CANDIDATES PASS.

Three Special Trains Pass at Elmira, New York—Another Mob Meets Roosevelt.

Elmira, N. Y., Oct. 30.—The Roosevelt party made an early start westward today. Stops will be numerous, the tour finally ending at Rochester tonight. The general conversation party was of a riotous nature at times last night. Roosevelt said the first attack on the carriage in which he and Senator Fassett were riding came from small boys. "I saw the boys 'fire' vegetables and decayed fruit," said governor Roosevelt. "It was a body of grown men, however, who pushed up against the carriage and threw lithographs of Stanchfield in my face. Several times it looked as if it was the intention of the crowd to rush us out of the carriage, but the men on horseback gathered round and prevented that." The Cornish club which got into a fight in attempting to defend its banner from the attack suffered severely. Six men were quite badly wounded with stones. They were finally escorted to the station by the police, and put aboard the special train. The incident this morning was the passing of three presidential trains at Elmira. Candidate Bryan went by on his train a few minutes later, no courtesies being exchanged.

Candidates Speak in The Rain.

Hornellville, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Bryan began his last day's work in the campaign at Addison, making a speech to a large crowd in the rain. He spoke here half an hour in the rain to another large crowd, which was close by attentive. Corning, N. Y., Oct. 30.—Roosevelt addressed a large audience here in the rain, making the disorder at Elmira, last night the subject of his remarks. The contest in this campaign, he said, "is a contest against just that type of thing."

Condensed Telegrams.

John W. Yerkes, collector of internal revenue, and candidate for governor of Kentucky, resigned his position today. London officials say that Russia's reply to the Anglo-Saxon argument lacks the definiteness so desired by Salisbury. Wang Wen Shao, imperial treasurer of China is dead from natural causes. A collision between a passenger and freight train in St. Louis resulted in the death of one man and injuring of six.

On Porto Rican Citizenship.

New York, Oct. 30.—Application was made by Frank Jurabe, a Porto Rican, for a peremptory writ of mandamus directing the board of registry to register him as a voter on the ground that he became an American citizen by virtue of the cession of Porto Rico, by Spain to the United States, has been denied by Justice Friedman, who says the treaties taking over Porto Rico did not make the inhabitants of the territory citizens of the United States, but left the determination of their civil rights and their political status to the future action of congress.

HON. O. A. LARRAZOLO, NEXT DELEGATE TO CONGRESS.

Hon. Octaviano A. Larrazolo, the subject of this sketch and democratic candidate for delegate to congress from this Territory, was born at El Valle, state of Chihuahua, Republic of Mexico, just forty years ago, coming to the United States when a babe in arms.

At the age of ten years as the protegee of the well-remembered Archbishop Salpointe, he went to Tucson, Arizona, and has since that time lived in the United States. He lived under the protection and in the favor of Archbishop Salpointe for six years, and was then sent to St. Michael's college in Santa Fe, New Mexico, where he spent two years. With the exception of this assistance, Mr. Larrazolo is a self-made man, for at the age of eighteen he went to El Paso, Texas, where his parents then resided, and taught school for two years. He was a hard student and was after a while made assistant in the office of the district clerk at El Paso, afterwards being elected district clerk of El Paso county for two successive terms of two years each.

During these years of clerical service, Mr. Larrazolo applied his spare hours to the study of law, for which his courteous bearing, his fine oratorical powers and his acumen, fully developed in later years, well fitted him. In 1887, at the age of twenty-seven, he was admitted to the El Paso bar, and few men of any nationality ever carried with them to the law's forum greater natural talents. He soon attracted attention and took his place among the legal fraternity, carving his future with an indomitable ambition, as honorable as it was vaulting.

