THIEVES PULL TOGETHER CARS BROKEN OPEN AND ROBBED AND HOUSES PLUNDERED.

H. H. Frierson and Phil Henry Arrested for Complicity in the Robbery of Central Railroad and Charleston and Savannah Cars-Frierson's Wife Wants a Thief and a Pieces-A Clue to Bigger Stealings.

There have been some daring robberies on the lines of the Central railroad and the the Atlantic Coast Line in the past two weeks. Freight cars have been broken into with axes, and jewelry, cutlery and other merchandise stolen. Even bales of cotton have been dumped out, conveyed to a place of concealment, the brands cut out, the bagging patched, and under cover of darkness brought to the city and sold readily.

On Friday last a negro by the name of Phil Henry was arrested by Constable McDermott on suspicion of complicity in the theft of cotton from the Charleston and Savannah railway, and was committed to jail by Justice Endres. Last might H. H. Frierson was arrested on the affidavit of F. A. Jones, freight agent of the Central rail-road, charging Frierson with being acces-sory before the fact to breaking into a car on Tuesday night last and stealing a bale of cotton of the value of $40. Frierson gave bail in the sum of $500, which was furnished later on.

LOOKING UP THE CASE.

The case has been very diligently worked by Constable McDermott. One day last week one of the officials of the Charleston and Savannah railway reported to Officer McDermott that three bales of cotton, shipped over the Atlantic Coast Line, had not reached their destination in this city.

One was missing Oct. 5. It was marked

M. & B. B., from Dr. M. Bellenger, and shipped from Hattersville, S. C., to C. L. stague & Co. The other two were from Wilcox, and shipped from Alle S. C., to Montague & Co., and were found missing Oct. 8. One of these bales has since turned up all right.

When Phil Henry was arrested he maintained a strict reticence until he learned that McDermott had got a clew to his connection with some cotton stealing. It was learned that on the night of Oct. 9 he had driven a cart out of town and brought a bale of cotton into the city before daybreak, in Frierson's cart and into Frierson's lot. That later in the forenoon Henry was seen with two $5 bills; that Frierson had sold a bale of cotton to Decker & Fawcett on that day, and Henry had driven the cart back from Decker & Fawcett's to Frierson's premises on Ann and Olive streets.

TOLD THE STORY.

When confronted with these facts, Henry weakened and informed the arresting officer that a negro by the name of Heartless Bacon had broken into a car on the Central road and thrown off a bale of cotton near the fair grounds. That it was understood between Bacon and Frierson that the latter should furnish a mule and cart to bring the bale of cotton into the city that night. Henry says that the arrangement was that he should drive the cart and Frierson should go along riding a mule, but that Frierson concluded that it would be best not to go along, but that Henry should take the mule and cart and go after the cotton.

He hitched up the mule, and when he got to the place agreed upon Bacon had rolled the cotton near the roadway, and was standing guard with a double-bareled shot gun and an ax. Henry and Bacon then loaded the cotton in the cart and drove it to Frierson's, arriving there between 3 o'clock and 4 o'clock in the morn-ing. Frierson sold the cotton and the money was equally divided by Frierson be-tween himself, Bacon and Henry.

RAILROAD OFFICIALS SURPRISED. When Officer McDermott learned this he visited Supt. Hege and Freight Agent Jones, of the Central, to inquire if they had lost any cotton. Here it was found that on the day that Frierson sold the bale of cotton three bales were missing. One was from Montgomery marked "J. B. J." one from Waynesboro marked "W. N. J.," and one from Eufaula marked "ONE | O."

Officer McDermott then visited Decker

Officer McDermott then visited Decker & Fawcett, where it was learned that on Wednesday last Frierson had delivered them a bale of cotton. It was not branded, and when questioned, Frierson said he had brought it from Liberty county. Henry was then committed to jail Friday night, and a diligant search was made for Becom and a diligent search was made for Bacon. But Bacon could not be found, although Frierson's place was spotted and put under close espionage. Saturday Frierson's wife appeared in Justice Endres' office and com-plained of what she called "McDermott's spies" about the place, and, not getting much satisfaction, she visited Justice Molina's office with a like complaint.

FRIERSON ARRESTED. Despairing of arresting Bacon yesterday it was thought best to arrest Frierson, as the game was flushed. Last night shortly after nightfall Officer McDermott, armed with a warrant, and accompanied by a Morning News reporter, went to Frierson's place, a barroom, eating house and small grocery, and Frierson was placed under arrest. Mrs. Frierson was prepared for the service of the ways of the property of th for the service of the warrant.

