OLD NAMES BACK IN FAVOR

"Mary" and "Eliza" Again in Style, After Having Suffered a Temporary Eclipse.

Old-fashioned names are again in style, and the greatest of them all—Mary—heads the list of present day Detroit brides, says Bert Maloney, marriage license clerk.

"I have a passion for the name of Mary," sang Byron, and many a poetical Detroit will experience a cuddly feeling at the news that the old names are back again.

The popular Sarahs Anns, Agneses and Janes of Byron's time gave way to the Ernstrudes, Clarisses and Ysobels of recent yesterday, but now they're coming into their own again.

Of course, "Mary" never went entirely out. There's something elemental in it that defies banishment. It's an ancient name of many tongues, symbolically connected with motherhood, with Isis and the moon and with the regeneration of man.

What Did He Mean by None?

The minister was visiting one of his thrifty parishioners when the latter's little son came into the room. After a few words with him the minister handed him a penny. "You'd better put it in your bank and let it grow," he suggested. "It's too small to buy anything now."

The father of the house began to chuckle until the youngster retorted, "I'll save it till Sunday, then, and put it in the church basket with papa's pennies."

The minister tried to relieve the embarrassment. "None is too small," he said, "to give to the Lord."

But the parishioner isn't sure yet what he meant by none.

Tows Speejacks Across Pacific

First Story of Progress of Gowen Party in Globe-Circling Trip in Yacht.

ENJOYED THEIR LONG PULL

Eastern Queen Tows Yacht From Panama to Teekoa—Captain Swensen's Last View of Speejacks Party Was in Harbor at Sydney.

New York.—The first story of the Speejacks came to the port from which she sailed last August on the first leg of her 50,000-mile voyage around the world. For eight months Albert J. Gowen, Chicago business man and owner of the Speejacks, has been pushing the prow of his 98-foot yacht through South Pacific waters, and except for a brief bulletin sent six weeks ago from Ralau, New Britain, to the ship construction company which built this craft, nothing has been heard of this second "Cruise of the Shark."

Last week, however, the S. S. Eastern Queen docked at Baltimore, and her captain, N. A. Swensen, came on to New York with his story of the Speejacks, the first story of the adventures. For Captain Swensen towed the Speejacks behind the Eastern Queen more than 4,000 miles, from Panama to Teekoa, and later saw the Gowen party on their study craft in Sydney, Australia, before the adventures, left last night for Java and Borneo.

Captain Swensen was with the Speejacks on one of the most interesting parts of her voyage, her longest jump from land to land, and he tells a story of the trip from Panama to Teekoa.

When Mr. Gowen prepared to leave New York last August his boat, specially built for the voyage, was expected to proceed under her own power all the way, traversing the globe just south of the Equator. Her cruising range, however, was limited to 3,000 miles, and in order to make the first lap of the trip from Ralau to the Marquesas Islands without mishap and with a saving of fuel, Mr. Gowen contracted with the United States shipping board to be towed to Teekoa by the first shipping board boat which made the trip. The Eastern Queen, bound for Sydney, Australia, was delegated to the task.

"The last we saw of the Speejacks," said Captain Swensen, "was shortly after Christmas—the 27th or 28th. She was in Neutral harbor, Sydney, where the Gowens spent Christmas, and we were all invited over to see them. They were then in high spirits and anxious to get along into the islands and heading west."

En Tour.

"We left New York on September 16 with a light cargo. Hoveled down the coast and went through the canal on the 28th, laying to alongside the Speejacks the next day, just off Balboa. There we put a line on her, putting an eight-inch hawser around her from stem to stern and back to stem to relieve the strain on her hawse pipes. We fastened her behind the Eastern Queen with 300 fathoms of eight-inch manila hawser, tying to the halter we had around her. Then we were off for Teekoa and Tahiti.

"We'd been out two days and the weather was holding fine. The Speejacks was bobbing along behind us like a big cork on the end of a string. But I knew from the strain she was exerting that if we hit any wind and weather the Speejacks was going to play havoc with that eight-inch hawser. So we hoisted and put in a day changing the eight-inch hawser for a ten-inch."