It was not unnatural that this young man, feeling the tingling of youth's fiery blood, endowed with the energy that impels men forward, burning with the fire that kindles a flame on the altar of fame, and blessed with the talents that accompanied his ambition with the means of its satisfaction, should feel a lively interest in the current political questions of the day, and with this spirit antagonize or advocate them. The young student carried with him no inherited faith in politics, no father's prestige, no family following. Spread before him like a crenate panorama was the turmoil of American political struggles. The history of party policies was as an atlas spread before him, where he could trace with retrospective finger the pathway of victory and defeat and read there the various and varying declarations of principles. He who runs may read, it hath been said. It was not with this ambitious novice an inheritance of faith and imbibing of party principle from the maternal breast; the logic was not inculcated from early teaching, but Octaviano

Larrazolo, native of a foreign state, stood upon adopted soil as the traveler who views the limitless plain, wondering whence the trail came and whither it led. A study of party history decided him to cast his fortunes with the democratic party because it was the party of the people, (and verily he was one of them), and he has been an active and influential member of it since he made his choice. Poor in all the influences of heredity except the proud spirit of gentility, nobility of purpose and humble integrity, his fortune not forerun with ancestral power, he vaulted into the arena armed with the sword of intellect and the shield of hope, and in all his gladiatorial contests he has never yet placed his foot upon the neck of a foe, waiting for the command for death.

The people of El Paso county elected him district attorney by an overwhelming majority, and there is no man to say that he ever wore an iron heel for the unfortunate. He held other minor offices in El Paso county, which evidenced the esteem in which he was held by the masses of his fellow citizens, with whom he was always very popular. After the expiration of his term as district attorney, Mr. Larrazolo decided to cast his fortunes with the people of New Mexico, among whom he had a wide acquaintance, made in his school days at St. Michael's college, and who had watched his upward course with equal pride and pleasure for Octaviano Larrazolo never met an honorable and just man without impressing him with an appreciation of those gentle and manly traits that steal men's hearts.

Accordingly, in the fall of 1894, he came to Las Vegas where he has lived for six years, practicing his chosen profession, and the odor of that living is pleasant in the nostrils of his friends. He is essentially a family man with a noble regard for the sacredness of home and conjugal ties. He has eight children, four of his first wife and four the children of his present wife, a refined and cultured woman who is a help most meet for her distinguished husband. Mr. Larrazolo owns a commodious and handsome home in Las Vegas and a stock and agricultural ranch in Mora county.

The young democratic candidate has an attractive personality, genial and urbane; the virility of his manhood is tempered with the gentleness of a woman. He is true to every obligation and has the courage of his convictions. As a lawyer, he stands well with the bar, and has never been guilty of sharp practice; as a politician, no man can truthfully speak him; as a husband and father, his considerate induigence has won a proud meed from a devoted family; his enemies, if any he has, will testify to his sense of propriety and liberality, and friend and foe speak him fair; his friends delight in testifying to his noble loveliness, and all to his integrity.

Mr. Larrazolo nourishes an honorable ambition to represent the people of New Mexico in the American congress, an honor of which any young man with his forensic powers may be proud, and despite the slanders of his opponents, who would try to crush a young man with the weight of a political slur for the low purpose of making a few votes with the assassinating instrument of deliberate false pretense and falsehood, it is said here positively that there are no ties which do or can ever influence him to work for the interests of any persons or section other than his constituency in the Territory of New Mexico, and the insinuation that he is connected with El Paso interests or the Stephens bill providing for an international dam or any other interest antagonistic to New Mexico, lately thrust out by his republican enemies like a dagger in the dark, will meet an immediate refutation in the minds of his political and personal friends, and a merited denunciation in the opinion of all who know him. Larrazolo does not fight that way, for he has found the weapons of truth stronger than those of falsehood and error.

As a poor boy in El Paso, Mr. Larrazolo had often seen the mediocre melodramas and serio-tragic plays that exhibited there, and had enjoyed their highly colored romance and heightened adventure. Booth and Barrett once played Julius Caesar there en route to the west. The young Mexican boy delayed purchasing his ticket till late in the afternoon, when he found that buyers were standing in line a half mile long, the result was purchased a high-priced ticket from a street broker; the naturalness of the accomplished Booth and Barrett misled him and he felt that their prestige was undeserved, for to his uneducated mind this was not "acting."

As the play progressed he became unconsciously spell bound, and when the ghost of Caesar appeared before Brutus in his tent and exclaimed, "Thou shalt see me at Philippi!" there was a shock of realization. The tremendous reaction had its influence over the life of Larrazolo, and today he is easy prey for the book agent, and in his library may be found choice works on English history, poetry, science and art. He has triumphed over the poor man's obstacle, thus set out by Gray, "Knowledge to their eyes, her ample page, Rich with the spoils of time, did he'er unroll; Chill penury repressed their noble rage And froze the genial current of the soul."

