State Association Active Since Its Inception

The Times-News Bureau
Sir Walter Hotel
RALEIGH, Dec. 4.—The State Literary and Historical association, which holds its 33rd annual session here Thursday and Friday of this week, was organized in 1900 to "collect, preserve, produce and disseminate state literature and history; to encourage public and school libraries; to establish a historical museum; to inculcate a historical spirit among our people; to correct printed misrepresentation concerning this state; and to engender an intelligent, healthy state pride in the rising generation," it was pointed out today by Dr. A. R. Newsome of the state historical commission.
The association has inaugurated successful movements for rural school libraries, North Carolina day in the schools, the North Carolina historical commission, the Vance statue in Statuary hall and a fire-proof state administration building. Has also undertaken the defense of North Carolina's Civil war record, the marking of Civil war battlefields, the Patterson Memorial cup and the Valley Forge memorial, and started the North Carolina Folk-Lore society, the North Carolina State Art society, and the Mayflower society cup.

The main feature of the program this week will be: addresses by President J. Fred Rippy of Duke University, and Robert Lathan of Asheville, on Thursday evening; four brief papers on North Carolina history on Friday morning; and the address in the Hugh Morson auditorium on Friday evening by Dr. Dixon Ryan Fox, professor of history in Columbia university and president

Work Begun On Pool At Brevard

Four other projects are already under consideration, workers have been selected from the relief roles of the county.

BREVARD, Dec. 4. (Special).
—Work on Brevard's municipal swimming pool which is being constructed under the CWA program got under way on Friday with excavation and transfer of dirt from the pool site. Twenty-five men were put to work on the project with R. P. Kilpatrick of Brevard in charge.
The pool will be located in Franklin Park, between three and four acres of land having been donated for the swimming pool and grounds by the Brevard Building & Loan Association, in conjunction with the county and town.
Plans call for building the pool of concrete, along state approved lines, the pool to be 150 feet by 60 feet, ranging in depth from three to twelve feet. Water will be supplied from the over-abundant Brevard supply. Cost of the pool is estimated at $9,000.

MORE TRANSYLVANIA CWA APPROVALS

including the seven-mile stretch from Gloucester bridge to the Tennessee Gap; from No. 28 via Old Tuxaway to No. 283; from Cox store in the Little River section to the Henderson county line

The UNKNOWN BLOND

BEGIN HERE TODAY Who killed TRACY KING, orchestra leader found dead in his apartment?
DAVID BANNISTER, author of former newspaper reporter, undertakes to find out.
Police are searching for an "unknown blond" who visited King shortly before his death.
Bannister has seen the girl, but she has since disappeared.
HERMAN SCHLACH, who saw King a threatening letter, is in jail. He declares his innocence. AL DRUGAN, friend of King's, says the orchestra leader has been having trouble with JOE PARROTT, his former candeville partner, and accuses Parrott of the murder. Police learn that MELVINA HOLLIS, TRAC's middle-aged spinster, has a violent quarrel with King after he had killed her canary. CAP-TAIN MCNEAL, of the detective bureau, visits Miss Hollister and decides she will hear watching.
The blond suspect is arrested.
DENISE LANG, King's fiancée, comes to headquarters and tells of seeing King with a blond girl the day before his death.
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXII
BANNISTER stepped forward. It was a woman's cry that he had heard—a cry that was muffled and died quickly. He heard someone coming then and turned.
A slim young man with a square black object slung from a strap over one shoulder was coming toward Bannister. "You working for the Post?" the young man asked.
Bannister nodded.
"I'm Sawyer," the newcomer said. "What's going on here? Austin said to come over and make some shots of a couple of dames.
What's it all about?"
Bannister explained what had happened. The photographer slipped the strap from his shoulder and unfasted the case containing his camera.
"So they're still in there?" he asked, nodding toward McNeal's office.
"Bannister assured him that they were."
The slender young man eyed the door speculatively. "There's no use of my hanging around here," he said. "The chief won't stand for pictures in the building. Best thing I can do is go outside and wait until this Lang girl comes out. I'll make some shots of her and then come back and see what I can get on the other one."
Bannister, at all right, that would probably be best. Sawyer paused long enough to ask for a match, lighted a cigaret and then disappeared.
There were no sounds now from behind that door. Nothing at all.
Bannister, listening, felt his muscles grow taut. He did not know why it had suddenly become so important for him to know what was going on behind that door. But he must know!
And then the door opened. Park Coleman emerged, and behind him Denise Lang. The girl's face was turned so that Bannister could not see it. He said eagerly to Coleman: "The other girl is—"
"She's still in there." Coleman did not look as though he wanted to talk but Bannister pulled no attention to that. "But is she the one?" he demanded. "Did Miss Lang identify her?" It was Denise Lang who answered. She raised her head and Bannister saw that she had been weeping. Her eyes were swollen and red-lined.
"She's—the one," the girl told him brokenly. "She's the one I saw with Tracy—!"
Coleman put a hand on her arm, roughly but at the same time as though he wanted to shield her.
"Come on, Denise," he said. "I'm going to take you home. You shouldn't have come out today, anyhow."
He said something more but Bannister did not hear it. Bannister was heading for a telephone. A minute later he reported to the assistant city editor of the Post that Denise Lang had identified the girl who was under arrest. The rest of the story was all just as he had given it before.
Parker Coleman and Denise Lang were gone when Bannister returned to the corridor. For a newspaper man who had just turned in an important exclusive story he showed a surprising lack of exuberance.
His mood, as a matter of fact, was quite the reverse. Bannister looked again at the door of McNeal's office, scowled and returned to the press room.

THE news that Denise Lang had identified the blond prisoner as the girl she had seen talking with Tracy King two days before appearing exclusively in the Evening Post that afternoon but the full story of what happened behind that closed door was reserved for the morning newspaper. It was almost six o'clock when McNeal admitted the reporters to his office. All of them had been waiting an hour, or more. They asked questions eagerly.
McNeal ignored the questioning.
Leaning both arms on the desk before him he began impressively:
"Well, I've got something for you this time. I think in 24 hours we'll have this case solved. The girl has been identified by Link, the clerk at the Shelby Arms, and she's admitted she went to King's rooms."
"What's her name?" demanded Ganey.
McNeal shook his head. "We don't know yet," he said, "but we'll find out. She's admitted she went to King's apartment at nine o'clock the night he was killed. Said she went there to get some letters—" "What kind of letters?" one of the others asked.
McNeal scowled. "Letters she'd written to him. Mash notes, I suppose. Her story is that she saw King in the morning and he promised she could have the letters if she came to his apartment that night. But when she got there he said he'd misplaced the letters and promised to bring them to her the next day at the hotel. That's her story. We haven't been able to break it yet but we will. Now don't print this, but here's my theory.
Evidently this girl was crazy about King. Somehow she must have found out that he was going to marry Denise Lang, and she came here to try to stop the marriage.
When she found she couldn't—bingo! You know the one about the woman scorned? Well—" BANNISTER, who had been listening silently, interrupted:
"What about the letters? Did you find them?"
"We did not," McNeal told him, "and the reason is because they weren't there. There wasn't an inch of that apartment that wasn't searched. I was there myself and I know!"
