

IS BADLY AFFLICTED WITH CONSUMPTION

Prisoner Charged with Arson May Expose Other Prisoners to the Malady.

There is danger of prisoners at the county jail contracting consumption from Ed Stegall, confined at the jail pending the investigation of a charge of arson against him, according to Dr. J. E. King, county health commissioner. Stegall is suffering from consumption.

The matter was brought to the attention of Sheriff Steen by a letter which he received from Dr. D. S. Wiggins, of New Castle, health commissioner of Henry county. Dr. Wiggins enclosed a letter which he had received from Stegall.

Stegall's letter is appended: "I have been here in jail at Richmond for a week. Write me a letter in regard to my lung trouble. When you examined me I want you to write the officer that I am not in shape to be here in the shape my lungs are in. They said I had consumption. Write and tell just how I was when you examined me. I can't stand to be in here in this shape and my lungs hurt me awful bad. I can't get any fresh air in here. Please answer by return mail."

The Henry county physician's letter to Sheriff Steen follows: "Ed Stegall has consumption, proved by the state laboratory. Of course, confinement would be harmful to him. I know nothing of why he is in jail."

Upon receiving the letter the sheriff conferred with the county health officer, the latter advising the sheriff to see that care is taken in order that other prisoners at the jail do not contract the disease.

Stegall is unable to put up the cash bond required. His bond on the charge of arson was fixed at $1,000 a charge of drunkenness is also against the man and his bond on this charge was fixed at $100.

SHOWER ROSES ON GALLANT VETERANS

Great Spectacle Witnessed at G. A. R. Encampment at Los Angeles Today.

(National News Association) LOS ANGELES, Sept. 11.—While a million rose buds were showered down on them the veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic marched today at their annual encampment. For four miles between thousands of interested spectators they made their way. Every precaution was taken to prevent accident and injury, and despite the fact the day was clear and cool emergency hospitals were stationed along the course. The police gave the most stringent orders to prevent the breaking of the parade lines.

At the head of the column marched a gigantic rifle and drum corps. It was made up of the combined corps attending the encampment. Many of those too weak to attempt to march were driven over the course in carriages.

The rosebuds used to shower the veterans came from local gardens and from the famous rose garden in Pasadena.

GREETINGS OF POPE SENT TO DELEGATES

(National News Association) VIENNA, Sept. 11.—Greetings of Pope Pius X to the twenty-third Eucharistic congress which is in session in this city were delivered to the 150,000 delegates and visitors in attendance today when Cardinal von Rossum, the Papal legate, read the Papal brief to the assembled multitude in St. Stephens cathedral.

Although the congress opened yesterday the serious business of the great ecclesiastical gathering did not begin until the festival assembly opened today in St. Stephens.

Following the reading of the papal brief addresses were delivered setting forth the principles of the congress.

Religious services were held throughout the day and masses by home or visiting priests were said in all the Roman Catholic churches.

WHY ARE ARCHES AT THE GLEN?

And if They Are There, Why Not Have a Local Art Commission to Pass on Their Artistic Merits Before Erection?

BY ESTHER GRIFFIN WHITE.

There are sundry amusing things in this world.

Styles in women's clothes for one thing. And then there are the arches at the Glen.

Now the arch at the east entrance of the Glen is not so bad. In fact it does very well.

For a beer garden, say.

Or to some of those aggregations of suburban villas promoted by real estate agents on the fringes of mushroom metropolises.

You can see these weird entrances, savoring of the middle ages, when draw-bridges, moats and private fortifications were in character, looming up at various intervals when you're riding in by the interurban.

This is not saying, however, that that arch was not put up with proper spirit and intent.

But by all the laws of aesthetics it does not belong where it is.

It does not fit into its setting.

If we are going to have public monuments and what the writer has many a time and oft described in the column as "decorative accessories," let them be constructed on something besides those famous "plans and specifications."

Why not make up a civic art commission and submit such intended constructions to them for approval or lack of it.

Such art commissions are current nowadays everywhere.

New York has one, and other places.

Why not Richmond, Indiana.

This column hereby nominates William Dudley Foulke, as chairman of such a momentous body—although it is hard to have a chair—may be something of a bull—to confer with Mr. B. A. Kennepohl of the Board of Public Works.

