PEEVED.

The country is informed that, as a result of introduction of the Brandegee resolution in the Senate, the President is disposed to explain in confidence to the senate foreign affairs committee his reasons for opposing a declaration of war against either Turkey or Bulgaria or both.

The war resolution, it should be borne in mind, was introduced in the first place by Senator King, of Utah, a democrat. Senator Brandegee, of Connecticut, republican, merely presented a resolution calling for action on the King measure.

Some of the republicans, no doubt, are willing to make capital of the antagonism between the senators and the White House. In another sense, it is also probably true that the approach of selections is tending to loosen the hold of the administration on Congress.

It is only the best epigram writers were invariably the best strategists war would not be nearly as hellish as it is.

A Danish ministry has won an election on the "kept us out of war" slogan. Time for the Danes to begin increasing their navy.

There are two kinds of patriots—one who do their utmost for their country's sake and those who do their utmost for publicity's sake.

There is no use wasting logic on either an idolizer or a hater of any public leader. Such a man is always immune.

The world's dreamers are her finest soul; but they are important in grave emergencies. 'Tis sad 'tis true.

the capitol would do away with such bitter fights as that which has developed in connection with the Overman bill, for instance. The Senate isn't really mad, so much as it is peeved.

HUMOR.

It takes man to laugh. Long ago it was said that all below and all above man in the universe are serious. Lack of humor therefore is a quality that gods and beasts have in common. But that is only apparent. Beasts are inferior to humor. Gods are superior to it. Man, being fallible but conscious of his fallibility, is alone qualified to perceive disproportion. A sense of disproportion is very close to a sense of humor. If indeed it is not that, indeed, who is not observed that the man who looks upon himself only to be perpetually astounded at his perfection has no use for humor?

There is the blood relation between the whanging of a slapstick and the gentle play of a bon mot. In the one it is a lowering of physical man into the stature of the beast, in the other it is an elevating of his mentality into a realm of thin air and elusive ideas; and either the raising or the lowering, if sudden and preposterous, is funny.

To lack the humorous sense is to see life without perspective. The world in which the unhumorous man lives is a foreshortened world. To be unhumorous is much the same as to be unamoral; it is to be deprived of a fundamental quality. Humor is the fat streak, the mind's lubricant. It is perhaps man's greatest gift, for it makes his deficiencies, when not likable, tolerable even to himself.

In only one man's great activity is it forbidden humor to intrude. That is in his loves. It is then, one remembers, that man is most godlike. Besides, a sense of proportion there could be calamitous.

SALUTE THE FLAG.

Do American citizens know how to salute the flag? It would seem not, for not one in a hundred is ever caught doing it. Do they know that it is their duty, and should be their pride to salute the flag whenever it passes and whenever formally displayed just as much as it is to stand uncovered when the "Star Spangled Banner" is played or sung? It would seem not, since they do it so seldom that it seems never. Isn't it rather absurd to be more loyal to the song than to the flag itself?

If Col. Roosevelt keeps on being so splendidly right, the Globe may yet have to join in the demand which has already started that he be nominated for president in 1920.

There will be occasion for all the pacific disposition his holiness can command if he undertakes meditation between nationalist Ireland and conscriptionist England.

Of course you have found no difficulty in dropping again into your old habit of buying a daily war Thrift Stamp.

No real American wants the war to end before it is possible to say that somebody has been nicked—and to name the man.

How happy and free from color is the life of the man who heroically refuses to expect summer until June 21.

IN MEMORY OF MRS. KATIE B. HUDSON, WHO DEPARTED THIS LIFE, APRIL 19, 1918. (By Ella J. Cunningham.)

She is not dead but sleepeth. Over the river, the dark flowing river, Another has passed to that shore.

In behalf of the family. Mrs. Katie B. Hudson became a Christian in early life, which her mind was young and readily touched. She always carried a beaming light of sunshine and pleasant expression with her and at all times would give good advice and true counsel to younger persons. Her children were the idol of her heart. She is gone, though we miss her, yet the angels are keeping watch over the sleeping loved ones gone before.

GOVERNOR TOM C. RYE REPLIES TO DR. J. A. JONES' LETTER WITH REFERENCE TO THE LEXINGTON LYNCHING—GOVERNOR EXPRESSES HOPE THAT GUILTY PARTIES WILL BE BROUGHT TO JUSTICE.

"Made in Nashville" TO WRITE IT RIGHT JUST WRITE IT. WIND HAIR GROWER. BEST BY TEST. GANTT QUINO SCHOOL, 636 Ford St., Nashville, Tenn.

Executive Chamber, Nashville, Tenn., April 29, 1918. Rev. J. A. Jones, 40 Green street, Nashville, Tenn. Dear Sir:— I am in receipt of your letter of the 24th inst.

I regret the Lexington occurrence and earnestly hope that this state may be spared further outrage of this kind. I called the Judge and Attorney General of that district the very moment that I heard that there was a mob pursuing the Negro, and was advised that everything would be done that could be done to prevent mob violence.

However, this was but a short time before the arrest was made and the offense was committed. The Judge was upon the ground and up to the very moment of the lynching believed that such a thing could not occur.

I have not gone into the press to undertake to justify or explain my actions in those matters, but there has not been a Negro lynched in Tennessee since I have been governor, or even if the probability of such an act was brought to my attention, but what I did something, and even more than the law required in an effort to try to prevent it.

