Trouble for Suffragists.

Spokane, Sept. 24.—Storms on all sides and a lot of political fireworks are predicted for the sessions of the first annual convention of the Washington Equal Suffrage league in Masonic temple here, October 7 and 8.

When representatives of the national association and delegates from every club in the state will prepare to welcome the new organization.

The fight to prevent recognition by the national body will be waged by suffragettes from the western part of the state, where a faction headed by Mrs. Emma Smith De Voe was successful in routing the insurgent wing, of which Mrs. May Arkwright Hutton of Spokane is the guiding spirit, at the national gathering at Seattle in July.

Mrs. Homer Hill of Seattle, temporary president of the new association, will preside over the first session and will be supported by Mrs. Hutton and Mrs. La Reine H. Baker of Spokane, and the Misses Louise, Helen, Gertrude and Lucy Kangley of Seattle, who participated in the suffragists' campaign in London, England, last spring, and others from western Washington.

There will be a series of receptions and banquets, at which prominent women, including Miss Florence Kelly, a national officer and anti-child labor advocate, will speak, after which plans are to be perfected for an energetic campaign throughout the commonwealth. It is supposed to send at least 50 young women into the various districts to do the preliminary work of the battle for the ballot in Washington.

"While we expect the fight of our lives at the Spokane convention," said Mrs. Hutton, "we have been assured the support of Anna Shaw, president, and other members of the national body."

Death of Mrs. Jane Hardman.

Mrs. Jane Hardman, who was taken to the Emergency hospital two weeks ago for an operation, died Saturday evening. The end came very unexpectedly to the family. The operation was successfully performed and it was expected that she would be removed to her home yesterday. Somehow complications set in and with but a few hours' warning she passed away.

Funeral services were held at 10 o'clock today at the Wenatchee Undertaking parlor, and interment was in the Wenatchee cemetery.

Mary Jane Field Hardman was born in Indiana in 1843. She was married to Peter Hardman in 1885. He preceded her in death five years. Soon after Mr. Hardman's death Mrs. Hardman came to Wenatchee with her sons. She is the mother of ten children, five of whom survive, viz., E. D., Chas. S., and Mrs. Ruth Manning, of Wenatchee; Mrs. Olivia Martin, of Belle Plain, Kan.; Mrs. Clara Montgomery, of Orleans, Ind. She has one brother, George R. Field, of Wenatchee.

Mrs. Hardman was a faithful member of the Church of Christ and died in that faith.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Webb returned to their home at Rock Island today, after visiting their parents a few days.

Old Favorites to Return.

Scene from the Juvenile Bostonians which will be here Tuesday.

Everyone in Wenatchee will be delighted to hear that the Juvenile Bostonians are once more coming back after a long absence. The thought of once more hearing these sweet-voiced girls sing brings a thrill of anticipation to all lovers of the theatre, while the mere mention of Babe Mason's name brings a smile to the face of the most crabbed. The management have spared no expense in putting out the company this season and the attraction will be better than ever, but as an old theatregoer was heard to say when he heard that they were coming back: "If the young ladies are as good this time as they have always been before they are good enough for anybody." After a short tour of the principal cities of the west they will make a tour of the Orient.

The Juvenile Bostonians, with their pretty faces, sweet voices and winning ways are to be with us again for a limited engagement of two nights on Sept. 28 and 29. New songs, new quips, new wardrobe, scenery and Babe Mason at the head of the company. Miss McClaire is still with the organization and will be heard to advantage in some of the latest musical hits of the season. "Berta's Billion" is the name of one of the new musical comedies and will be a scream from beginning to end, as one can imagine with Babe Mason as Berta the German girl.

Funeral of Mrs. Miller.

The funeral of Mrs. Victor Miller, which was held yesterday afternoon at Wenatchee Undertaking parlors, was attended by a large number of friends. The floral decorations were beautiful. The Women of Woodcraft and Royal Neighbors attended in a body.