These two gentlemen, without rival in their respective fields of erudition, could get together, nominate a third person to act as referee and call a mass meeting of interested citizens to discuss the merits or demerits of those plans and specifications which the city engineer will draw up for the ornament, alleged, of the west entrance to the Glen.

"Now is the time to insure," so to speak.

If all the people who say they don't want that arch at the east entrance duplicated, even in part, and all those who violently rant against it at all, will get together before ground is broken and the plans and specifications begin to body forth under the physical vision, they'd better get together now.

Because the chautauqua shekels have been garnered into the city treasury and ere long these mighty civic works will loom large in the east end.

However long it may take council to get that sanitary fountain the Daughters of the American Revolution presented to the city out of the cellar, where it has long languished in disrepair, officialdom will lose no time in formulating the monument to the old soldiers at the west entrance to our beautiful municipal breathing place.

Haste then, civic beautifiers.

The truth is that these arch things at the Glen's mouth are more or less absurd.

And this with all due respect to Mr. Ed. Hollarn, custodian of the park.

Mr. Hollarn has been one of the best custodians the Glen has ever had. He has the interests of the park at heart and his desire to protect the trees should commend him to every citizen of this town. It is also his desire to grade the hill west of the lake and grow it with vines or grass or shrubbery and thus remove one of the worst and most inexcusable eye-sores in the park.

Hollarn, in fact has suggested that some of the chautauqua money be used to this end.

It will, he states, take about six hundred dollars.

And certainly this should be done before monuments of an alarming and anomalous character are erected in the foreground.

The truth is these arches for the Glen ought to be referred to a civic primary.

DEATH PACT CAUSE FOR THE TRAGEDY

(National News Association) BOSTON, Sept. 11.—A death pact is believed by the police to be behind the killing of Miss Mabel Clayton at the Preble house early today by Frank E. Ogilvie of Melrose, who afterward shot himself in the right temple.

The young woman died at the Reel hospital within half an hour from a bullet wound in the head.

Ogilvie is dying.

Some sheet music containing the song "Let's Forget We ever Met" which was found in the hotel room, strengthens the theory the couple had resolved to die together. The song was open at the last verse where a line reads: "Until we say goodbye."

Two seats for a Boston theater were found. Apparently the two had resolved to spend their last hours on earth as happily as possible. From the theater it is believed they went to the hotel where Ogilvie registered shortly after midnight.

Let the people vote on the proposition.

The park belongs to them.

But they seem to have little to say on the disposition made of its landscape.

Richmond doesn't want to make itself ridiculous.

It has one of the most extraordinary parks of its sort in the country. A piece of perfect natural beauty. Without artificial bolstering.

These arches and monumental entrances are, therefore, out of harmony with the character of the landscape.

For an amusement park with shoot the shutes and other insane devices for amusing the uncouth, they are appropriate.

But for a pleasure ground made up of rolling landscape they are out of keeping.

This should be taken into account by local officialdom.

There's no use pooch-pooching at such things.

For certain artistic canons are as fixed as the stars.

And they remain fixed despite their disregard.

Why not admit there are some things you don't know as much about as others.

The writer freely admits she knows nothing about constructing a cement sidewalk. Or building a skyscraper. Or performing an operation for appendicitis.

And a million other things.

And maybe there are people here in town who could and would be better judges of this arch affair than others.

"The finest thing in the world is to say 'I don't know.'"

Especially when you don't.

People are too afraid of what other people will think of them if they say they don't.

When the fact is that a person of only ordinary shrewdness can always tell that you don't know a thing even if you say you do.

The writer once encountered Mayor Zimmerman in an art exhibit.

And has always admired him because he said he didn't give a celebratory about certain "features" of the affair.

"The fact is," said Dr. Zimmerman, "that I don't care anything about art. What I'm interested in is horses."

Not that the writer agreed with him.

For that he has an art sense, even if he doesn't admit it, is illustrated in his determination to take the tracks out of the Glen.

And in the removal of sundry hideous bill-boards which defaced the civic landscape.

And in the possession of some very handsome bits of teakwood furniture and other Japanese curios.

But if everybody was as frank how much nicer it would be.