Respect for family, love to God. She constantly maintained. In temper sweet, in motive pure. She loved and spoke the truth. In kindness to the old and poor. She honored self and youth. May a corner-stone be built for her, May a structure bear her name; That will be built because she lived and died. Without spot or stain. Life is reckoned not in years. But by the way one lives; 'Twas not her learning or wealth That won her love and friends. The not her name from yonder grave To you this message sends. But 'tis a virtuous life that pleads And points a higher plane. That we by emulating her Her virtues may attain.

Dear Mr. Hill and Family: We give all due respect to our dear teacher, Mr. Hill, and family in the loss of his dear daughter. We don't know her but from her father we are sure in saying that she must have been a very sweet little girl. We know the family will miss her but it won't be long before we will all join her on the other side of the river.

This earth is a garden of roses and the good Lord has plucked out one of the fairest roses for His kingdom. We say— "Peace to her ashes" for she has suffered a long trial and may her soul rest until all the flowers are put together and we shall all adorn his heavenly kingdom.

and hurled it at and beat back the flower of the French army, or of Maceo, the "black terror" in Cuba's struggle with Spain; or the daring of our own heroic Ninth and Tenth Cavalry at San Juan Hill. What these have done, you can do also.

This is a struggle of right against wrong, of justice against injustice, and of democracy against autocracy. It is a war to determine whether the world will be ruled by a royal few or whether it will be governed for the people and by the people. As President Wilson said: "We are going to make the world safe for democracy" and we are loyal to the cause we have espoused. We fight side by side with our brother in white for the same cause he is fighting for. But we are not only fighting for the world but we are fighting for democracy, but we hope that out of this loyalty and sacrifice we make for the country and after having given our best blood and our treasure: after having sacrificed our all to the God of War upon Democracy's altar we hope there will be born and nurtured here in this land an unalterable determination to make the United States safe for the Negro.

We fight for the freedom of the world and we also fight that the vencher may be commended to lay by his rose the incendiary his firebrand; and that we may be taken in to American brotherhood and protected in the pursuits of peace and happiness. We are fighting and bleeding and dying that the demagogue may be made to cease to chase us up the hill of progress with his segregation and Jim-crow laws. Finally, we are fighting for self-preservation as much as for the preservation of democracy. And if after having buried our heroic dead upon a foreign battlefield, we return and find no change in sentiment or the treatment accorded us; if we do not by our sacrifices procure the ends for which we have been so long contending and petitioning, we will have sacrificed in vain. We will have died in vain.

But young men, go forward. Let this ever be your watchword. Through the dim vista of revelation I can see a better day dawning upon us—the day when men will be compelled to acknowledge the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man. You are going forth to fight our battles in a country where you will be known as the "Black American soldier." You go where you will be accepted upon your manhood. You will be clad in the uniform of an American soldier, a uniform which bespeaks character, courage and victory. France and England will receive you with open arms. You are the dusky sons of Robertson County sent as her representatives of all that is pure and good. We are expecting each of you to do your whole duty as God gives you power to do it. Shirk not a single duty, but be vigilant, be active, be brave. Remember, a brave man cannot die but once. And it's sweet to die in the discharge of one's duty. The hero who sacrifices his life upon the altar of manly duty lives on in the hearts of his fellow men, but the coward dies twice—dies forever.

Beats, the eyes of the Commonwealth are upon you. We will be eagerly awaiting news of your brave and heroic deeds. Be manly, be virtuous, be brave. You will be untrammelled in your association with that foreign soil, therefore we would have you do credit to your country and bring honor to your race. When in the company and presence of women, remember your mother, your wife or sweetheart whom you left behind you, then measure your conduct by the Golden Rule: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

Now, young men, we bid you God-speed, and may a beneficent heaven watch over and keep you, and strengthen you for the task of "baptizing" the Kaiser and destroying his damnable war machine which has ruined the world to groan under the weight of its frightfulness, and stand against all who behold its atrocities.

We are in the war to win, we must win. Therefore we are sending you forth as a part of that winning force, we do not only want you to stand like a stone wall, but we want you to push on to ultimate victory.

We have spoken to you of the honor gained by dying for one's country, but we are not sending you forth to die; but we are sending you forth to live, for the man who lays his life upon the altar, he who sacrifices his all for liberty, humanity and right can never die; but lives on, and on everlastingly in the hearts of his countrymen.

Horace Greeley once said, "The American Government blundered much in turning loose on these United States four million paupers, four million charges for governmental charity and unworthy of and unable to rise to America's standard of civilization." But I wish tonight to greet you as we have taught the world to sleep and the dust could be freed from his decaying eyes; let him see and read how we have attained unto the highest type of civilization. In art, in literature, the world's best critics give us a rating, in music and song they say we lead the world. As soldiers we rank among the world's best; in Christian fervor, patience, self-denial and patriotic sacrifices we have taught the world's lessons of self-denial, patience and toil. And it does not yet appear what we shall be. We will light up this world with the lamp of our faith, march bravely to the battlefield and by our heroism show the world what the Negro race can do.

As on former occasions the ladies furnished lunches for the boys this morning, while fully two thousand persons stood around the depot to bid us adieu, the good-byes, the Bradford High School Glee Club sang patriotic songs and otherwise cheered them while waiting for the train.
