

PRINTERS HOLD BIG GOOD WILL BANQUET FOR LOGAL BOSSES

effort that he restrained an outburst of feeling. His reply was broken when the emotions that swelled in his breast.

"For more than thirty years I have associated with criminals and the worst in the community. Seldom have I had the honor of being present at a banquet of the high class men who compose the local union of printers, and when I came here this evening, I little thought that words of kindness and appreciation would be spoken of me.

"I respect you, May God bless you, and if ever I can be of assistance to you, I want you to know that Gorman is your friend."

A sustained applause, exceeding in warmth the manifestations accorded any other speaker, greeted the conclusion of his speech.

Handley Toastmaster.

Lawrence Handley, a printer by trade, now superintendent of the city delivery at the post office was the toastmaster of the evening. He had been enquired into the job, according to his announcement, when the committee was organized. Will Bloom and E. J. Fitzgibbon, were unable to obtain Demas Coe, whose well known timidity and fear of being called on for a speech prevented his appearance at the banquet. Mr. Handley lampooned Mr. Coe in a poem, while other verses told of the heroic trials which formerly accompanied the printing of a newspaper in Richmond.

No printer's banquet could be held without the proverbial toasts of respect to the "devil." In this instance, Cyril Fitzgibbon, official holder of that distinction in The Palladium office, was given the honor.

"Cis's Noble Effort." Called on for a speech, "Cis" said with gusto:

"I don't know what to say, so I'll let you say it."

This brought down the house. Gus Maag and Charles Kirk, of The Palladium, who came recitations and songs contributed immensely to the pleasure of the evening.

William Dudley Poulke sent a communication expressing his regret at being unable to attend the love feast. The introduction of The Palladium, "as a budding young politician," so perturbed that swift footed forerunner that he hardly could respond.

Speaker's List.

Among other speakers were Raymond Nicholson, representing The Nicholson Press; Will Beller, state attorney; Theodore Hunt, formerly a printer now an undertaker; C. W. Genn of the Coe plant; R. G. Leeds, editor of The Palladium; E. H. Harris, publisher of The Palladium; L. M. Feeger, news editor of The Palladium; Will Bloom, linotype operator The Palladium, Mayor Zimmerman and G. O. Ballinger.

Ramsey Poundstone, associate editor of The Palladium, was among the invited guests.

John J. Steele, a former printer was a guest of honor.

The K. of P. temple was beautified by J. F. Gasthoff, official decorator for the Fall Festival.

Among the printers in attendance were S. L. Harrison, Harry Tubising, C. W. Genn, Howard VanSant, George Russell, C. Kirk, S. Knott, E. Wissler, James O'Brien, J. R. Howell, E. Green, E. Tucker, C. Mahach, A. Maag, E. Menke, F. Rinchoff, Fred Meier, Frank Spekenhler, Roy VanSant, C. Veregoe, Lon Grace, J. B. Maag, Mr. Ayres, Mr. Peele, Erie Glidewell, Will Bloom, E. J. Fitzgibbon and Mrs. L. Tucker.

Renk's orchestra added to the enjoyment of the affair by a varied musical program.

The Pythian Sisters served the banquet.

Greetings From Gordon.

The communication of J. Bennett Gordon, bringing to memory men who for years have been connected with the printing of newspapers, was hailed with delight by the printers. His full text follows:

"To My Dear Friends and Old Associates of Richmond Typographical Union, No. 301:

"I regret very much that I cannot be with you tonight to enter personally into the spirit of your reunion and good fellowship, but I trust you will take the wish for the actual performance in this case.

"There is no one set of men in the world for whom I hold a higher regard and for whom I have more pleasant memories than the printers of Richmond. Eleven years of daily contact with men gives one a correct measure of them, and this is doubly true in the sweet and hasty and stress of putting out a brand new, finished product every day. I know you believe men when I say that I never have met a more loyal set of printers than I worked FOR, and WITH for so many years in Richmond.

Tried Men's Souls.

"It is a far call from the days I began when Lon Grace and Will Nordyke operated that old Thorne typesetter in the Morning Telegram, with Albert Schurr as foreman and Oscar Drifmeyer pressman, stationary engineer and all-around general mechanic. Those were the days that tried men's souls and completely exhausted their vocabulary, all except Nordyke's. Well do I remember doing all the leg work, writing all the real news, and then taking a stick and setting up what little got in the paper, because none of the force came back to work after the midnight lunch. Ask me not why their absence! The wonder is they EVER came to work, considering the handicaps under which they labored. If ever any Christian citizen had ever seen the wonderful mechanism of a Thorne typesetter combined with a broken down flat-bed press, he would not ask why are printers atheists and drinkers of strong liquor. I am glad the invention of that contraption can not be charged against me on that great and final day.

