TOOTHMAN'S MEN HAVE HARD GAME ON THEIR HANDS

Predicted That Salem Will Roll Up Large Score on Normalites.

By LARRY.

Homer Toothman was standing at Main and Jefferson streets at 8 o'clock this morning when the writer came along.

"When are you off for Salem?" I asked.

"Most of the team has gone," said Sandy. "I am just waiting to pick up a few late comers and take them over in my car."

"What are the chances today?" "None for us," declared Sandy. "I'll be lucky to escape getting walloped by less than 75 to 0."

"But two of the Salem backs are out of the game," I argued. "Don't give a darn if all the backs are out of the game. We haven't a chance today," declared the coach of the Fairmont State Normal School.

So it is evident that the local team is merely going to Salem today to fill a date on the schedule, and not filled with hopes of victory. But I have known strange things to happen in the sport world, so I will not be a bit surprised if Salem does not win by anything like the wide margin predicted by the Normal coach.

At Traction Park. There will be an interesting football game at Traction Park this afternoon, when two high schools supporting football for the first time, West Monongah and Farmington, will clash. The teams are reported to be evenly matched, and a great game is expected. West Monongah was defeated by Fairmont High School last Saturday, but they will be in better shape for the game this week, and the opposition will be more in their class. A large crowd will witness the contest.

WASH-JEFF WILL HAVE HARD GAME

Bethany Ready to Give Red and Black Stiff Fight Tomorrow.

WASHINGTON, Pa., Oct. 6.—Southwestern Pennsylvania all of West Virginia and most of Eastern Ohio are interested in the big football battle here tomorrow between Wash-Jeff and Bethany. Recognized champions of the country last year, the Presidents will meet their first foe of worth tomorrow and they are likely to have one of the busiest afternoons of the season. Bethany is out to establish herself as Mountain State champion and with everything to win and nothing to lose in tomorrow's game, she can be counted upon to wage a desperate combat.

The teams that will appear on the College Field gridiron tomorrow afternoon will be among the biggest in the country, each averaging about 180 pounds in weight. But on both are some of the fastest men on the American gridiron today, making it certain that not only will there be a battle of physical giants, but a contest between speed merchants as well.

The game will start at 3:15 o'clock. Both elevens are in good shape, both have prepared diligently for the clash, and neither should be able to offer an alibi in case of defeat. J. G. Durtse of Oberlin will be referee; Eugene Dowling of Carnegie Tech umpire, and R. E. Cadigan of Syracuse head linesman. It is likely that full 15-minute periods will prevail.

POST-WAR MARVELS EXHIBITED TODAY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6.—Shells and tractors that seem to think for themselves and other post-war marvels of modern development were demonstrated today at the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds in connection with the annual meeting of the army ordnance association, and affiliated engineering societies. Shells with fuses devised to withstand the shock of firing gret withholding their detonation until they touch the cloth of an airplane wing vied for honors with equally deft projectiles of 2,000 pounds whose fuses wait until sixteen inches of armor steel has been penetrated before they explode their destructive charges. The former were developed for destruction of fragile aircraft and the latter for use against battleships and fortifications. Another airplane development will be shown tonight when flares will be dropped having sufficient power to light up a whole field for seven minutes with a glare equal to that of ordinary electric light bulbs. A tractor carrying two persons and crossing streams attracted considerable attention.

CO-ORDINATION'S THE THING MOST FOOTBALL ASPIRANTS HAVEN'T GOT, YOST SHOWS

COACH YOST.

By BILLY EVANS.

There would be a great many more good football players if more men that try for varsity elevens had co-ordination.

Many candidates for football teams know what they should do, but they cannot make their arms and legs do the things demanded of them.

Coach Yost of Michigan told us, while watching his squad practice, that he was trying to teach certain players co-ordination.

"Their minds, and limbs don't work together," explained the coach.

Some Did, Some Didn't. At that particular moment the various players would start running at an angle. The coach would yell "Reverse." The players were supposed to go in the opposite direction. Some did it almost instantly when the command was yelled; others hesitated before turning. Some hesitated longer than others.

"Watch these boys for a few minutes and you will see what I mean," said Yost.

We watched and the meaning was apparent. It was a struggle with some to change the action of the body when the mind willed the change after the command was heard.

Lots of Work. Much of the preliminary work of this varsity squad was occupied in going through exercises invented for no other reason than to develop co-ordination.

"Over here I'll show you a tackle," said the coach. "This boy is big and strong and bright. He knows exactly what a tackle should do and he can answer almost any question you ask him about tackle play, but watch him!"

At this particular moment the candidate's team was on offense. The boy's hands rested on his knees, while the other tackles' hands were up.

