SALVATION ARMY

The earnest appeal of the representatives of the Salvation Army on Thursday was not in vain when they reached the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. L. Cobb, for they spent some time there, after which they departed with happy smiles, and in possession of a $50 donation. This was made possible upon the part of Mrs. Cobb, who decided that something should be done in the way of assisting the solicitors. She being the secretary of the local Red Cross, got busy and communicated with the executive officials who were unimous in the opinion that the Red Cross, in itself a charitable organization, in a way, should be represented in the creation of funds, and the result was that the donation was made. Miss Sylvan Swartsel, the tireless worker, stated that she knew they would succeed, as they have always done, since their soliciting qualifications are equal to those characterizing their giving, and this is saying much.

The drive continues and will perhaps not be concluded this week. There are liberal donations being made, it! -Don't Throw Away Your- is said, in some localities. The real worth of the organization, together with its purpose, renders giving justificable in every sense.
