VOLUME XIX.

LAMAR, PROWERS COUNTY, COLORADO, WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1904.

NUMBER 8.

ALWAYS REMEMBER!!!

That there is at least one business in Lamar where the quality of goods sold is the governing principle upon which every effort is based.

We leave no stone unturned to supply you with the very highest grade of everything we handle, not one single department excepted.

You have noticed how this institution has grown in the last two years and we positively believe our success is due to our unceasing efforts to give the highest quality it is possible to get.

"QUALITY IS REMEMBERED LONG AFTER PRICE IS FORGOTTEN"

County Notes

[From the Holly Chieftain]

The A. V. S. B. & I. L. Co., will begin harvesting its big crop of wild hay next week. J. Kemper, of Lakin, Kansas, who has put up the hay for the past two years, has the contract again this year.

Ikleman Bros. this week sold their handsome stone building on the corner of Fourth and Cheyenne streets to J. G. Christopher. Property is beginning to change hands in Holly, and at values that indicate the fullest confidence of the purchasers in the future of the town.

C. F. Liggett, editor of the News, came down from Lamar yesterday to look after his interests here.

W. S. Pardoner of New York, president of the Arkansas Valley Sugar Beet and Irrigated Land company, spent a few days here during the week looking over the lands and improvements belonging to his company.

[From the Holly News.]

D. B. Nowels and T. J. Saylor, of Lamar, were in Holly Saturday afternoon.

The Rocky Ford Tribune reviews Melon day in a lengthy article, commencing at the birth of the day and coming down to the present. The article is very interesting.

Out of 25 applicants to join the Modern Woodman lodge within the past three weeks, only one applicant failed to pass the rigid examination by the camp physician. This was on account of the applicant's heart being of abnormal size, which shows that there is nothing small about Holly people.

[From the Amity Optimist]

At a general drainage meeting held last Saturday night it was decided to extend the canal 2,000 feet farther east, and work will commence tomorrow morning.

J. H. Newman, president of the Amity Cantaloupe Grower's Association, reports the greater portion of that crop as being in good condition, although a trifle late in this section, and thinks there will be a large shipment from Amity.

[From the Granada Times.]

Assessor Rosacrans has been making an inventory of our various belongings, this week.

Granada will ship from nearly 1,000 acres of cantaloupes this year. It will be the best point in the Valley outside of Rock Ford.

Our farmers are fortunate in having an excellent prospect for every kind of crop. Cantaloupes and sugar beets are reported in exceptionally fine condition.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rosebrough and son, Eugene, and little daughter and Miss Belle Haven, returned from their visit to Illinois and the World's Fair, last Saturday morning. Vernon Rosebrough remained in Illinois but will return before school opens.

Rev. W. A. Pratt, pastor of the M. E. church of this place, has secured from a friend of his in Syracuse, New York, a gift of $100, which he will use toward getting the furniture for the new church. Rev. Pratt certainly deserves great praise from the people of Granada for his untiring and successful efforts to secure funds to complete and furnish the new M. E. church.

The Party of Retraction.

By its present attitude on finance, which is one of silence in the platform and of an irrevocable gold standard in the nominees, the democratic party presents itself as receding from its paramount issue of 1896 and 1900. If there were a democratic majority in the next Congress, the gold standard would unquestionably be attacked, for the platform says nothing to prevent it. What Parker would do as President is merely conjectural. He might fight but that is something his closest advisers, Hill and Belmont, have never yet done openly. Even by a dubious support of the gold standard, the democratic party doubles on its record since 1896. All the tremendous noise of the free silver crusade is admitted to have been but sheet-iron thunder. The gold standard is conceded to be the idea to stand by.

The republican party marches onward. It does things, positively and effectively. Its time is not occupied in taking back and explaining. It sticks to its policies and clinches them by administrative results. The approval of the people abides with it because of the constant demonstration that the side it takes, and holds firmly, is the right side. Give the democratic party eight years and it works around to the same view, because further denial has become absurd. If the democrats carried the election this year they could only block the wheels of legislation, snarl at accomplished facts and put fresh rods in pickle for their own party. As a minority they can be shoved forward, as in the case of the gold standard. But as a majority they bring calamity upon the country and dig a deeper pit for themselves. Their party wobbles and reverses itself. It is unworthy of confidence. —Globe-Democrat.

President Roosevelt's Response.

Custom has made the official notification of the presidential nominee an important political ceremony, and the response of the candidate is regarded as a contribution to campaign literature second only to the official letter of acceptance and the party platform.

There will therefore be much interest in what Mr. Roosevelt said at Oyster Bay Wednesday, and this interest will be increased on account of the brevity and the straightforwardness of his remarks.

The republican presidential candidate has lost no time in glittering generalities, but he has presented a statement of plain facts that cannot fail to make their impression upon the minds of all candid voters.

Mr. Roosevelt evidently appreciates the fact that the strongest possible evidence that can be presented by the republicans is the record of their accomplishment in national administration, and against this solid record the flimsy criticisms, invectives and misrepresentations of the democratic platform can have no effect.

The president has wisely left to his formal letter of acceptance a detailed discussion of the political issues of the day, but his address in response to the notification committee contains a condensed summary of them which leaves nothing essential in doubt as to the attitude of the president and the party which he represents. —Pueblo Chieftain.

Must Be Kept Inviolable

For this campaign the democratic party has made no issue paramount. The only important declaration made in the platform, which differs radically from the republican position, is that in regard to the tariff. "We denounce protection as a robbery of the many to enrich the few," is the essential part of the platform declaration in regard to the tariff. Because it is the only important declaration of policy essentially different from the republican policy in regard to the same matter, it may be expected to become ex proprio vigore, the paramount issue.

Tariff reduction was the paramount issue of the campaign of 1892. It may be expected, therefore, that this year's campaign will be along the same lines as that of twelve years ago, but not, that its result will be the same. The people of the United States have not forgotten the lesson they learned in the succeeding four years.

The republican policy of protection for American industries and American labor is as certainly established as is the gold standard. Recognition of that fact by the democratic party is only a question of time. The democracy will be compelled to back down from its anti-protection position just as it was compelled to repudiate its declaration that the war for the maintenance of the integrity of the Union was a failure, just as it has been compelled to admit, tacitly, that its demand for the free coinage of silver was a blunder.

Confronted with the question whether the republican protective system shall be maintained or destroyed, the American people will not hesitate to make emphatic reply that it must and shall be kept inviolate. —Albany "Journal."
