Circular from Hubbard, Price & Co. Through John S. Ernest, Southern Manager.) (Through John S. Erhest, Southern Manager.)

New York, Oct. 24.—The feeling in favor of lower prices is becoming more marked among the most careful observers who, while indisposed to act upon their convictions so far as the nearer mouths are concerned, are confident in their predictions for the later positions. The Southern markets show no strength, owing to the press of cotton from the interior, and our cables from Liverpool say that with continued large receipts that market will surely decline. Considerable sales have been made on the exchange by brokers of tired holders, who look upon the October movement as a sustaining influence of the balance of the market, and hence are willing to take advantage of the steadiness the exporters have artificially imparted to it. From appearances it would seem that the attempt to hold October up to the close of the month will be successful, and the heavy tenders of cotton are being received by the house we have previously referred to. The reason for this manipulation does not yet appear. The recent steadiness has caused a continued covering of the short interest, which removes an element of strength, and the market closing steady at a decline from last evening, shows a pronounced tendency in favor of lower prices. NEW YORK, Oct. 24 .- The feeling in favor of