"Perhaps it was this, my introduction in the newspaper business, that instilled in me a deep reverence for the patience of printers and a high regard for their ability to overcome all things and get out a paper under the most trying circumstances.

"Then came the transition period when I sat around the local desk of the Item and listened, open-mouthed, to Demas Coe tell me how he set type all the way from Seattle and Tacoma to Centerville, from which latter flag-station he notified his folks that he had a hat and shirt, and if they would kindly send him a pair of pants and some shoes he would forego the fatted calf and hasten home. I wondered then if ever I would grow up to be a big man like Coe.

Reflections on Past.

"Then Ezra Roe and Nettie Young and Fannie Elstro and Gus Maag and Henry Nobbe and gas engines and Ike Kline's old Hooz, three-revolution press and Roscoe Porter began to obscure my horizon, and things about a printing office began to lose some of their glamour and take on the aspects of an Inferno. I thought in those days the sole purpose of printers and printing machinery was to prevent the brilliant articles written by such celebrities as I had no doubt it was, or if they ever did get in type, the words would be so badly hatched up out in the press room to prevent the papers from ever being printed.

"Did I say press room? Why press room any more than composing room, mailing room, circulation room, dining room, storage room, reporters' room and an all-around hang out for Strick Gilligan to tell rotten jokes, for which he now gets real money and his name on Chautauque programs?"

"If once I while I did manage to smuggle myself into the stifling confines of that inferno in order to ascertain first hand just what it was that kept my articles from getting set up or the papers from getting printed until long after all decent citizens had gone to bed, and those who had not couldn't distinguish type, Ezra Roe would pounce on me and kick me out set me to tearing papers out of the patent folder.

"Remember that folder, Green? Green was the first name being I ever met in a printing plant, because he would occasionally climb down from a soap box from which he fed the strangled, lathe-buttressed press and confide in me that the plant was going to the devil and that the printer, real merit, else why should he be feeding a press when he might be cleaning streets or driving an ice wagon.

"Then came the first linotype, and the second. Soon thereafter the Item moved and got a new gas engine, which was worse than the old one. The old one simply refused to work at all any time. The new one was fickle. It worked overtime sometimes, so strenuously that Dr. Wampler and other neighbors complained to the police about its noise, and then, apparently regretful, it wouldn't emit a wheeze until after we had paid Dan Kiser three times what the engine originally cost to fix it. Dan fixed it all right, for he had to be called sometimes four times during the printing of an edition.

"It was a great epoch when the Item put in a perfecting press and stereotyping plant, and divided the press room from the composing room, put in another machine and installed Billy Bloom and Ed Arthur. Soon after Ed, came Ike, and then the printing business in Richmond settled down to something really worth while.

"Bugs Browner made his last call, being encouraged in that determination by Jimmy O'Brien and Shorty Fitzgibbon putting him to sleep under a gas meter.

"Today I venture the assertion that there isn't a city in the United States of any ways near the size of Richmond that has the standard of newspapers and newspaper work that Richmond has. If so, I don't know where they are.

"And it is due to the printers of Richmond. I am confining my brief review to my own experience, but I know that other publishers in Richmond hold the same view, and they can tell it on the ground.

"However, the printer is the man behind the gun. He is the man who makes the paper. He adds quality to it. He gives it a distinction. He creates its style. He is reflected in every page when you pick up and look at its make-up and its ads. He never has so much to do that he is not willing to try to do a little more—or, at least, that was my experience. He was never asked to speed up in order to get an 'extra' out ahead of the other fellow that he didn't respond, even after it appeared he was keyed to the breaking point.

Once a Carrier.

"I look back to the days when I began as a paper carrier and cub reporter and compare then and now, and I am sure there is not another business in the world that can show the progress, the absolute revolution the newspaper business does. Yet it has all been done by the printer, and men are in the ranks today doing perfect work at high speed that were in it before any of the modern inventions and lightning systems were dreamed of. Show me another profession that has kept step with progress that rapidly.

Show me another profession that is called up to work with accuracy, intelligence and at the same time with the stop-watch schedule and the speed that the printer has to work!

"I know of none. And to my mind the Union has been the cause of it. It has weeded out the drunken printer, the traveling hobo, the careless, the 'soldier' and given to the world a profession that approaches experts, even among the most ordinary of its members.

Proud of Printers.

"I am proud of my friends among the printers wherever I have been. I never have worked anywhere that I have not handled the making and come in contact with the printer, and I have never yet failed to find him loyal to a fault, willing to strain a point, and as anxious to make a better paper than the opposition as though he owned the whole shop. Nowhere have I found men more loyal than in Richmond. There are great fields of information about the newspaper game I have yet to learn, but I have at the same time learned a great many things about the game—and ninety per cent of my knowledge came from the printer working over the forms or at the machine or at the case, rather than from the owner, the fellow in the front office, or the 'journalist' at the club.

