Capacity 25 bbls. per day of the best flour; any man can become a miller on one-half the capital usually required. Our mill will make a barrel of flour cheaper than any other mill in the world. These mills are in operation all over the United States. We have them in the following States: Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, Kentucky, Illinois, Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma, Michigan and Washington. Each one of them has proven remarkably successful. The demand for the "Midget" Marvel has so exceeded our present manufacturing facilities of one mill per week that we are compelled to build a larger manufacturing plant that can keep pace for a time with our increasing orders.

The Business of the Anglo-American Mill Co. is the Manufacture and Sale of Tattersall's English "Midget" Marvel Self-Contained Roller Flour Mill.

We have purchased the brick building formerly occupied by the Hoagland Buggy Co., in Seven Hills, Owensboro, Ky., with about two acres of ground; we have just let contracts for the very latest improved machinery, and expect to have this new factory in operation by September 1, when we will have a capacity of one complete mill per day. The operation of the "Midget" Marvel Mill is the best money making proposition for the man of small means that has ever been offered. It is the only small mill that can compete with gigantic trust mills. It has been predicted by conservative persons connected with the trade that sooner or later the "Midget" Marvel will eliminate all of the smaller mills throughout the country.

We sell our mills on the following terms: $50 cash with the order, $700 cash on shipment, and the balance of $1,000 divided into six equal payments due in 2, 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12 months, with 8 per cent. interest. We now propose to give our Bondholders the benefit of this interest we are able to secure simply because we have the only self-containing mill on the market, and the customer either buys of us or not at all.

Subscriptions for any of these bonds will be accepted until July 20th, or will close at an earlier time if same are entirely subscribed. Subscriptions will be entered strictly in rotation in which they are received. We reserve the right to reject any subscriptions. Those subscriptions received after all of the Bonds are subscribed for will be returned. Terms of subscription are as follows:

$25 cash to be sent with the application for each $100 Bond.
$25 payable on Aug. 20 on each $100 Bond.
$25 payable on Sept. 20 on each $100 Bond.
$25 payable on Oct. 20 on each $100 Bond.
The first interest coupon on each Bond amounting to $4, will be paid on Jan. 20, 1912, at the Central Trust Co., Owensboro, Ky.

Bonds will be allotted on July 20, 1911, and all of those having Bonds allotted to them will be advised at once by mail. The Bonds will be registered and delivered on the final payment Oct. 20, or at any earlier time that the full $100 is paid up on any Bond.

This Company will have the privilege of redeeming any of these Bonds at the end of one year, or at any time thereafter, with 30 days' notice, by paying the accrued interest to the next coupon date and $110 for each $100 Bond redeemed.

If you want to be sure of securing one or more of these Bonds for investment you will have to act at once by cutting out the coupon in this advertisement, filling in the number of Bonds for which you wish to subscribe, and inclose same with $25 cash payment for each Bond you subscribe for, to W. L. Reno, Secretary and Treasurer, at The Central Trust Co., Owensboro, Ky.

To intending purchasers of Bonds we will be glad to confirm any of these statements here at our office, show our books, or orders and the general character of our business. Write for our new catalogue, "The Story of a wonderful Flour Mill," it will interest you. We will be glad to send it.

WOMAN'S OPPORTUNITY

Self-assertion, Self-realization, Her Principal Need.

To the Editor of The Sun: I am glad to see that women are at last being represented by a band of viragoes who pose as leaders of their sex and are its benefactors. Any of us have been misled by the lies in our youth, but if we who have found peace of mind and usefulness have found them in old time paths. I never believe that the things we are doing are old law of expediency and counts for something. Life is a smooth stream when we accept the path which by nature and inclination are best.

The only way in which we have ever seen that men showed the superiority of intelligence over women is in their perception and acceptance of this very obvious fact, that at this point we are so very much wiser than they undoubtedly understand the duties women are not doing. If the women continue in their duties won't be as well as men, but will publicize as well as men under the same name.

has to take care of the children and home, and it is not an unusual thing in this enlightened country to see a father struggling in the courts against his wife and her friends for the right to protect his daughter.

The strong woman was not invented in the twentieth century nor in America. Her price was above rubies as long ago as Solomon. St. Monica was a strong woman, so were Queen Louise of Prussia, and Florence Nightingale. As every one must, they "found their strength in limitations" and in pouring their whole strong natures into that for which they were best endowed. I don't doubt, I never have doubted, that women could by a combined effort wrest much of their power from men, but I do not admit that advisability, and I most firmly believe that we should pay a heavier price than we could afford. It all resolves itself into a question of "Is the price too high for the good obtained?" I am sure that it is, and will always conscientiously use what small influence I have, and my children listen to me against it.

I entirely agree with Martha McCulloch-Williams. Very much the same experience befell me about the ubiquitous small boy. A number of people crowded on a car. The small boy, governed by instinct and happily devoid of maternal instruction in matters of politeness, fought valiantly for a seat and got it. I leaped over from where I stood, touched his shoulder and said to him: "I don't believe you saw that old lady standing, did you?" The poor little fellow turned crimson and got up at once, while several people smiled who had been looking at him with disgust. It wasn't the child's fault. The manners are the women's business, but the women in this country are so hopelessly dominated by the masculine ideal that they fail to assert themselves.

I have lived in less modern countries for fifteen years and have seen poverty made beautiful and life made smoother only by the wisdom of the women. And they are not less capable than ours, bread winners and home makers as a matter of course, often highly educated as well, but women and wives and mothers first, always ready to sacrifice power to their deeper interest. There is less self-assertion, more self-realization.

I will add another anecdote: In Rome one day an aged peasant woman too long in getting off the car, and she said to the handsome youth who, as conductor, was helping her: "I am old, my son." He raised his hat with a sweet smile and replied, "We'll all be old some day, mother." It was a charming incident. I think as our race grows older it also will grow wiser in these ways.
