in four acts as presented by the Harry St Clair Stock Company at the Brinkman tonight, is without doubt one of the best Western comedy dramas written. At present it is having an extended run with all stock companies in the larger cities, and has only recently been released for stock productions, having been one of the most successful road shows ever offered the public. It abounds in rich comedy from start to finish and the story is of a particular town on the border that has been constantly annoyed by murders, stage robberies etc. and the citizens form themselves into a committee to make the town an example to surrounding towns, by punishing the offenders. A feud between two Southerners forms the base of the plot and taken all in all, this play is one that is bound to please each and every person attending the theatre for the three nights of this production.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Thompson entertained at 6 o'clock dinner last evening. The guests were Rev. and Mrs. J. H. Randahl, Andrew Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Brawn and son Louis, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Berglund and daughter Mildred, Mrs. Berg, Mr. Nelson and Mrs. Oscar Christenson and daughter Alma.

W. B. MacLachlan, who operates a passenger boat line on lake Bemidji during the summer months has commenced launching his big boat, "The City of Bemidji" and is over hauling the engines for the summer trips. The captain will have his boat in the water as soon as the south end of the lake is clear.

At The Grand
 "Antony and Cleopatra" gorgeously and sensationally presented with actors of Rome acting as the Romans do, will play at the Grand Sunday afternoon and Sunday and Monday evening. Cavalcades and mobs with thousands of scurrying horses, marshaled hosts and a crush of human warriors seem the living things, so vividly is the great picture brought out. Opening with Antony landing his army on the banks of the Cidmus, the story reels itself into the emotions with fascinating variants of movement, big, gentle, intoxicating and inspiring. The daughter of the Ptolemies is superbly enacted by Gonzales and Antony is one of the Novellis—all good Actors in Italy. Mathilde had Charmain preserved intact instead of being cut down to a page, and she was vivid, so rhetorical and magnificent-dramatic is the historical crawl in the waves' edges and the fabulous maneuvers of Octavius' warriors. Cleopatra discovering Charmain's love for Antony has her whipped and disgraced and thrown to the crocodiles of the Nile. And the huge brutes of the waters crawl up to the marbles' glistening ledge and dive into the water when Charmain's lacerated body is tossed to them. Thus can the silent drama outstrip mere words, words! They do not say so. They do it. It is indescribably poetic and tragic, the potent, romantic sensations being almost too flagrantly expressive, too full for utterance by all means.

That Poole Story.
 In his book, "My Memories," Lord Suffield, who was considered "the very pink and model of fashion," sets us right about the well known story of Poole, the tailor, which is sometimes attributed to the Prince of Wales: "As a matter of fact, it was not the Prince of Wales, nor was I the witty author of the repartee. The true story is that Poole went down to Bradgate park to visit Lord Stamford, and on his return he was asked by Alfred Montgomery, the wittiest man of his age, how he had enjoyed his visit and whom he had met. 'Well, sir,' replied Poole, 'the fact is that the company was rather mixed.' 'But — it all, my good fellow,' retorted Montgomery, 'surely you did not expect them all to be tailors?'

Victoria Water Lilies.
 The giant water lilies which are known now as Victorias, after the late queen of England, are natives of the warmer portions of South America, where they thrive in lagoons and in the quieter portions of rivers. Haenke, a German botanist, first reported their discovery in 1801 and startled all Europe by his description of their gigantic leaves and flowers. Almost half a century elapsed in fruitless experiments to introduce the plant into the old world when in 1849 the first flower opened on the Duke of Devonshire's estate at Chatsworth, England.