"J. M. Coe has a motto: 'Printer—One who prints.' That's the answer. If you want to know how to print, ask the man who does it. That's his business.

"May all the boys in No. 301 prosper, and my wish is that they may hold me in as high regard as I hold them in. Sincerely yours,

"J. B. GORDON."

Captain Larry Doyle, of the Giants, who was hurt in an automobile accident last week, was a spectator at the Red Sox-Yankees game at the Polo grounds, New York, Monday, and appeared to be in first class shape.

President Lynch of the National League, predicts the Giants will win the world's championship.

FIRST BATTLE OF SERIES IN NEW YORK ON OCT. 7

In New York City, beginning next Tuesday, the first battle of the baseball championship of the world will be staged.

The second game will be played in Philadelphia, after which the games will alternate between the two cities. This will be the third consecutive year that the first game in the world's series has been played in New York.

By guessing correctly on the flip of a coin the managers of the New York club won the decision as to the time and place for opening the series.

The rules of the series will be the same as in former years, except that in case of a tie the teams will not remain in the city to play it off, but will adhere to the rules governing the alternating of cities for each successive game. When a game is postponed the teams will remain in the city where the game is postponed, until it is played off.

ORGANIZE SIX TEAMS

"Y" Bowling Committee Unable to Get 8 Teams.

Slow progress has marked the endeavors to organize a Y. M. C. A. bowling league for the coming winter. A committee was appointed a couple of weeks ago to line up players for an eight-team league. Although they have devoted considerable time to the work, it was reported at the meeting last night that it will be impossible to organize the league on better than a six team basis.

The committee will drop the work until after the Fall Festival, when an other meeting will be called to classify the teams according to professions and trades and to arrange a playing schedule.

FIELD GOALS

Coach Williams of Minnesota, is drilling his team in the fielding their faults in Saturday's game. There was much fumbling, and the veteran leader today declared this play must be corrected. Hard drills and scrimmage was on today.

Coach Zupke's Illinois team was given a real test yesterday against the heavy freshmen team in a regular battle.

Ted Coy, who has been coaching Rutgers, has joined the Yale staff of coaches. On Friday there will be signal drill. Tom Shevlin, the old-time star, is coaching the ends.

There is very little doing at Annapolis in the way of football practice. In consequence it is feared that the Mid-dies will go down to defeat when they meet the University of Pennsylvania eleven on Saturday. The policy of making no elaborate preparations for any game save with the Army is being rigidly observed.

TURNER RETURNS

CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., Sept. 30.—Wabash football prospects were materially brightened yesterday by the return of H. Turner, the 195-pound lineman of last year's eleven. This addition to the team now fills up the line, and Coach Thurber will now turn his attention to the back field. The second team last Saturday held the varsity to a 13-0 score after a full sixty minutes' of hard play.

LADY ARTHUR PAGET

The many American friends of Lady Arthur Paget, who was Miss Mary Stevens of New York, will rejoice to know that she has practically recovered from her long illness. For two or three years Lady Paget has been practically an invalid, the result of a slight accident which happened to her in her London home. Despite her indisposition Lady Paget did much entertaining until the present season when her doctor commanded absolute rest. By obeying the physicians' orders Lady Paget is now almost well. She will remain quietly at the Royal Hospital here until next month, when she returns to London.

The players eligible to participate in the series are:

New York—Burns, Cooper, Crandall, Doyle, Demaree, Fletcher, Fromme, Grant, Herzog, Hartley, Marquard, Wiltse, Mathewson, Murray, Meyer, McLean, Merkle, Robinson, McCormick, Shaffer, Snodgrass, Thayer, Tesreau, Wilson, Schupp.

Lessons of 1912 Have No Results

Lessons learned last year, regarding what can be done with the additional down seems not to have been learned in vantage by what the stronger teams in the games this year have done to their opponents.

This year there seems to have been a stronger spirit of decision exhibited by the different teams and a manifestation of a cleaner league of what to do and how to do it in order to realize the greatest benefit out of the additional down allowed for the first time last year.

Any number of ten yard gains have been made in this year's games in a clean cut manner and if the condition holds good, permitting commensurate returns when equally matched teams come together, the season will be one of more clearly defined attainment than last.

Thus far there has been lots of action in the games of this year and most of the plays have been well opened out, yet, at the same time there has been an extensive amount of pretty team rushing.

HOT LINERS OFF THE BAT

Opinion over the merits and demerits of the Giants and Athletics is pretty evenly divided. Even among the experts each club has its defenders. George Stallings, manager of the Boston National and a keen judge, picks the Giants, while Napoleon Lajoie of the Cleveland Naps, one of the old masters of the game, picks the Athletics.

Joe Jackson, of the Cleveland Naps, believes that poor pitching will cost Athletics the world's series and predicts that New York will
