

MOBS STILL CRY FOR BREAD.

The Berlin Bread Rioters Re-Assemble and Renew Their Demand for Food.

The Police Keep Busy Dispersing Them and Freely Use Their Sabres.

Fears Entertained that Pay Day Will Cause Liquor Drinking and Serious Fights.

Still Trying for Bread.

BERLIN, Feb. 26. The conflict between the police and a mob of 3,000 continued in Rosenthaler Strasse until 10 o'clock tonight. The police attacked the rioters with their sabres, striking them with the flat side of the weapons. The mob was at length routed and dispersed into side streets. Tomorrow is the regular pay day for workmen here and there is grave danger, the men being supplied with money, will indulge in drink and being inflamed by liquor grow uncontrollable and thus greatly intensify the disorders. A strong feeling is manifested by the public in regard to the state of affairs existing in the city. It is claimed precautions ought to have been adopted earlier. A strong force of police is guarding the palace and patrolling the streets tonight, and every precaution is being taken to meet with further outbreaks from the rioters. Only ten of the prisoners taken Thursday have been detained. Nine are charged with breach of peace and one with rioting, which offense is punishable with ten years imprisonment.

Curiosity brought out at least 30,000 people today. Throughout the afternoon the streets leading to the castle gardens were crowded with people who greatly hampered the police and this fact served to cause exaggerated ideas of the extent of the disorder. The press of all shades of politics appeals to the public to remain in doors. The fact that many innocent persons were injured in the different melees is likely to lead to the exercise of more discretion on the part of the police. Many ugly sabre cuts were treated at local surgeries today. The hour was further depressed. The emperor assumed an air of the greatest nonchalance when he rode out today. An attempt was made by demonstrators with shouts for bread and work to organize a procession to follow him but they were prevented from carrying out their intention by the police.

All quiet at midnight. There was some disorder at 10 o'clock. Several arrests were made and there were disturbances at the east end at about 11. The Vorwarts earnestly entreats comrades to hold aloof most carefully from demonstrations in the street as any impudence now may cause workmen to forfeit their most sacred rights.

THE BERLIN BREAD RIOTS.

The Berlin Bread Riots on the Disturbances.

BERLIN, Feb. 26.—At 3:15 Prince Henry of Prussia, the brother of the emperor, left the castle and drove in an open carriage through Unter den Linden. He was loudly cheered by the dense crowds that moved up and down the street. As the day wore on the riotous element which had been troublesome all day evidently tired out by their long and repeated efforts to make as much trouble as possible for the police began to disperse and make their way to their homes. At 7:30 p. m. the crowds thinned and the streets were gradually taking on their normal appearance. Late this afternoon a crowd attempted to hold a meeting on the street in front of the Dresden bank but the police dispersed them without much trouble. Numerous crowds gathered throughout the afternoon in the central parts of the city. As soon as they gathered they were dispersed by the police for the most part with little resistance but in a few instances serious encounters occurred and a number of persons were injured.

The newspapers warn the people against over-estimating the importance of the disturbances which they say are due to roughs who are always ready to commit outrages. The Tageblatt says the disturbances are senseless and without special significance. The Bismarck Courier expresses the belief that the rioters were not persons who attended the workmen's meetings. The socialist paper, Vorwarts, in an article on the troubles disclaims on behalf of socialist leaders any connection with the rioters. The paper declares the members of the mob belong to the lowest dregs of the city's population. The damage done yesterday amounts to thousands of marks. Ambulances were kept busy all the afternoon and evening conveying the wounded to hospitals.

DIEN'S TRADE REVIEW.

Nothing Particularly Encouraging for Business Outlook.

NEW YORK, Feb. 26. R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says the state of domestic trade has not materially changed, though continued dullness is perhaps more generally felt. At Chicago merchandise sales show an increase over last year and collections are easier. The receipts of dressed beef are three times and wheat double of cars and a liberal increase appears in other breadstuffs. Milwaukee reports business only fair and collections slow, owing to bad weather. At St. Louis the same cause makes the country trade almost impossible, but the outlook for spring trade is nevertheless considered more encouraging than a week ago.

Building operations promise very large and the demand for materials is already active. Minneapolis reports good business with an output of 172,000 barrels of

DINGLEY HAS HIS SAY.