"Get your hands up or you'll get hurt," yelled Yost.

Order Repeated Twice. The order was twice repeated before the tackle's hands came up. They were repeated. Again they came up but before the ball was snapped they were down again.

A defensive lineman crashed into the tackle. His hands started up just before the impact; too late. The ball changed hands. The tackle, naturally, went on defense.

The opposing quarterback called wizardly should overcome the tremendous carrying power of Hagen's drives.

SARAZEN MEETS HAGEN FOR TITLE

Two Kings of Golf World Begin
Two Days' Battle for Supremacy Today.

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 6.—(By the Associated Press)—Two kings of the world of golf, attired in raiment intended to rival the lilies of the field, met today on the difficult course at Oakmont in the first half of a two days' struggle of seventy two holes to determine in an unofficial way which champion shall be hailed king-conqueror.

The contestants are Walter Hagen of New York, a veteran but still in his prime and Eugene Sarazan of Pittsburgh, a black haired boy of 21 years, who flashed into stardom at Skokie last July.

Hagen is open champion of Great Britain. Sarazan is the first youth in history to hold the national professional and national open titles at the same time. He won the open crown at medal play at Skokie and he smashed his way to triumph in the finals of a series of match play struggles on the same course that today's battle is staged.

The final round of thirty-six holes will be played tomorrow on the Westchester-Baltimore links at Rye, N. Y. The winner will receive 50 per cent of the purse of $3,000, the loser getting the rest. Two thirds of the sum was put up by the Rye Club, which is located a short distance from the childhood home of the Pittsburgh Champion. Hagen is also familiar with the fairways and pitfalls of both courses.

Hagen's fighting qualities in match play are well known. It is conceded that he should have an advantage from the tee because of his superior driving power, but Sarazen faction contend that Gene's steadiness and approaching for a play against this tackle's side of the line. The tackle noted the runner start in his direction. He shifted his feet in opposite directions, was knocked sideways before he could regain his balance, but managed to regain his feet.

Took Him Too Long. The runner was passing by. The tackle lifted neither hand to stop him. Suddenly he whirled, flung his body at the runner and managed to catch him by the ankles.

"You see," remarked the Michigan coach, "he knows all the time just what he should do but he lacks co-ordination and he can't get his arms and legs to working as fast as his mind. It takes him too long to telegraph his orders to the limbs. If he had co-ordination that boy would be an All-American tackle as sure as he lives. He has everything that he needs but good co-ordination."

So, each day, the candidates that do not respond rapidly are put through a program of exercises carefully planned to develop co-ordination between mind and body.

MORE NEW FACES ON MOUNTAINEERS

Several Players in Wesleyan
Gam Will Not Play in Marietta Game.

MORGANTOWN, October 6.—(Special)—Students and townspeople are ready for the opening football game of the home season tomorrow afternoon when the West Virginia University eleven meets the Marietta College outfit on the athletic field here. Just before the final workout, which will be nothing more than a light signal drill, it was reported in official circles here that at least three men who started the Wesleyan game at Fairmont last Saturday would be on the sidelines at the kickoff tomorrow. The names of the men were not made public but those attending the practice sessions this week have noticed that Pierre Hill, Phil Hill, Gus Ekberg, Carl Davis and Dana Lough have been spending a greater part of their time under blankets. Their places have been taken by Bob Hawkins, Vernon Barnard, Mahert, Dlicher and Pat Quarles, respectively. Many think Phil Hill and Davis will get the call again tomorrow, but few entertain hopes for the chances of the others.

It is only natural that the Mountaineers should be favorites to win tomorrow, but in spite of the general feeling of confidence many believe that Marietta is going to spring a surprise. Several times supposedly "easy" games have resulted disastrously for the Mountaineers and since no one has ever looked upon the Marietta contest as a "soft" engagement the Buckeyes loom up as a formidable opponent. In scrimmages here this week the scrubs have used Marietta players, which were given to them by Assistant Coach Rodgers who saw the Ohio eleven in its opening game with Salem College, to advantage against the Varsity. On the other hand the first string backs have had little success in gaining through the scrub line, which is admittedly weaker than the Marietta first defense. As time passes tomorrow's game gives every indication of being a battle which will test the metal of every man on the Mountaineer squad.

Majority Rule Isn't Always the Right Kind of a Guide

It's a curious thing, but majority rule does not indicate the finer things in life—minorities rule art, music, literature—the really worth while things.

Majority rule, for instance, says "price" is the chief consideration in Clothes—but minorities favor the right style, rightly tailored before any thought of cost.

That's why there are more men who look poorly in their clothes than who look well—if you want to be well groomed, see the styles developed by our tailors for Fall.