The reporter asked Frierson if he had any statement to make, and he remarked that he was not going to criminate himself. The Central railroad, he said, could not prove that the cotton he had sold was cotton taken that the cotton he had sold was cotton taken from their train. He said that Heartless Bacon was a "myth," and he remarked to Officer McDermott, "You couldn't find such a person." He did not know what statement Henry had made, and declined to say where he had sold the cotton. Officer McDermott said to Frierson that he had used rather strong language to the property, who had sought language to the reporter, who had sought only to get his version of the matter, and only to get his version of the matter, and Mrs. Frierson then took up the subject. She criticized her husband for the manner of answering, and then proceeded to detail the matter from her standpoint. FRIERSON'S WIFE'S STORY.

Mrs. Frierson's story is that Mary Bacon, a colored woman living in Indian street lane, near West Broad, had first introduced Henry to her as a horse doctor, and she employed him to treat a mule. Mary had requently tried to get a mule and cart for her friend, Henry, and on the morning of the night that Henry had gone after the cotton she had tried to get the mule and cart for him. That night, however, she had consented to let Henry have the mule and cart for $5. Henry said that his brother-in-law, living five miles out of town, owed him money, and that if he did not slip up on him at night and get a bale of cotton for the debt he would never get it. If any blame attached to the renting of the mule and cart, he said, it was hers; that it was understood she was to be paid $5 when the cotton was and and that her hyperal sold the cotton. sold and that her husband sold the cotton and retaining her $5, paid the rest to Henry. Henry had borrowed fifty cents from her a day or two before, leaving a silver watch and plated chain as security, and she asked him if he would not take his watch and pay that, and also $3.25 that she had sent to him by Mary Henry to pay for a bond in Justice Reynold's office for striking a boy, and he told her that he had pawned his work checks with two German's in the Old Fort and had to take them up. Henry said that Frierson's wife gave him $4.50 outright for the watch, and that he got it from Heart-less Bacon

AT JUSTICE ENDRES' OFFICE. Mrs. Frierson accompanied her husband, Officer McDermott and the reporter to Justice Endres' office where a long colloquy was had, and the woman excused her husband for being dull and not understanding the full nature of the questions. Frierson then said that he had sold the bale of cotton, which weighed 425 nounds at TW cents. which weighed 425 pounds, at 71/2 cents, caying Henry $25 81 for it and retaining the $5 for hire of a cart and mule. Justice Endres wrote out a commitment and Frierson was taken off by Officer McDermott in search of a bondsman. Mrs. Frierson then asked the reporter if he would not go down to her place. Arriving there, she went into a fuller detail of the facts, expressing a fear that she would be arrested, and that she said would be "awful." She admitted that there is such a person as Heartless Bacon, but she said that she had never had but one transaction with him. That she had loaned him 50 cents, and he Colored Woman Gets Her One—A had left a watch, coming back the next Suspicious Lot of Jewelry and Time day, giving her 60 cents, and taking the away. In the course of the interview the hint was dropped that the information was had that a car on the Central road had been broken in between Station No. 41/2 and Millen.

> A SUSPICIOUS OCCURRENCE. Mrs. Frierson listened attentively to this and stated that a very suspicious thing oc-curred last week. A negro whom she did not know came there and left a package at her husband's place. With a woman's curiosity she examined it and found that it con tained three clocks and a box of chains. She was afraid to have it in her house, she said, believing it to have been stolen, and she handed it over to an old colored man, Richard Adams, living just across the street. She said that she could get the property at a moment's notice; that the party leaving the package had been back once after leaving it and did not inquire for it. She asked the reporter what she should do with the goods, and she was advised to turn them over to some one for edvertising and identification. The reporter saw Mary Bacon.

> WANTED A THIEF. Mary denied emphatically that she had Mary denied emphatically that she had ever sought to hire a cart from Mrs. Frierson for Henry or any one else. "Miss Alice (alluding to Mrs. Frierson) asked me to get her a thief and I took Phil Henry to her. I never betrayed her, but she told me the cotton was dumped off at Monteith, and deceived me for it was dumped off at the deceived me, for it was dumped off at the race track. Do you suppose I would want to hire the cart and not get a dollar out of it? All I got was a drink of whisky from Miss Alice and a drink from Will. They calls him Phil Henry, but we knows him as Will. I don't propose to tell all I know now. Miss Alice was good to me, but when she tries to mix me up in it, I will tell a heap when I have to. I never introduced Henry as a hoss doctor. She wanted me to get her a thief, and I took Henry to her," As Mary was inclined to reserve a very large volume of information for the "big court," the reporter left her.

