When Stevenson Was Poor.

Robert Louis Stevenson was poor circumstances in San Francisco before he made his hit with the world. During the time that he used to loaf, peniless, upon the lawn where afterward they put up a bronze and marble statue to him, he picked up a few quarters acting as super in the old California theater, in Bush street.

Hint Not Taken.

"From the grammatical standpoint," said the fair maid with the lofty forehead, "which do you consider correct, 'I had rather go home' or 'I would rather go home'?"
"Neither," promptly responded the young man. "I'd much rather stay here."

His Little Joke.

At the breakfast table Good Friday morning Wilfred was given a hot cross bun. It was very small, raisinless and burnt.
"Ma," said the little fellow, disappointedly, "this seems to be a hot cross bun."—Woman's Home Companion.

The Retort.

Here is a retort which a "dull student" once made: Professor—"You seem to be very dull. When Alexander the Great was your age, he had already conquered the world. Student—"Well, you see, he had Aristotle for a teacher."
—Chambers' Journal.

A Telltale Nail.

Dr. John Donne, the famous English livine and poet, who lived in the reign of James I., was a veritable Sherlock Holmes in bent of mind.

He was walking in the churchyard while a grave was being dug when the sexton cast up a moldering skull. The doctor idly took it up, and, in handling it, found a headless nail driven into it.
This he managed to take out and conceal in his handkerchief. It was evident to him that murder had been done.
He questioned the sexton and learned that the skull was probably that of a certain man who was the proprietor of a brandy shop and was a drunkard, being found dead in bed one morning after a night in which he had drunk two quarts of brandy.

"Had he a wife?" asked the doctor.

"Yes."

"What character does she bear?"

"She bore a very good character, only the neighbors gossiped because she married the day after her husband's funeral. She still lives here."

The doctor soon called on the woman.
He asked for and received the particulars of the death of her first husband.
Suddenly opening his handkerchief, he showed her the telltale nail, asking in a loud voice:

"Madam, do you know this nail?"

The woman was so surprised that she confessed and was tried and executed.

Night Window Shopping.

"I used to think the money spent for light in show windows from closing time till morning was wasted," said a Fifth avenue merchant, "but I have changed my mind about it, and now I keep my windows lighted until 3 a. m. every night but Sunday. I took the trouble to make some investigations as to the value of shop windows before I changed my method. I found that in daytime, when the streets are filled, no one has time for more than a glance at the displays. But at night, and particularly late at night, while there are fewer people out, they are not in a hurry and many of them stop to examine critically the goods shown. I have frequently seen men and women, too, who were window shopping before my place at night inside buying the things the next day. Many people in New York keep themselves posted on fashions and on what is to be had in the stores by 'window shopping.'—New York Sun.

Man and the Horse.

Men are apt to say severe things of the absurdities to which many women will submit at the latest of fashion, but, really, they are every bit as bad.
A good horse has a naturally arched neck, an inferior one has not. But the owner of the latter must pretend that his sorry steed is blessed with blood, and to effect the deceit he slaps on a monstrous bearing rein and defies public opinion. A London carman, who is in many things a bit of a brute, will ease his horse when going up hill by removing the reins which keep his head up, but whoever saw the same kindness extended to a horse drawing a brougham? The same slavish following of fashion marks the attention to the horse's tail. The thoroughbred has his three-quarter length bush, so have the matched pair for the brougham, but what man would drive a cob which had a tail bigger than a half expanded fan?—St. James' Gazette.

Wood Burners in Paris.

Despite all modern improvements, Paris still heats its offices and its houses to a large extent with wood.
Its bakers and confectioners use hardly anything else for fuel. It burns up whole forests of timber every year, and extensive forests in several regions of France are reserved for supplying it with fuel. Coal is scarce in France and dear and not of very good quality. Besides, the Parisians are conservative in home matters. The cheery appearance of the glowing log on the hearth appeals to them, and most likely generations will pass before they give up burning wood altogether.— Philadelphia North American.

Prepared For Temptation.

Little Tommy had been forbidden to swim in the river, owing to the danger. One day he came home with unmistakable signs of having been in the water. His mother scolded him severely.
"But I was tempted so badly, mother," said Tommy. "That's all very well, but how'd you come to have your bathing suit with you?" Tommy paused and then said, "Well, mother, I took my bathing suit along thinking I might be tempted."—Dundee Advertiser.

India Dialects.

India has hundreds of dialects, which may all be classed under three great heads—the Sanscrit, Pracrit and Magadh. The Sanscrit is the fundamental language and that of the Vedas, the Pracrit the vernacular language in many dialects and the Magadh or Misra is that of Ceylon and the Islands.

An Advocate of Credit.

"The way to get on," said the business man, "is to conduct your operations on a cash basis."
"Not in politics," answered Senator Sorghum. "Promises are just as effectual as cash and not nearly so dangerous."—Washington Star.

Was It Fresh?

An Indiana woman, as she examined the food brought from the market, said to her little son, "Did the grocer tell you this turkey was quite fresh?"
"No'm," the boy answered; "he just said to hurry home with it as fast as I could."

General ideas and great conceit are always in a fair way to cause terrible mischiefs.—Goethe.

The Questions They Ask.

The capacity of the average small boy for asking questions is practically unlimited, but it is doubtful whether more searching inquiries have ever been made by a boy than those propound by a youngster to his father, who had taken him for a steamer trip.
Here is a partial list:

"Is that water down there any wetter than the water in the Atlantic ocean?"
"What makes the water wet?"
"How many men could be drowned in water as deep as that?"

ROYAL
BAKING
POWDER
Absolutely Pure
A Cream of Tartar Powder free from alum or phosphatic acid
Makes Home Baking Easy

"Is that big man with the gold buttons on his coat the father of all those men who do whatever he tells them to?"
"Where do all those soapbuds behind the boat come from?"
"Could a train go as fast on the water as this boat?"—Chums.

Mad Dogs.

Mad dogs do not attack people.
"When a dog has the rabies," said a physician, "he has lost control of his body, and what he does is mechanical.
His jaws snap involuntarily, and if he encounters any object, whether animate or inanimate, he is likely to bite it. But a mad dog does not attack as does an angry dog. He does not pick out a victim or use any strategy. For this reason dogs suffering from rabies are less dangerous than is supposed.
No grown person need fear them, for all he has to do is to get out of the way. The dog will not chase him. Of course, young children are in danger, as they do not know how to dodge the brute."

Dog That Climbed a Tree.

Can a dog climb a tree? A correspondent writes: "While on a walk on snowshoes in New Hampshire we tracked a porcupine to a balsam fir, in which it had taken refuge. My Scottish terrier climbed the tree, pulling herself up from branch to branch to a height of about seven feet, where a space of bare trunk separated her from the porcupine, which had watched her progress with evident alarm. The terrier made several ineffectual attempts to scale the smooth bark and finally jumped down into the snow." And of another curious trait the same writer continues: "This little dog and her mate, now dead, though enthusiastic fire worshippers at home, never sat near the bonfires built at luncheon or tea time on winter walks, but dog holes in the snow at a little distance, in which they curled themselves up after the manner of their primitive ancestors."—Chicago News.