If only some of our highbrow would say—

"I don't give a hang about opera. What I like is ten cent vaudeville."

But of course the line must be drawn somewhere.

All the same a lot of people think that if monuments are going to be erected at the approaches to the city park they ought to have some artistic raison d'etre.

By the way, why not remove the amateur zoo to some less conspicuous but just as convenient spot, and enlarge it.

Everybody likes the animals. That is nearly everybody.

But they are an eyesore and plague spot where they are.

Why not move them to the open place east of the elk park, and put them into habitable quarters with a special keeper.

As it is they are not given proper treatment through lack of special knowledge of their needs.

Some of these animals are undoubtedly insane.

So said a noted scientist who passed through here a few years since and visited the Glen.

Properly looked after an enlargement of the local zoo would prove an interesting phase of the park's attractions.

But it should be moved from its present location.

CHARGE OF ARSON ON MRS. HALDERMAN

Wife of New Paris Man Will Be Arraigned at Eaton on Monday Morning.

(Palladium Special)

EATON, O., Sept. 11.—Confronted by a charge of arson, Mrs. Cora Halderman, wife of Dr. Allen S. Halderman, of New Paris, will be arraigned next Monday in the common pleas court for trial before Judge A. C. Risinger.

The return of such an indictment against the woman followed one of the many outbreaks of domestic unpleasantness brought into the spotlight.

Mrs. Halderman and her husband, Dr. Allen S. Halderman, of New Paris. It is alleged that after a difference between the couple Mrs. Halderman started a fire which partially destroyed their picturesque home, "The House of Gables," opposite the Cedar Springs health resort, near New Paris.

The origin of the fire was generally termed mysterious, and a state fire marshal made an investigation, with the result that a grand jury nearly one year ago returned an indictment against the woman. This fact became known and before county authorities could apprehend her, Mrs. Halderman had fled.

Efforts to locate her were not made and not until her attempt to dispose of an illegitimate child of her daughter did her whereabouts become known. The infant was left at the door of Mayor W. W. Zimmerman's home at Richmond.

The disposition of the child had been made, but in order to escape a more serious accusation, the mother confessed to Cincinnati police. It was then that she was located by local authorities, who placed her under arrest when she returned to Richmond a couple months ago. She has since been confined in the county jail.

A minor son in her custody at that time was taken from her and placed in the county children's home. Her husband, claiming that the lad is of unusual inventive qualities, has longed for his custody and has even threatened legal steps, but has failed.

The accused woman strenuously denies her guilt, and the outcome of the case is attracting considerable attention.

DIFFER IN OPINION

Do Insurance Agents on Society Woman Question.

Are society women good insurance risks?

Two insurance men of this city will give you negative and affirmative answers to that question. One insurance agent when asked the question declared that they are not, while another declared that the first knew not whereof he spoke.

Society women are not good risks because they live too high," said the first agent.

"Not good risks," exclaimed the second agent. "Why they are so good that you can't get them. It's a hard matter to insure them. They're the best risks in the world. They live longer than any other set of women. Why not? They get the best of everything. Plenty to eat and plenty of rest. Nothing to worry over but trifles. Suppose they do stay up late at night, they get lots of sleep the next day. It's the business man of wealth who plays the society game that is a poor risk. A man who stays up all hours and dashes down to the business grind in the morning is burning the candle at both ends."

The local association hopes to increase its membership far above the 1,000 mark by means of the campaign.

If it succeeds the local association will have a membership that in proportion to the population of the city is greater than that of any association in the state.

The committee of one hundred will be divided into two general divisions and each division will be divided into ten teams of five members each.

A card index of men employed in the shops and stores of the city has been arranged. A list of the boys in the shops and schools will also be made. The committee will attempt to add hundreds of the enrollment of the association.

Secretary Weed will attempt to take delegation of local railroad men to the fourteenth international conference of Railroad Young Men's Christian associations which meets at Chicago, October 3-6. Prominent railroad officials will address the convention.

Among the water vehicles the most extraordinary is the catamaran of the Madras fishermen. It consists of three logs lashed together flush with the surface of the water and is propelled with a single oar. The catamaran is really unsinkable and in rough weather could be used when an ordinary boat could not.
