WHILE the second bill of the Crackerjack Girls at the Hipp is not so snappy as the first, yet on account of the smart manner in which it is put over, it affords ample entertainment, with no regrets lingering in the mind. The specialties are all live ones, handled by artists of experience and have merit. The bill changes tonight.

Strong Feature at Nelson.
That distinctive quality known as caste dominates every situation and detail of production of "A Society Exile." The scenes are laid principally in Venice and in England, and the characters are mainly of excellent social position. The atmosphere of good breeding, correct surroundings and the admirable acting of the entire cast brings out every point of the story. "A Society Exile" is more romantic than realistic, but is consistent to the class in which it belongs, and the plot has sufficient red blood running through its veins to awaken real interest in the men and women whose lives it depicts.

"A Society Exile" was written before the big war had touched English society and men and women of the higher social grade had not gone through the baptism of fire which was to try their souls. As an example of the sort of dramatic fare which one of England's foremost playwrights thought suitable to his public it is also interesting. Guida Bergere in adapting the play to the screen has brought the period up to the present and taken full advantage of the greater latitude of the silent stage to follow the movements of its characters.

Elsie Ferguson plays the part of Nora Shand, an American heiress whom fate treats with great harshness. The varied emotions under which she labors during the unfolding of the story are finely indicated by her and she is enabled to wear a number of gowns that set off her beauty at its best.

Speaks Highly of Dixie Film.
A leading Chicago critic says of "The Third Degree," which is showing at the Dixie, that it is a desirable drama, carefully and consistently carried out by a host of players, experienced in their pursuits and agreeable to gaze upon. In the transition of this play by Charles Klein, Vitagraph crowned itself with glory and likewise restored to actual life a dramatic achievement of bygone days which stirred theatergoers everywhere and brought undying fame to its author. By reason of its simple elegance and straightforwardness the film will live long in the memory of cinema devotees.

Alice Joyce as the police victim's wife rivets your attention from the beginning. An unwelcome daughter-in-law in the aristocratic home of her youthful husband's father, she leaves the unpleasant abode, with her devoted spouse trailing after her in the face of parental ire, to face poverty and subsequent disaster. Together they plod along, fighting a losing battle without any assistance. When the youth gets into trouble with the police on a murder charge she battles for his release practically unassisted, lying away her virtue to save him from the electric chair and to shield his indiscreet stepmother from public disgrace. And her self-sacrifice doesn't restore the man she loves to complete happiness.

Weekly Story Filmed.
A Saturday Evening Post story is responsible for the little comedy drama at the Princess today. It carries an air of romance through the plot, has to do with ordinary folks that unconsciously first laugh and then cry. The Christie Comedy and the Pathe News add a variety that will be welcomed by most folks who are not so very strong for long reels.

Attorney Herschel Rose visited Captain Pickering last night and asked regarding the detention rooms and receiving the captain's earnest request that he be allowed to continue taking charge of it. It was decided to continue the $50 a month from the County court as formerly. The city has agreed to continue its $50 a month and a meeting will be held soon with city and county authorities present, including Captain Pickering, when plans will be discussed which shall place both the Nursery and Detention rooms on a firm basis of running.

Captain Pickering and his wife were married just last week and come to this city following a brief honeymoon in New York, the home of the bride, where she has been working at Salvation Army headquarters for the past two years.

"We're going to continue having our headquarters in Fairmont," said the Captain this morning.
