Vine Grows About Chicken; Chokes It

(Greenwood Index-Journal)

The world knows that the crimson clover land around Hodges in this county is a fertile soil and will grow almost anything, but not even the thought of any such thing as a chicken being choked by a vine has occurred to the people of Hodges. Velvet beans grow especially rank and lush on the place of T. B. Milford and hens frequently steal nests under the vines. And thereby hangs this tale, which T. B. Milford, prominent and reliable citizen of that community relates.

A hen stole a nest under one of Mr. Milford's velvet bean vines and there she decided to sit. She was missed from the premises but no one could find the hen. Finally she was given up as lost.

A few days ago, when the frost had killed the leaves, the carcass of the hen was found still sitting on the nest. Around her neck had grown a velvet bean vine, which had choked her to death. Mr. Milford declared that Mr. Milford was positive that the hen had sat still in the same position so long, and the vine had grown so rapidly, that when she did attempt to leave the nest, the vine had twined around her neck and choked her to death.

Wife Not to Blame

Mount Holly, N. J., Dec. 17.—Mrs. Lottie Mohr, wife of Harry C. Mohr, one of the defendants in the Bruner murder trial, had no part in the alleged plot to effect the escape of her husband and three other prisoners from the Mount Holly jail, Sheriff Blagz declared tonight. The sheriff said the attempted jail delivery had been made several weeks ago and that no suspicion whatever attached to Mrs. Mohr. It has been impossible, he added, to trace the source of the files which had been smuggled into the jail.

Vest's Eulogy of the Dog

The "Eulogy on the Dog", one of the most famous speeches ever made by the late Senator George G. Vest of Missouri, was made in the course of the trial of a man who had vainly shot a dog belonging to a neighbor. Vest represented the plaintiff, who demanded $200 damages. When Vest finished speaking, the jury, after two minutes' deliberation, awarded the plaintiff $500. The full text of the speech follows:

Gentlemen of the Jury: The best friend a man has in this world may turn against him and become his enemy. His son or daughter that he has reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name, may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never deserts him, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog. Gentlemen of the jury, a man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and in sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground where the wintry winds blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of his pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches takes wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant in his love as the sun in its journey through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies, and when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in its embrace and his body is laid in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends forsake their way, there by his graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad but open in alert watchfulness, faithful and true, even in death.

News From Carem

The land of Peter Porter (colored) who died last year, was equally divided among his 11 children not long since. The tract contained about 140 acres and is known as the Shadrack Jolly place, not far from Crawford. Four white men of the community were the partitioners.

A gentleman living in a distant state wrote to relatives in this community a few weeks ago that he was then recovering from his fifteenth case of the flu. This, it seems, would break the record. It was reported that there were three cases of flu in this community a few days ago.

Mr. Charley Robinson, who built the road from the Union township line to Santue, has now a similar position on a road leading out from Carlisle.

The boll weevil must have gotten in its destructive work equally as bad here as anywhere. From another section comes the report that where 80 bales of cotton were made two years ago only six bales will be gotten this year on the same area.

Things seem to be getting on pretty well in this community, as we hear no serious complaints. We judge that our people will make such transitions as are necessary to meet changed conditions.