> LOOKED LIKE A FENCE. In the Frierson store Mrs. Frierson stood behind one counter and old man Adams on the other. The reporter was invited back in the dining-room, and at a signal Adams followed. On the table were three new clocks, two of which were very ornamental ones, a new watch and three bunches of watch chains. Adams said that the property was brought to him last week by Mrs. Frierson, who wanted him to retain it until an owner could be found for it, and the old man added, "is dis all you wants with me for I must be goin'," and with that he went out. Mrs. Frierson thought it best that the property should be taken to the Morning News office, advertised and identified. She did this, she said, to show that she would not have goods that might have been stoler on her premises. The goods were brought to the office and are advertised this morn

Mrs. Frierson went on to say that Heartless Bacon, whom she knows as "Jack,"
Phil Henry and Mary Bacon have been trying to use Mr. Frierson and herself as tools, and she believes that the package of clocks and jewelry left at the house is part of the plot. She says that her husband is dull, unsophisticated and easily duped. ROBBERY OF THE CARS.

There is little doubt that a portion of the jewelry recovered last night is from the theft one night last week on the Central road. The Central folks have been trying to keep it quiet, but it is known that a car was broken in with an axe and a lot of jewelry stolen. It is evident that a lautern was sused, as the stolen goods were carefully selected. Another car was broken in in the same manner and a lot of clothing stolen. Burned pieces of paper were found in the car, showing that they were used as a light. The Central has its detectives trying to hunt up the thieves, but they have made little progress thus far.

County Commissioners.

"Yes, I have some news," said Dr. E. J. Kieffer yesterday. "I have been informed officially that the committee of the county commissioners, appointed to investigate the complaint filed against me by City Physician Owens last week, will meet in the clerk's office to-morrow at 4 o'clock to look into the matter.

"I have no preparation to make," said Dr. Kieffer. "I have only been waiting to be called before the commissioners. I am glad that the commissioners will see exactly how the matter stands."

The matter stands."

The matter referred to was mentioned in last Thursday's Morning News. Dr. E. J. Kieffer, county druggist, was reported to the commissioners for refusing to furnish a colored man medicine free City Physician Owens filed the charge. free. City Physician Owens filed the charge. He states that the colored man was unable to pay for the medicine. Dr. Kieffer says to pay for the medicine. Dr. Kieffer says that he can prove that the negro was not a pauper, that he was an able-bodied man, and being such, he was barred from getting medicine free. The case will be thoroughly investigated to-morrow before Commissioners Read and Dorsett, the committee appointed at the last meeting to look into the matter.

Every effort is to be made to collect these debts, and the secretary is to receive a commission for all he collects.

The trust may be said to be in its infancy. It is to be governed by a board of directors which will meet monthly. One grocer was asked if the trust intended to raise the price of groceries, and he replied that it might hereafter take steps to prevent a cutting down of prices and attempt to regulate prices to prevent the present plan of slaughtering prices; that a certain profit above New York prices will very likely be estab-

The trust, it appears, will be able to agree on the deadheads, but it does not now appear that it will put up prices.

All the little towns along the line of the Central railroad are going into it with an ear trai railroad are going into it with an earnestness that means something. The premiums are larger by several thousand dollars this year than they were last year. We give $15,000 away in premiums this year. It is the expectation of the president to have at least fifteen counties represented by displays. Last year there were only about four. The railroad have consented to transport everything over their lines free. The Central railroad is doing its part in making the fair a success. The Central and East Tennessee, Virginia and Georgia railroad have each given $500 and Georgia railroad have each given $500 to the fair, besides reducing the rate to 1 cent per mile round trip. Where they have been planted in the rivers, he has noticed that they have grown very successfully. In the spring he will begin his plant of shad. Little more than ten months ago Mr. Hunt was promoted to the ticket agency here and during the time he has made a host of friends who will regret to see him leave. The promotion which he has received is well-earned, and which he has received is well-earned, and the Central railroad acted wisely in ap-pointing Mr. Hunt to the position. He re-turns to Augusta with the best wishes of his friends here. His resignation will go into effect as soon as his successor is ap pointed. in the Piano Club. THUS the DAVIS BROS, PIANO CLUB continues to fulfill its mission of gladdening bounded the mission of gladdening to home in our city. The HARRINGTON leads them all. The best Plano in the country for the money.

50 testimonials from leading citizens. None see it, but to buy it.

The HARRINGTON PIANO has, in a quiet and unostentatious manner, advanced itself in the favor of many dealers all over the country, who find it a most reliable in-strument in all respects. They can warrant it safely to give good satisfaction. It is thoroughly constructed, the scale is excellent, and the tone is sympathetic and at the same time powerful. We recommend it heartily.—The Musical Courier, New York,
