The district court is busy today with the case of Andres Gomez charged with rape at Fidelity a year ago. A jury was being drawn this afternoon. It was raw cold and wintry this morning, and overcoats and fur hats were in evidence. But by noon the sky cleared off and the temperature rose rapidly, and it was agreeable enough without extra wraps by 2:00 p. m.

The case of Andres Molina was given to the district court jury at 4:30 last evening, and in four hours a verdict of murder in the second degree was brought in, with punishment of five years in state prison. Molina beat a fellow Mexican over the head with his gun at Fort Hancock in June, 1896, from the effects of which the victim subsequently died, after laying under the water tank for several days. One of the quietest of Mexican soldiers who deserted to this side some time ago, was a lieutenant, according to the Two Republics, although according to the best that a HERALD reporter could find out, the officer was the sergeant of the guard. The men were all new men, and constituted the entire guard on duty at the time, so that a policeman had to be put in their places for the time being. The Two Republics says the Mexican government has asked for the extradition of these men, but as they have never been heard from since the desertion, the U. S. government officers may have had lines in trying to locate them.

of Mexican soil, inside of which no hard frosts can be collected or frozen on. The glazier and plumbers work begins, while the clothier is hanging out overcoats and packing away grass lined suits. Frost is coming on but the theatre has keeps growing. The pretty summer girl is gone, but the winter girl is here wrapped up in furs and furbelows.

The White Oaks road should hurry on to the coal fields. Cheap coal is in demand in this market. The talk of a jockey club and race horses has caused many men to turn gentlemen jockeys and these mornings it is not uncommon to see their coming up the street with martingales on.

The election of mayor of Greater New York creates as much interest throughout the country as the election of a president. The distribution of $60,000,000 a year is a graft not to be sneezed at, even in New York. Chief Lockhart seems to have sized up the tramp situation and solved the problem. The iron jewelry with which he decorates the bams has caused El Paso to get a bad name among the sons of rest.

The election of United States Revenue Collector Kaufman to be tax collector of Travis county, will leave a vacancy in the revenue office at Austin, where the term expires Dec. 28, and the law provides he must qualify within fifteen days after his election to this county office, and at the same time he cannot leave the federal service until the 1st of January, 1898. Much pressure is being brought to bear to have Major R. E. Burke appointed to the place. Major Burke held the position under President Harrison and satisfied everyone. The major was asked recently by a Dallas News reporter if he was going to Washington, as some applicants have done, or at least had a representative there. He replied "That he did not intend going to Washington or send a representative; that he thought it injured one's chances to be so persistent. He said if his former record, which is in his favor, and the president, did get him the place, nothing else would; that he gave universal satisfaction to all in that position, which he held under the Harrison administration." Mr. Burke was an original McKinley supporter and member of the G. A. R., who indorse him. He also received the republican nomination for congress in his district without soliciting it, and he also of the republican electors received the largest vote.

Dr. Grant, national committeeman from Texas, a meeting with success in his efforts to start a weekly republican paper in Sherman. The Dallas News says of Dr. Grant and his paper: "Dr. Grant has decided to launch the big weekly in the very immediate future. He is now actively negotiating for machinery, presses and all necessary supplies, and is also looking over the most available and desirable men with which to complete the editorial staff, and said today he hoped to issue the first number by Jan. 1, 1898. When he asked for details Dr. Grant replied that he had already opened his subscription books and placed the subscription price at $1 per year in advance, and that he had reasonable hopes of starting with an actual circulation of 50,000. He had on his day a pile of letters and telegrams from nearly every section of Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Indian Territory announcing the formation of subscription clubs. It will be published in Sherman, the most nearly centrally located city of importance in the above mentioned territory. Hundreds of remittances have already been made. The name of the paper will be the Texas State Journal."

The police are now lying low so they can catch a gang of young hoodlums who have lately begun to infest the dance halls and some parents are going to wake up some morning and find that their dear boys are not taking their morning snooze in their little couch. Later in the day they will find them working on the street in the chain gang. For a long time the police managed to keep the boys away from the city of Mexico store, to last his work as a whole year. Bamboo can be had only in Japan. It has been grown in Mexico, but the local article splits on drying and in working.

For El Paso in 1899. The Christian Endeavor convention at San Antonio, in June a year ago, drew something like 2,500 or 3,000 people. The one at Houston last April was large but was militated against on account of the schools not having closed, and as there are hundreds of pupils who are Christian Endeavorers, of course other visitors made the attendance much larger. The ninth annual convention at Dallas June 1898, promises to register not less than 1,500 delegates and the tenth annual at El Paso in '99 ought to enroll a number approximate with the liberal attendance of the railroads. Christian Endeavorers pay their own expenses and the citizens are called upon to support only the speakers.

Masonic Visitor. L. T. Noyes of Houston, the grand commander of the Knights Templar of this state arrived this afternoon on No. 19 from the west, and was received at the depot by Collector Davis, Judge Sexton, Maj. Fewell, Will Rice, H. C. Myra and other prominent Knights, and escorted to the Pierson hotel. The program is a meeting at 4:00 p. m., in Masonic hall where Mr. Robinson of Fort Hancock will be taken into the lodge, and at night there will be some work followed by a banquet. Courtships will be extended to the distinguished visitor who may remain here for two or three days.