This is the man the democrats offer to the people to represent them in congress. For political purposes he has been grossly misrepresented, but his admirable virtues will outlive them. Who know him best love him in that degree, and in this no man's love has gone astray. Without disparagement to his gentlemanly opponent, we can say of Octaviano Larrazolo: Here is a man in whom the elements are well mixed, and take him all in all we shall not look upon his like again.

It happened in a Drug Store. "One day last winter a lady came to my drug store and asked for a brand of cough medicine that I did not have in stock," says Mr. C. R. Grandin, the popular druggist of Ontario, N. Y. "She was disappointed and wanted to know what cough preparation I could recommend. I said to her that I could freely recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and that she could take a bottle of the remedy and after giving it a fair trial if she did not find it worth the money to bring back the bottle and I would refund the price paid. In the course of a day or two the lady came back in company with a friend in need of a cough medicine and advised her to buy Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I consider that a very good recommendation for the remedy." The remedy owes its great popularity and extensive sale in a large measure to the personal recommendations of people who have been cured by its use. It is for sale by K. D. Goodall, druggist.

A Witness Confesses.

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 30.—The Louisville "Evening Post," prints an affidavit from Finley Anderson, telegraph operator upon whose testimony Caleb Powers was convicted of complicity in the murder of Governor Goebel, in which Anderson swears his story told on the stand was perjured. Anderson testified that Powers had in his presence said in substance, referring to William Goebel: "They say he wears a coat of mail, but it won't do him any good." He now declares that he never said in his presence and he gave testimony at the solicitation of Attorney Campbell and Arthur Goebel, who have since given him money for so testifying.

THE GREAT CIRCUS HAS GONE.

A Crowded House Greeted the Biggest Consolidated-Conglomerated-Corrupted Circus on Wheels That Has Visited Las Vegas.

A crowded house greeted the Elks burlesque circus entertainment last evening and it was a decided success in both the manner in which it was conducted, under the management of Prof. Haskell, and from a financial standpoint. The various committees of the Elks worked like troopers, each endeavoring to do his part in making the circus a success, and to say that it was a big one is putting it mildly. It was highly enjoyed by those so fortunate to be present.

The management staff in the first part represented a side-show at a circus. It consisted of G. W. Hartman, who was a typical vocalist; L. J. Marcus, who sold the tickets; Dr. E. B. Shaw, who sold the redder of red lemonade; W. B. Bunker, who had charge of the (wagon) wheel of fortune; Harry Warren, who acted as cop; C. C. Shirk, as boss canvasser; J. J. Smith, Ed McWeale, G. M. Roberts and Charles Givens, who represented the chief push among the weary wiles, and the general run of rag tags always seen at city circuses, started the house off in an uproar.

The second act represented the inside of the side-show and the following wonderful freaks of nature were introduced and elaborately commented upon by C. J. Gavin to the ragtags of the circus: The Queen of Snakes, J. G. Peyton; Fiji Jim, E. P. Mackel; The Circassian beauty, Jake Flint; the Zulu, J. H. Straussner; the Fat Lady, Chas. Clay. John Fisher presented the audience with chestnuts. John Fisher, A. A. Maloney and Harry Warren clog danced. Miss Maggie Burks rendered a song and dance being entered for the second time. The German Silver cornet band, with John Steward as leader and James Cook, Ed Lewis, H. C. Smith and Frank Dearth, members, took the house by storm.

The prize fight between Jeffries (W. Clay), and Sharkey, (Griff Roberts), was decided a draw by Honest John Kelley, (L. J. Marcus).

Part third was in charge of Ringmaster W. G. Benjamin. First came the sawdust horses. Wm. Wood and Homer Wean were the Japanese performers; John Steward and R. L. Pierson were the merry old clowns; Pete, the elephant, and Freckles, the giraffe, cake-walked with their escorts, Roberts and Pierson. Whitfield Brown presented the heaviest act, which told the whole story in a nutshell.

The great Sponge brothers, Smith, Maloney, Straussner and Pierson rendered all kinds of star chamber performances, assisted by their little brother, Pete Senecal.

The high diver was no sham. Sam Landis did the real thing—Nit. Miss Maggie Burks walked the high and silver wire, W. L. Haskell performed the horseback freak and all was over till next time.

P. S. Some of the young folks wanted to stay for the concert.

An eastern buggy company sold forty-four buggies in Clayton last week.
