shared in the first happy flush of their youthful love and happiness. This, the only place where she could find peace in her loneliness, Dan was trying to wrest from her. It was too near to town, too near to the scene of his new activities, he had sent word to her. She must vacate. She must go so far away that his charge of "deceit" would stand fire in a court of law.

Face to face with the fact that Dan was trying to drive her even from this shelter, trying to drive her out into a strange and alien world, of which she knew nothing and which knew nothing of her, Mary could scarcely believe that Dan was so changed—that even now he would be willing to snatch away from her the place which held the memory of happier days.

She had not seen her husband since the night in Senator Strickland's library, when the awful knowledge had been forced home to her that he not only wanted a permanent separation, but insisted on having an absolute divorce. Over and over again a thought came into the woman's mind. It was intuitive, instinctive. Try as she might to silence it, she could not put it out of her thoughts. It was that ever-recurring feeling that another woman had entered Dan's mind and heart. Again and again she pushed it from her, but always and ever the obsession clung to her like a black shadow that haunted her during the day and persisted even in her dreams at night.

From the kitchen came the voice of her maid-of-all-work singing an old-fashioned tune.

It was one that in her young days Dan had loved to hear her sing—one whose sweet melody and melancholy sentiment he had loved in the days before his heart had become hard and his mind intense on the cold, hard problems of finances and political advancement. It was the song in which all lovers from the beginning to the end of time find a responsive note: "Nita, Juanita, be my own fair bride." Conscious of the song, Mary remembered the lamb stew that she had left cooking on the kitchen fire. Dan had always loved lamb stew; that is, her lamb stew. She remembered how heartily he always ate of it, how he never failed to pass his plate for a second "helping," and how he used to look up at her and say:

"This is lapping good, Mary. I think I will have a bit more." Just as if he needed any urging! Mary found her thoughts growing very tender when she suddenly remembered that tonight she must sit down alone at the table, that instead of two she would only serve one plateful of that stew. Her heart contracted with a pathetic, futile longing for things as "they used to be," and grew bitter as she remembered conditions as they were. She sat with her face pillowed on her arms, so absorbed in her unhappy reflections that she didn't hear the door open, didn't hear a step until someone leaned over and kissed her tenderly on the faded cheek that Dan used to pat so lovingly and declare was lovelier than their garden roses. "Oh, Rob!" Mary exclaimed, starting up in glad surprise. "I didn't hear you drive up."

"I didn't," Bob laughed, good-naturedly. "My car is stranded two blocks back," and he threw his linen duster on the sofa as Mary hastened in her fond little way to take his hand and hover about him. "It's strange how near town this place seems to be," Bob rattled on. When we lived here before it was clear out in the country, but with a motor car it's right next door to town."

"Well, aunty," and he stretched himself out in an easy chair, "I sup-

Regina Peavine Sold.

The fine saddle mare, Regina Peavine, owned by a syndicate of Lincoln county horsemen, has been sold to Mr. Wm. Shropshire, of Winchester, for $2,500. Horsemen say that the new purchase has all the form and style of Hazel Dawn. The beautiful animal is a daughter of Rex Peavine, owned by Dr. Hockaday, of Madison county.

Reappointed to Office.

H. G. Denner and Joseph Spivey, who had resigned the positions of marshal and deputy, respectively, of Irvine, and who were released on bail for the killing of Frank Garrett in the discharge of their duty, until the next circuit court, were reappointed to their former positions on petition of 71 leading citizens of that town.

The Colorado War.

A hooded, black shrouded figure in a band of picketers in front of the home of John D. Rockefeller and son John was arrested. The demonstration was being made in protest against the alleged policy of the younger Rockefeller towards the mine war in Colorado. No heed was paid the shrouded man at first, but he was finally arrested by detectives.

City Nurse's Statement.

To The Climax:—I submit the following report to you of my services for the month of April, 1914:

Six visits of investigation; 18 professional visits to the sick; 16 sheets; 14 pillow cases; 4 gowns. Towels and clothing donated by friends have been distributed among same. Thirty-five phone calls were made and received.

The time for which I was employed expired the first day of May. I want to thank all who made it possible for me to do this work. It has brought "showers of blessings" to me, and I trust it has been so with others concerned.

Very Respectfully,
Mrs. T. J. TAYLOR,
City Nurse.

City Council Proceedings.

The regular monthly meeting of the City Council was held last Thursday night, 7th, with a full attendance of councilmen. A number of bills were presented and allowed.

The following tax supervisors were elected: Lyman Parrish, G. W. T. Deatherage and L. T. Wilson.

A tax is to be imposed upon vendors of various articles in the city of Richmond. This law is for the protection of citizens of Richmond and Madison county.

The street in front of the Christian church was ordered put in better condition. This is where the building of the new church has delayed action by the Council.

A horse was ordered purchased for the use of the fire department and one has been secured from A. B. Deatherage at a cost of $300.

The streets of Richmond are to be sprinkled with oil, the owners of property to defray one-half the cost.

An order was issued by the Council for the building of pavement on Third street; also on Breck Avenue and West Main street.

Madison County Poultry Association Meets May 23.

To the poultry, turkey, duck and pet stock raisers of Madison county:

The Madison County Poultry Association will hold its annual meeting at McKee's Rink, May 23, to elect officers and decide on the advisability of holding a show the second week in December. As all know, the work incidental to holding a show has heretofore fallen on the shoulders of a few interested breeders, which is not the accepted spirit of the associations of this country; and those who have been doing all the work, wish to say to the breeders of the county, that they don't feel that the other breeders and sympathizers have taken the interest that would have been taken if all had done their share of work and shown the proper spirit of co-operation, which we are sure they will show after this appeal. Will say further, that unless we can get the co-operation and help, that we will have to let the association die the death of the uninterested.

The object of the association is to help the commercial breeder as well as the fancier; and the one that will get the most benefit is the farmer's wife, who gets her "pin money" from her chickens and eggs. So don't forget this date, as this meeting will be of material interest to every citizen of Madison county.

If you will just spend a few minutes of your time looking up the records, you will find that Kentucky is far below the position should be in with her poultry and egg products. You all know this is not as it should be, as our State is as good as any in the Union, and if every one will take an interest in poultry associations and shows, our standing will be improved at once. The harder you pull, the faster the other fellows will join with a helping hand, and when the hands get numerous enough to handle the work without being a burden to any one hand, then you can expect results and will get them.

Now every man, woman and child who is interested should attend this meeting and show that the interests of their county is near their hearts. Take the proper pride in your poultry and see that our county ranks at the top from a commercial as well as a fancy standpoint. By attending you will help the workers who have carried the load in the past, and will have one of the best associations in the country. The association is not out for the money there is in the business for the association, but is after results for the breeders and producers of the county. Will say, there is nothing raised in the county that can compete with the old Domineck hen's products. The facts are, that the poultry, eggs, turkeys, ducks and geese that are marketed in this county, will cover every other branch of farming up so that you will have to have a search warrant to find them. Now this sounds queer, but ask your produce dealers and they will open your eyes with facts and figures.

We also wish to ask the commercial organizations, country clubs, girls and boys and all other clubs, to attend in a body or send representatives to this meeting to co-operate with us in this great work for the good of the citizens of our county and State.

Dear Amy: I ran to a neighbors through the back way the other day. My! It was shocking to see the old, battered ice-box she had. If I didn't have anything else, I'd have a new up-to-date ice box; for a sanitary, clean ice-box means a healthy family. Would you use a rusty ice-box if you were able to buy a new one? Not for me. Baby John's milk must be properly kept. An unsanitary ice-box endangers the health of the whole family.
Good bye, Lou
