

SOUTH CAROLINA DEVELOPMENT BOARD

Columbia, Feb. 15.—That it might more fully explain the idea for which it was organized and is functioning, the board of control of the South Carolina Landowners' Association has changed the name of the organization to the "South Carolina Development Board," and the attorney of the board, Charles H. Barron, of Columbia, will apply to Secretary of State William Banks Dove in the next few days for an amendment to the charter of the association carrying out the purposes of the resolution.

The board of control has added three new names to its membership; Charles H. Barron, an attorney of Columbia; Courtney Campbell, of Foreston, general manager of the Carolina Stock Farms; H. F. Barkerding, Chairman of the Committee on marketing of the Charleston city council, and J. G. Padgett, of Walterboro, State Senator from Colleton County.

There were three purposes for the changing of the name of the organization:

1. It was in response to requests from governmental agencies and civic commercial and trades organizations, who desire to clear general developmental purposes through the medium of the association.

2. That the name might give a clearer idea of the purposes for which the organization and is functioning.

3. To clear away a misconception in certain quarters that the organization was for the purpose of promoting real estate propositions and disposing of "cut over" lands.

The board of directors of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce, in resolutions passed by the body, has given endorsement to the South Carolina Development Board and its activities.

These resolutions read:

"WHEREAS, the board of directors of the Columbia Chamber of Commerce, after hearing a full explanation of the broad, general plan of the Southern Settlement and Development Organization, of Baltimore, Md., for the development of the entire South; and,

"WHEREAS, a further and full explanation of the South Carolina Development Board, successors to the South Carolina Landowners' Association, was made by George R. Wheeler, Manager, and especially explaining the formation and the great need of home cash markets to take care of the diversified farm products the educational forces of the State are teaching the people to raise; therefore,

"Be it Resolved, That the board of directors of Columbia Chamber of Commerce, in regular meeting, February 13, 1920 fully endorse the work in hand and go on record as advising all trades, commercial, civic and educational bodies of its action; and,

"Be it further Resolved, That we recommend the South Carolina Development Board to progressive thinking men and women of the State for their support and we ask all papers in the State of South Carolina to give publicity to these resolutions."

MYSTERY OF SEA GETS INTO COURT

An ocean tragedy is recalled and an interesting question of law raised by the probate in the orphans' court recently of the wills of Capt. George MacGoldrick and his wife, Mrs. Dora Helen MacGoldrick. Captain MacGoldrick was in command of the steamer Maverick and his wife was with him when that vessel disappeared mysteriously more than two years ago, with all on board, while on a voyage from Manila to New Orleans. No news was ever received of the fate of the steamer or any of those on board, and it is believed that the steamer went down in a typhoon which raged in the Pacific ocean shortly after she sailed.

Before Captain MacGoldrick took charge of the Maverick he and his wife lived in Baltimore. They had no children. On August 19, 1911, both executed separate wills in Philadelphia, each making the other the sole legatee and the executor of his or her estate, without bond. The question of law that has arisen because of the circumstances of the case is which died first. If Captain MacGoldrick died before his wife his estate would pass to her under his will. Then the estates of both would pass to Mrs. MacGoldrick's heirs under her will. If it could be proved that Mrs. MacGoldrick was the first one who died her estate would pass to her husband under her will and then to his heirs under his will.

Attorney William Lentz, to whom letters were granted on both estates, said he would proceed under the Maryland law and the assumption that it is impossible to say whether Captain MacGoldrick or his wife was the first to die. Under this theory Captain MacGoldrick's property will go to his father, who is his only surviving relative, and Mrs. MacGoldrick's property to her mother, who is her only surviving relative.

In some cases where the time of the death of a couple was unknown it has been presumed that the husband, being generally the stronger, survived his wife, if only for a brief period. A petition of Nicholas Joseph MacGoldrick father of Captain MacGoldrick, asking that the captain's will be admitted to probate, was filed through Mr. Lentz.

On August, 15, 1917, the petition stated, the Maverick sailed from Manila for New Orleans by way of Honolulu and the Panama canal. Shortly after the vessel sailed a heavy typhoon passed over the Pacific ocean in the vicinity of the Philippine islands and over the course which the steamer would take on its trip to New Orleans.

No information as to the ship's whereabouts has ever been obtained by its owner, the West Indian Sugar corporation, although diligent inquiry has been made. The secretary of the navy has advised that the navy department "has no accurate information as to the whereabouts of this vessel, but it is considered that it was undoubtedly lost in the typhoon referred to." All the insurance companies in which the vessel was insured have paid the owner in full on account of its loss.

TOY CARS IN COURT

Miniature street cars, motor cars wagons, trucks and other toy vehicles which were used in the District of Columbia branch of the Washington police court to illustrate a traffic accident proved valuable in assisting Judge Robert Hardison in the settlement of several complicated and disputed cases.

The miniature vehicles were put into action on a diagram which showed the intersection of streets where an accident occurred. They have been used for some time in the office of the assistant corporation counsels in getting at the facts in cases before filing informations. They are credited with keeping out of court hundreds of cases that had no merit for prosecution.
