during the meeting. On Wednesday night, October 1, he attended prayer meeting and made arrangements to become a full fledged member of the church.
Spencer was also remembered by J. I. Miller and his wife, caretakers at the church. He asked them to help him get a rooming place near

Extra! Latest From Paris! No Corsets, Tango Trousers

PARIS, Oct. 6.—Here is the very latest from the Long-champs racecourse, where fashions are made. No more discomfort, no more corsets—that is, if molly is to follow the lead of the smart set. Here are some of the fashionable oddities introduced at the grand prix Sunday:
Tango trousersettes, with pockets; absence of corsets; red lace stockings; red velvet slippers; a slouching walk, with the hat on the back of the head, the shoulders thrown forward and hands in the pockets; a skirt that reaches a trifle below the knees and a style of headpiece that reveals the ears.
The grand prix was the first big style making event since July, and was attended by scores of rich American tourists.

STRANGLER HELD HER IN MYSTIC SPELL

Rosa Dominga, Victim of Oriental Love and Crime, Ignored Warnings Given by Father

Out of the maze of sordid circumstances surrounding the discovery of the bruised, chain weighted body of 18 year old Rosa Dominga in the bay off Stege Saturday, certain features are becoming so predominant that the mystery has taken on a new aspect, teeming with elements of the mystic far east in the day of the Thuggee.
The mysticism of early India is bound round the tragedy as closely as were the links of the chain in which her murderer robbed her dead body before casting her into the water.
GIRL WAS STRANGLER
An autopsy performed this morning by Deputy Coroner Doctor Abbott of Richmond definitely establishes that Rosa Dominga was strangled before being weighted with loose iron and thrown into the water off a Stege manufacturing plant.
As the investigation proceeds it becomes more and more patent that the girl was under a pernicious spell woven, in look and action, by Said Ali Kahn, the swarthy faced East Indian who disappeared when the girl's body was found and for whom the police now are scouring this section of the state.
Hypnotism and the cruel art of the Thuggee, the Hindu counterpart of the Paris Apache, is being incorporated into the tragedy steadily as the investigation proceeds.
GIRL WAS HYPNOTIZED
Early in July the girl was taken into custody in Oakland, apparently suffering from a mental disorder. She was released later. On another occasion she caused the arrest of a Greek restaurant proprietor, charging that he had robbed her of $5. The officers are in possession of other facts which, they say, tend to show that the young woman was laboring under some mental stress.
From all data now in the possession of those engaged in clearing up the murder, in addition to the substantiation furnished by the autopsy, Kahn reverted to the promptings of a latent instinct handed down from the day of Demonology in India and first choked the girl to death. No marks have been found on the body to preclude the assumption that Kahn, consistent to the end, scorned the use of his hands, and with a silk handkerchief strangled the girl in Thuggee fashion.
HINDU COMPANION ARRESTED
Today detectives are searching the girl's home in Stege while Detectives Morris and Lemon of the San Francisco department are following up the few clues in this city. They have taken possession of all her clothing found in her Ritch street room, as well as a large number of postcards and a memorandum book.
This book contains the name of approximately 60 friends, the majority of them male. Included in this list is the name of "Saidel Mohnemend." The missing man's friend, Musa Khan, is in custody and is being closely questioned by a Hindu interpreter. Steadily denying that he understood English, Musa, by several involun-

LONG LEGAL BATTLE GOES FOR NAUGHT

Year and $10,000 in Fees Spent in Vain in Safe Deposit Suit

The legal battle of the depositors of the California Safe Deposit and Trust company to recover their money has been time wasted. After a year of legal twists by a galaxy of brilliant attorneys a circle was accomplished, bringing the case back to the starting point, when Judge J. M. Sewall handed down his decision this morning.
He decided he could not rule upon the essential issues presented because the plaintiffs had not proved they were depositors.
It cost more than $10,000 in legal fees to obtain this decision.
The suit was that of Rrieda J. Major and Kate O'Connell to recover their deposits, and it was taken by all depositors as a test case. The main point was to determine whether the directors had a right to declare dividends out of the surplus profits of the defunct company or whether this money should go to depositors. This point Sewall did not decide.
The second point was to enforce liability of each director on a constitutional provision of the safe deposit association. This was decided in favor of the directors on a demurrer by them that the provision did not hold.

GIRL LURED FROM BERKELEY CHURCH

Young Woman Disappears and Police, Fearing Kidnapers, Start Hunt

Miss Herta Nehrstad, 23 years old, 2209 Filbert street, Oakland, was lured away from the German Lutheran church at Ashby and Grove streets, Berkeley, Friday night and is feared to have been kidnaped. The girl came from Oakland to attend a social and left the church at 9 o'clock, saying she would deliver in the neighborhood a package which had been left with her by a woman unknown to her.
The police were notified this morning by George Hunrick, grocer, 2211 Rose street, Berkeley, a friend of the girl.
Miss Nehrstad, who is described as a handsome blonde, came from Germany only two weeks ago and could speak little English.

Hundreds in Fight Save Claremont Hotel From a Forest Fire

Several Hundred Acres Swept by East Bay Blaze, but Burning of Groves Is Greatest Loss

The Claremont hotel, one of the largest frame hostlers in the west, was threatened with destruction along with many other fashionable residences of Claremont, Berkeley, yesterday, when a grass fire swept over several acres of eucalyptus timber.
Hundreds of residents turned out to assist the Oakland and Berkeley fire departments. Despite efforts of the fire fighters it was impossible to check the flames until heavy loss had been caused by the burning of trees set out by the People's Water company five years ago.
The origin of the fire is not known. Shortly before noon yesterday it was noticed by a resident and alarm was turned in. The Berkeley department could not cope with the situation and asked Oakland for help.
Fanned by a high wind, the fire went along the Tunnel road, sweeping several hundred acres. No serious loss was incurred except that of the burning of the trees.