Rumor states that Col. R. F. Campbell has been assured of his appointment as collector of customs at El Paso, and that Major McGlennon will be appointed postmaster—El Paso Times (Democratic).

Ex-Mayor Campbell, in an interview with a St. Louis Republic reporter, makes the following statement about things in El Paso: "The Mexican town of Juarez, just across the Rio Grande from El Paso, is a place of 12,000 inhabitants, although a good many years ago it was far more populous," remarked Colonel Robert Campbell, a well known Texas republican. "The cause of the exodus of the people. Today the bulk of the population, as well as the business, is on the American side of Juarez, however, has the advantage of being in the zona libra, or free zone

YELLOW FEVER AND DENGUE. Neither can become an Epidemic in El Paso. Dr. Yandell, the state quarantine inspector at this point, has the following of interest to say in the Dallas News, relative to yellow and dengue fever.

The physicians of El Paso hold to the belief that yellow fever, if brought here, would not spread, because the conditions under which it develops do not exist here. Living on the Mexican border, they are naturally familiar with the object lesson furnished by Vera Cruz, where the disease prevails every year from May to December, and frequently longer, and is often carried to points on the line of railway to the City of Mexico, with the result that the altitude at which it doesn't spread except under peculiar and rarely existing conditions, is accurately determined, being reached in a run of a few hours, and the altitude of the city of El Paso is over 3700 feet, far above the line of safety; less humidity in the atmosphere and a cooler climate, and conditions generally more inimical to the spread of the disease than existing in places shown to be exempt a short distance from Vera Cruz. Our board of health gave emphasis to the belief by refusing to quarantine against Texas points officially declared to be infected, and, indeed, would have invited refugees from those points to come here but for the quarantine that other places would then have declared against us, with the effect of diminishing the influx of health-seekers usual in fall and winter. Inviting refugees from other states, with the state quarantine against them, was of course not to be thought of. Even more singularly, the board of health gave emphasis to a meeting of doctors a few nights since, when, after the business for which they had met had been attended to, in a two hours' rambling talk of the variety of diseases prevailing among the poorer class, of interesting cases, etc., yellow fever was not once mentioned, nor was dengue either—and thereby hangs a tale. Dengue and yellow fever have the same and in the same sections of country, but dengue prevails as an epidemic where yellow fever has never so prevailed, and it may be never will, except in the companies with which most dengue infected places which boast of immunity from yellow fever quarantine against places where the disease exists, is entirely not calculated to tempt outsiders with the belief that their sense of security deserves to be classed with the calm confidence that the Christian feels when he holds four axes, straight, in his hand. I have a theory—a theory is dear to the doctor's heart—that as dengue prevails where yellow fever prevails, places where dengue does not prevail after its introduction on have from that fact additional reason for believing that yellow fever will not. Holding this, imagine my indignation when I read in The Dallas News of last Sunday the following resolution adopted by a number of east Texas doctors who had investigated health conditions in Galveston: "We are unanimously of the opinion that dengue, the disease now prevalent as an epidemic in Galveston and Houston, now exists as an epidemic throughout the entire state of Texas." Dr. Talley, of Temple, refused to sign the report as "too sweeping in declaring dengue in every part of Texas," and Dr. Grant has since then, I have talked over the matter with most of our leading physicians and with all of those long-time residents here and I am prepared to state positively and without reservation (1) that dengue does not now exist as an epidemic in El Paso; (2) That every one of the doctors referred to states that he has never known a case of dengue to originate in El Paso, and this in face of the fact that it has in many instances developed in persons from other places in a few days after their arrival and that they have remained in hotels and boarding houses in free, unrestricted intercourse with other persons, with no attempt at isolation. One of the gentlemen has had five cases this season in persons from Houston and San Antonio and there are other cases. El Paso is noted health resort, and a slight study of climatic conditions prevailing here would have saved those east Texas experts from the egregious blunder that casts discredit upon their opinion as to other things, expressed at the same time as that above given.

A Pleasing Outlook. At the last meeting of the board of directors of the Y. M. C. A., Secretary Sloane made a verbal report in which he said: At no time during the present management has the outlook been more encouraging. The attendance at the rooms has worked 100 per cent; reading room 80; gymnasium 30. Nineteen new members have come in and joined either the ladies' junior or men's classes. A debating club has been organized with twenty-five members. The social given by the Ladies' Auxiliary indicates that the work is going to be pushed by those who represent our best homes in the city. The men's meetings indicate some degree of power and the blessing of God upon them. The average attendance a thirty-two, requests for prayer eight, professed conversions three. Bible study is gaining in attendance and interest. With hard work of 100 per cent of our friends before a year passes we ought to see a building started. What could you do to help your boy or any young man more than giving him a membership? Largest fraternity organization in the world.
