VOLUME IV. OF THE History of the People of the United States.
By JOHN BACH MACMASTER. (To be completed in six volumes.) 8vo. Cloth, gilt top, $2.50.

The fourth volume opens with the repeal of the Fugitive Laws in England, and the close of the armistice concluded just before the surrender of Hull, and takes up the history of the war with Great-Britain. The chapter called "The Return of Peace," gives the story of the war, and gives with great fullness an account of the day-making events of the war, and the opening of a new era in our history. The war is over, the Evolution, complications, which have been the cause of our present condition, and the people begin to turn their attention to domestic affairs. The remainder of the volume is devoted to our present history. "The Disorders of the Currency" is a chapter in our annals which has never before been written and of our present affairs, the Missouri compromise, and the hard times of 1857 and 1858 complete the volume. With a full and complete index, a map, and maps in outline and in color.

Evolution and Effort.

AND THEIR RELATION TO RELIGION AND POLITICS BY EDMUND KIDLEY, M. A., F. R. G. S. 12mo. Cloth. $1.25.

This book is an attempt to show that the Evolution of to-day is differentiated from the Evolution which preceded man by the strife of his family of venereal effort, is no longer the product of evolution, but the result of a conscious choice. His family is religion, and its most fruitful thought as yet neglected field is politics. That an alliance between the two is the promise of humanity with evil and with pain; and that this alliance must practice the gospel of effort and not that of idleness, is his theme.

An Arranged Marriage.
By DOROTHEA GERARD, author of "Etelka's Vow," "A Queen of Curds and Cream" etc. No. 184, Town and Country Library. Paper, 30 cents; cloth, $1.00.

The scene of this charming and refined story is laid in Italy, and the author has found a most picturesque background for fully worked out on fresh lines. It is one of the most satisfactory of her always admirable books.

OWNS A BUFFALO HERD.

A Montana Man Is Trying to Perpetuate the Bison.

From the Washington News.

Charlie Allard, of Ravalli, Mont., possesses the proud distinction of being one of the owners of the largest herd of buffalo in existence, and one of the few frontiersmen who during the early '70s had foresight enough to perceive that at some day this noble animal would become extinct, and had the courage to attempt to stem the tide of the slaughter.

—The Montana News.

—The Helena News.

Howard told of how he had engaged in the novel business of buffalo farming, and his subsequent financial repudiation.

"It was about 1876," he conceived the idea of keeping a herd of buffalo, for as the winter they were being killed them I thought I would raise some for my own private and valuable. I captured four or five calves and kept them with our herd. When I saw that the boys were getting scarce and I was compelled to turn them loose. Then I was never able to start out again. The boys raised my salary, and thus persuaded me to keep on cow punching. When I finally gave it up he was paying me $100 per month. I had been in the Flathead valley. I had been wintering there every year for several years, riding over the mountains and through the country of Mission for Clark Bros. during the winter season. I bought from the Indians a few

The coldest storms of winter do not trouble them, for their thick, shaggy coats and the wind-blown snow and blizzards they curb the hills, and turning their breasts to the wind, defy the storm. They feel what the snow is, and they know it is but a burden, and will often go with a wind sixty or 100 miles from the accustomed range unless driven back to a storm, but the buffalo faces it every time. They seem to keep in

They are as good eating in the spring as they are in the fall, and a buffalo steak as fine as any I have ever had. I purchased one about two years ago, and purchased the Jones herd of buffalo, which was at Omaha. There were thirty-one of them in the herd, and I paid for them at the time $100.00, and now I am getting $100.00 for the lot. Marshall Pabst, a well known cattleman, has joined me in the purchase of the herd, and I have had entire charge of them, so that I do not know just exactly how many we have—about thirty, I should think. By next fall there will be fully 250 of them.

"We have experimented in crossing the buffalo with all kinds of cattle, and the results have been very satisfactory. The Polled Angus stock when crossed with the buffalo produces a magnificent animal. The animal is large, and the meat of the buffalo, and the meat is sweet and wholesome. We are procuring as many of these the market for several years yet. We are not selling any buffalo, either, for the reason that we need them all at present. We receive letters every day from students, parks and shows, wanting them in all quantities. I don't know what might dispose of them, but I don't think we have to pairs to spare. I have two single, I have a pair to spare. A good buffalo hide is worth $100 now in the market and heads bring from $25 to $50 when mounted, and the value of those is steadily increasing, so that buffalo breeding is a most profitable investment of money of any size. There is a small one in the State of New York, and another with the few remnants of the thousands which roamed the prairie in the thousands ago."
