GENERAL TELEGRAPHS.

The Tragedy at Billings.

Special to the Yellowstone Daily Journal.
George A. McArthur, and not James McArthur, is the name of the man who shot J. D. Russell in Mat Rodemaker's saloon and billiard hall. McArthur was, at his own request, arrested. In the absence of coroner Hersey, Judge Olmstead acted as coroner, and empaneled the following jury: T. M. Fauch, S. Deutsch, D. A. Larson, Capt. J. Tully, M. Willard and J. H. Shea. Mr. R. T. Allen acted as clerk and carefully noted down all the evidence testified to by the different witnesses. Samuel Wilde conducted the case in behalf of the people, and Judge Porter performing a similar duty on the side of the accused. Mat Rodemaker, the first witness called, testified in substance, that yesterday afternoon, Russell and McArthur were in his saloon, when a quarrel arose between them and they clinched, both falling to the floor at the same time, witness, with the assistance of James W. Ward, separated them; Russell arose and washed himself and walked out. McArthur then proceeded to wash himself when Russell came in with something in his hand and struck at McArthur, who drew a revolver and shot Russell in the abdomen. Witness heard other shots immediately follow the first, but did not see them fired. James W. Ward corroborated Rodemaker's testimony. Dr. Porter testified that they called upon him and when he reached the place he found James Russell lying on the floor groaning and pulseless and McArthur sitting in a chair by his side with a revolver in his hand. McArthur said: "I shot him twice in the head; send for an officer; I shall not give up my gun to anyone but a constable." The doctor drew his attention to the wound in Russell's abdomen and asked him if he had done that, but McArthur made no reply. The witness said either of the wounds was sufficient to cause death. Mr. Hanson identified the revolver as one he had lost in McArthur's on the 25th inst. It was a thirty-two calibre, five-shot revolver. The jury brought in a verdict of willful murder against McArthur. We were unable to obtain a copy of the evidence as taken down.

Fighting Factions.

NEW YORK, Nov. 4.—A feud that is feared will lead to serious results, broke out at Selanket, Long Island, between colored and Irish people who recently came into the place in great numbers to work in the rubber factory. A few nights ago a white man was badly beaten by some negroes, and in retaliation whites beat every colored man they found on the streets, with stones and clubs and several persons were badly injured. The negro dwellings were attacked and windows and doors were broken. The negroes finally appeared armed with shot guns, when the assaultants fled, but further trouble is now feared.

A Lucky Darkey.

KEOKUK, IOWA, Nov. 4.—Six years ago an eccentric Spaniard was in this city. He died in Spain a short time since. He had only one child, a girl twelve years old, and it seems he wanted her raised as a protestant, and in his eccentricity appointed George Bland, a colored blacksmith of this city, her guardian. He made contract with a priest in Spain for carrying out his will, which provides that the priest shall receive $68,000 in case the conditions of his will are fulfilled, otherwise nothing. George Bland is to receive the same amount for guardianship of the child, who gets $360,000, a large amount of diamonds and jewelry. The man is now on the way to Spain to look after the matter.

An Editor Shot at Eureka.

EUREKA, Nov. 4.—A fatal shooting occurred here at about 4 o'clock this afternoon on Main street, between James A. Anderson, formerly of New Orleans, editor of the Eureka Evening Leader, a republican newspaper, and George F. Rick, the republican candidate for superintendent of public instruction. Mr. Anderson was shot through the bladder and lower bowels, but Reek was not hit. Anderson is in a dangerous condition. Reek after emptying his six shooter running up the street and Anderson pursuing and trying to fire the third time at him, but desisting on account of the crowded condition of the streets. The cause of trouble was a quarrel in regard to politics. Stories as to who fired the first shot conflicting.

Avoiding the Mob.

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 4.—Judge George N. Brown, who granted a change of venue in cases of Neal and Craft, at Cattleburg, the day before affair with Mott and Ashland, is at Frankfort, having left his home to avoid the fury of the mob, which his friends feared would be directed against him. The citizens of Cattleburg offered their services to protect him, but Brown deemed it best to absent himself until the excitement subsided, as he feared that this very offer of protection might lead to a collision between the mob and the law abiding citizens, which he desired to avoid. Prominent citizens of Ashland have telegraphed to Brown that the situation has changed and is quiet. He will return home to-morrow.

Political Puzzle in Pennsylvania.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 4.—Colonel Matthews Quay, secretary of the Commonwealth, resigned his office. Although Gov. Hoyt received a telegram last night, it was not until this p. m. that the resignation was made public through the medium of the resignation sent by Col. Quay to B. F. Chandler, his ass't at Harrisburg which was as follows: Gov. Hoyt received my resignation by telegraph at 6:30 yesterday evening, and I am no longer secretary of the Commonwealth. I presume he will consult with Stewart and Patteson and appoint a successor shortly, who will attend to unsigned commissions. [Signed] M. S. QUAY.
Mr. Quay says his resignation was caused by Gov. Hoyt's letter expousing independent republican cause, which was published yesterday afternoon. As soon as I had read that letter, Col. Quay said I telegraphed my resignation to Harrisburg, I felt that I could not continue in close relations with the Governor. In my telegram I tendered my peremptory resignation, which was to take immediate effect. It stated that I would beat Harrisburg next week to settle up my accounts. I meant that the Governor should give publicity to my action to-day. I received a number of unsigned commissions from Chandler, my telegram to him was not intended for publication. Gov. Hoyt's action will not effect the election.

She returned yesterday with the two oldest children having been in the mountains all the previous night during a heavy snow storm, explaining that the babe had annoyed her by crying and she had cut its head off with a hatchet. The statement proved true. Officers to-day found the body with head severed.

Narrow Escape of Gen. Butler.

LAWRENCE, MASS., Nov. 4.—It has just leaked out that Gen. Butler came near being drowned last Friday evening. He came up the river in the C. L. Mather, and just at the upper edge of the rapids, four miles below this place, the steamer ran upon a rock and stuck there. It was indispensable that Gen. Butler should be at Lawrence at an early hour, and a small boat carried by the steamer was brought alongside and Gen. Butler, Mayor Breen, Hon. Calvo Saunders and Capt. Honrus took places in it. The water was running swiftly and as soon as the boat was loaded the current began to suck it under counter of the steamer. In endeavoring to push it clear the boat was partially swamped, and each effort to right matters, only made them worse. The current was so swift that only extraordinary strong swimmers could escape being drawn into the rapids and whirled down the river a mile or two before still water could be reached. Fortunately the deck hands, after much effort, succeeded in hauling each man on board. The General escaping with bunched up hat and thorough wetting.
