Bat Masterson, the transplanted westerner, is something of a wit. He is also the soul of hospitality. The other day he was putting himself on the outside of a soft drink in the Delavan bar when a friend came in. "Won't you join me?" Mr. Masterson inquired.

"I've had nine drinks in the last half hour," said the friend. "It would be a work of supererogation on my part to order another."

Work of superirrigation, you C. B. Thoman. mean," corrected Mr. Masterson.-New York Times.

At The Crawford The presentation of "His Absent Boy" by Harry Corson Clarke last night at the Crawford was one of the most delightful features of the carni val, and the large audience which attended were more than pleased with the performance. The play was a comedy from beginning to end and if there was one person in the audience who did not enjoy a hearty laugh it was certainly no fault of Mr. Clarke and his company, for the audience was kept in roars of laugh ter and showed their appreciation by tremendous applause. Mr. Harry Corson Clarke is no stranger here, having appeared here the last two seasons and each time winning many friends.