"We got the big hawser out on deck and put one end overboard. Then we lowered a boat, which took charge of the loose end of the hawser. The small boat then rowed toward the Speejacks while we played out hawser and slowly proceeded, pulling the Speejacks and leaving the small boat behind. There were lots of sharks in that water, and if the men in the boat had slipped anywhere they would have capsized in the midst of them. But they didn't.

"We got the big hawser aboard the Speejacks, made a new bridle for it, and then took off the eight-inch hawser—and there we were, all ready for anything, with 300 fathoms of ten-inch hawser instead of the lighter line. Luckily we did not strike any bad weather during the whole 4,200 miles. "Every day of the trip we could see the crew on the deck of the Speejacks, keeping things in shape and enjoying their long pull. Mrs. Gowen was often seen on the deck supervising things, and when we visited the yacht she was always having the time of her life, so she said, keeping her house tidy and looking after her boys." At night they always had a big time aboard the Speejacks. They have a big phonograph, you know, and their wireless man broadcasted concerts to us."

The Speejacks is equipped with wireless apparatus capable of sending about 1,000 miles and with an unlimited receiving range. After she left the Eastern Queen at Teekoa she sent several messages to Captain Swensen, telling him of her location and her progress.

Reported "Lost."

"One funny little incident," said the captain, "came on October 7, while we were in the middle of the Pacific. We picked up a message one night telling how a search was being instituted for the Speejacks, which had been reported lost somewhere in the Pacific. I believe I've got a copy of the message somewhere."

He looked through a bundle of papers and dug out a penciled note which read:

"Los Angeles—Search Pacific being instituted for private motor yacht Speejacks with Capt. and Mrs. Gowen and party aboard. Gowen's relatives announced sighting wreck, apparently abandoned, unidentified launch off Lower California, recently increased apprehension. Speejacks left New York for world tour in August last, reported leaving Ralau for Honolulu ten days ago. Party included specimen hunters for American Museum of Natural History, also included Capt. Trevor Hogg, captain 1916 Princeton eleven."

HELEN MAY MARTIN

Miss Helen May Martin of Olathe, Kan., although deaf, dumb, and blind since birth, plans to be a self-supporting professional pianist, and indications are that she will be successful. Although she has been straining the piano for but four years, Miss Martin's first public appearance recently was a decided success. With a sense of touch alone she has mastered thirty selections. In 1918 Miss Martin, then twenty-one, took her first lesson from a blind pianist who visited Olathe.

This Bird Feasted on Valuable Stones

Tacoma, Wash.—An ostrich that choked to death on a pine cone here was, after a post mortem examination, found to be a veritable food box. A pint of highly polished agates was taken from the proventriculus, a sort of stomach to which is attached the gizzard as the hopper to a mill, and a quantity of pure white pebbles of an unknown stone. The agates had been used in the grinding process of the bird's digestion so many times they were rounded into perfect spheres and about the size of "shooter" marbles. There is no way to know just how long an ostrich keeps such stone-ware after picking it up, but this bird was left here last fall by an amusement company. Whenever the fastidious creature feasted it had eaten valuable stones instead of ordinary gravel.

Trevor Hogg, captain 1916 Princeton eleven.

"When we got this message we wired the Speejacks, 300 yards away, and asked her if she was still with us. Then we wired Los Angeles that Speejacks was O. K., still tied to us and proceeding without difficulty toward Tahiti. Also wired Gowen's secretary in Chicago that newspaper reports were to be disregarded."

We cut loose from Speejacks about 90 miles off Teekoa, 500 miles off Tahiti. Then we went on to Pago Pago with our consignment of case oil and left it there for the Speejacks to pick up when she came along. Teekoa is in the Tuamotu archipelago and Pago Pago is in Samoa, you know. I left oil at both places for Mr. Gowen.

