

Apples Pay Well

A most interesting article on the "Neglected Orchard Industry" by Mr. William H. Stites, president of the Kentucky State Horticultural Society, has just appeared in the November 1st issue of the Southern Agriculturist. The whole article cannot be reprinted; but the County Agent has run his scissors around the two strong paragraphs which are given below:

"While the farm orchard has ceased to be a factor in the production of high grade fruit, any land owner, according to Mr. Newinger's figures, can very well afford to put out two or more acres of orchards, purchase the necessary equipment to properly care for and handle it in connection with other farm operations just as he would one of his other crops. The man who will put out an orchard of desirable varieties and give it proper care can reasonably expect far more agreeable work with better financial returns than he would get from tobacco or any of our ordinary farm crops. No section of the country produces apples of better quality than are grown in Kentucky, and it has been a great loss to the state that this attractive industry has been so long neglected, especially as we have in this state thousands of acres of practically waste land which would be suitable for growing the best grade of fruit. The average farmer does not look with favor on a proposition to plant today and wait six or eight years before he may begin to harvest, consequently, the orchard business all over the country has largely gone into the hands of the specialist who makes it strictly a commercial proposition, but where the grower has suitable markets available he can make his orchard pay its way by intercropping with berries or vegetables."

PEPTO-MANGAN KEEPS BLOOD PURE

Growing Children Need Plenty of Red Cells in Blood

When the young body is growing, children frequently experience weakness. Girls and boys sometimes play too hard and over tax their systems. They become pale, weak, and sickly. They lose their appetite, become languid, and are not able to make progress in school work. "Growing too fast" is often true. It is most important to keep the blood of growing girls and boys in a healthy state.

Pepto-Mangan keeps the blood pure. The red cells in the blood are increased. They carry life-giving oxygen to all parts of the body, and wholesome youthfulness bloom again in clear complexions, bright eyes and buoyant spirits. Sold both in liquid and tablet form by druggists everywhere. The name "Gude's Pepto-Mangan" is on the package.—Advertisement.

Was Very Weak

"After the birth of my baby I had a back-set," writes Mrs. Mattie Crosswhite, of Glade Spring, Va. "I was very ill; thought I was going to die. I was so weak I couldn't raise my head to get a drink of water. I took . . . medicine, yet I didn't get any better. I was constipated and very weak, getting worse and worse. I sent for Cardui."
