PARIS. June 20-The kaiser has made another date with Von Hindenburg to take dinner in Paris on June 28

Letters taken from captured German soldiers in the battle of Oise show that they were told by their officers that Paris was to be captured by that date.

This is taken by military critics here to indicate that the German general staff has laid plans for a fifth great blow at the allied armies immediately, to follow the offensive between Montdidler and Noyon which ended in com-

That there would be a fifth phase of the great 1918 offensive has never been doubted. It is well understood by the allies that the German strategy is to launch closeless attacks at various points on the front until the allies are so exhausted that a break through to Paris and the channel ports will be possible. Next Blow This Month.

Observers now believe that the next blow will be launched about June 22 23, ten days after the collapse of the drive for Compiegne. The great question is, where will it come?

Reviewing the offensive since its beginning on March 21, it will be noted that the Germans have struck each time at a different spot. First It was at Amiens and Arras, where the HUNS launched their hardest attacks, made their greatest territorial gain.

The second drive was at Ypres early in April. Here the French and British held the enemy back at Kemmel with comparatively small gains.

The third phase came at Soissons and on the Marne, after a lull of more This line had been weakened by the allies to reinforce the Amiens front. and the result was that the Germans reached the Marne. Again, however, than a month during which Hinden burg reformed his shattered agnies. the French and Americans reserve filled the gap and stopped the foe.

Foe Can Strike Anywhere. The fourth offensive came just where General Foch had reason to believe it would be struck-on the Noyon. This time he was ready, and the Germans were held to a five mile ndvance at terrific losses.

Hindenburg is now concentrating his forces for a fifth attack somewhere for some time. along the front from Ypres to Verdun It will not be long in coming. It is possible that even he is not yet certain where it will fall.