"So far as I kept track of her the Speejacks was keeping to her schedule in good shape. I heard from her at Teekoa, Tahiti, Pago Pago, and Apia in Samoa, Suva in Fiji, Noumea in New Caledonia and Sydney. I heard a rumor after I left Sydney that Mr. Gowen's drinking water had led on him and that he had to put in some where to renew his supply; failed to find water and shipped a cargo of coconut milk till they got to live. I don't believe it, though, as the Speejacks had a big fresh water supply and was equipped with a condenser to distill drinking water over from the salt it necessary."

Specially Built for It.

Mr. Gowen had the Speejacks built specially in New York and he is sailing her under the flag of the Adventurers' club. The proposed tour of the world will include approximately 50,000 miles and will take about 18 months for completion. Besides Mr. and Mrs. Gowen the boat has on board nine others, all men, including representatives of the American Museum of Natural History and the National Geographic society, as well as the Field museum of Chicago. Capt. Trevor Hogg, master of the ship, is an old college mate of Mr. Gowen, and was captain of the Princeton eleven in 1916. The boat cost approximately $250,000 and is equipped for a cruising radius of 3,000 miles without renewal of supplies.

The last word received in New York from the Gowen party was a cable sent from Mr. Gowen at Ralau, New Britain, to the Consolidated Shipbuilders' corporation. This was received several weeks ago, and said: "All well. Leaving today for Ambonya." Ambonya is in the Malay archipelago.

Rules for Longevity.

Popular Bluff, Mo.—There are three rules for longevity, according to William Huskey, one hundred years old, of Smelterville. These are: First, moderate habits; second, work hard; third, attend to your own business. A few days ago Huskey celebrated his one hundred birthday, sitting in his "old favorite" rocking chair by his "fireplace" in the little farm home. Huskey is married and his wife is eighty-four years of age. He is the father of 18 children. He can neither read nor write, but is quite conversant with the questions of the day.

One gallon of this solution will spray 800 square feet of lawn. Three sprays are necessary every year, one in May, one in June and the third in the fall.

The Young Mother.

THE ILLS OF INFANTS AND CHILDREN should be so well known to the youngest of mothers that a reminder or a repetition of the symptoms of illness seems unnecessary, yet there are some mothers who overlook a feverish condition, a little colic, or a disposition to be irritable. If not corrected they may lead to serious sickness. And to correct them, to bring Baby back to its happy self, is so easy by the use of Castoria—a medicine prepared just for infants and children. It will regulate the bowels (not force them), aid digestion and so bring quiet and rest.

Fletcher's Castoria has been doing this for over 30 years; regulating the stomach and bowels of infants and children. It has replaced the nauseating Castor Oil, so-called Soothing Syrups, poisonous Paregoric and other vicious concoctions in the homes of true and honest mothers—mothers who love their children.

Those mothers will give their babies foods and medicines especially prepared for infants and children.

A Word About Truth.

"Great is Truth, and mighty above all things." So says the Old Testament, yet it is equally true to-day. Truth shows no favors, fears no enemies.

From the inception of Fletcher's Castoria, Truth has been the watchword, and to the conscientious adherence to this motto in the preparation of Fletcher's Castoria as well as in its advertising is due the secret of its popular demand.

All imitations, all substitutes, all just-as-good preparations lack the element of Truth, lack the righteousness of being, lack all semblance even in the words of those who would deceive.

And you! Mothers, mothers with the fate of the World in your hands, can you be deceived? Certainly not.

Fletcher's Castoria is prepared for Infants and Children. It is distinctly a remedy for the little-ones. The BABY'S need for a medicine to take the place of Castor Oil, Paregoric and Soothing Syrups was the sole thought that led to its discovery. Never try to correct BABY'S troubles with a medicine that you would use for yourself.

Cascara Bark. The supply of cascara bark is limited. Although barberry trees are found in California, Oregon and other states, they are not as numerous as in Washington. The supply there is being rapidly depleted, each year the gatherers going further into the swampy depths of the forests. The bark renews itself in time, but the second growth is not as desirable as the old and contains less pungent medicinal sap.

Many kinds of medicines, flavors and drugs are made from the barberry bark and it is used around the world.