The Wail of the Minority Heard Through the Maine Man.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 27. In the house today Representative Dingley of Maine presented for reference the following preamble and resolution:

WHEREAS, Certain gentlemen who have charge of the democratic party have determined that in order to avoid raising a direct issue on the principles which separate the republican and democratic parties in the approaching presidential election, it is necessary to make the people believe there is a question at issue between the two parties as to whether the appropriations and expenditures of the government shall be needlessly and wickedly extravagant or wisely prudent and economical; and

WHEREAS, These so-called leaders of the democratic party, in pursuance of this plan of dodging the real issues of principle between the two great parties in this campaign and in support of their unfounded charges of wicked extravagance against the republican congress, and their equally unfounded claim of superior honesty and economy for the present democratic congress, have found it necessary to defer all appropriations for public improvement and as far as possible all appropriations for the necessary objects of the government until the second session of the present congress, after the presidential election, in order that they may be able to point during the campaign to an apparent reduction of appropriations in support of their charges and claims, regardless of the certainty that this method of procedure will simply render it necessary to make larger appropriations for deficiencies and necessary public works at the second session of the present congress; therefore be it

Resolved, That in order to further this plan of campaign it is inexpedient to provide for the construction of any of the numerous public buildings which congress intends to authorize until the second session, after the presidential election shall have been decided and the necessity of which, as the democratic members seem to think, exists for pressing a false issue of economy in lieu of real issues, in the principle which shall divide the parties, shall have passed away.

The Assault on Mrs. Taylor.

SEBASTIA, Mo., Feb. 27.—The search for the fugitive assassin of Mrs. Charles Taylor still continues, but without result. Late last evening Sheriff Smith received information which leads him to believe the man will be captured inside of the next twenty-four hours.

WHAT OLIVE HARPER FINDS TO CHRONICLE.

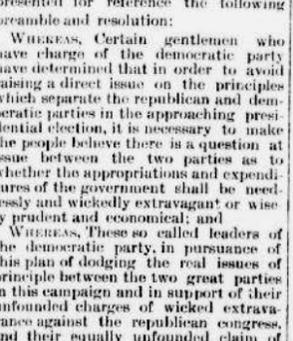

Blouse Effects are Popular in Waists. Accordion Plaiting is in Favor Again. Dainty Tea Gowns—Cashmere Capes for Spring Wear—Some New Gowns.

[Special Correspondence.]

New York, Feb. 26.—One or two of the largest importing houses make a specialty of importing pattern dresses for young girls which are afterward copied with slight changes. Among the latest to come, of such dresses I select two that mothers may know the styles that will prevail during this season, and these are representative.

Blouse effects appear in nearly all waists, with arrangements somewhat or quite like these two, of an extension of the skirt upward to form something of a girle effect.

The dress on the right side was modeled in the new red celatina, just the color of blood, and the waist and panel are of cream colored silk, with red velvet crown and pale green plumes. A pretty way to vary this dress for lighter material is to have the skirt accordion plaited and the material to be of cashmere, velveteen, alpaca in some one of the lovely new colors or of China silk.

Accordion plaiting has revived, and there will be more of it worn than ever before. Young and old will wear it. I have seen lately hundreds of summer and dancing dresses, made of light China silk, in pale blue, green, pink, lilac, cream and white, also red and black.

The dainty tea gowns and silk blouses have jackets of fine accordion plaiting down the front and sides. Several different kinds of laces and gremadines now being made up for summer wear are plaited in this way, and in fact wherever it can possibly be employed it is, even sometimes with some of the light moires and swivel brocades.

This is a style peculiarly adapted to young figures, though quite elderly ladies also wear it in more sober colored goods. One of the prettiest dresses I have seen was a dress where the skirt, waist of a rich golden brown China silk, with ruby velvet accessories and waist. It was for reception at home. The sleeves of almost half of the spring and summer dresses have a fall of plaiting of some material matching or contrasting with the rest of the costume.

Capes of cashmere for late spring are also made with one or two deep falls of accordion plaiting, fastened to a yoke, round or pointed. The other young girl's dress illustrated here is of stone gray cashmere, with a narrow border of gray fur, and the blouse is of printed silk in light gray and fawn. It is an easy pattern to follow and in the highest style. If the maker does not care for fur bordering, a little braiding would do.

Both these styles would be pretty made in wash goods, gingham, percale, chambray or sateen. Indigo percales, with white, red or black dots and figures, or satens in the same, would be very suitable, but gingham and chambray as a combination is more girlish. There are pretty cotton crepons which would be more graceful for the blouses than are harsher goods. Cotton challies also are soft and pliable and drapo well, better than chambray or percale.

Some of the new lawns are marvels of delicate beauty. The top of the skirt is plain white, and then begins a delicate floral pattern in very soft colors, scattered sparingly over, some of them consisting only of a crushed rose petal or apple blossom, and these continue at rather closer intervals to the bottom, where SPRING WALKING AND there is a printed CHURCH COSTUME, border of perfect flower and leaf, and each flower is outlined by an embroidered edge scalloped out. It is not possible to tell how delicate and refined the whole effect is.

I must leave off talking about these and say a word about the spring wraps, of which I give one here. It is of dark green "billiard cloth," gathered at the neck front and back in deep plaits, and overlaid with a double shoulder cape all bordered with narrow astrakhan. These two upper capes are postiche, so that as the weather moderates they can be left off one by one. The whole is useful and graceful. With it is worn a striped cheviot, made perfectly plain as to skirt, and with velvet sleeves and vest of the same color as the cape. The bonnet is cap shape, of white felt with red velvet crown and curling gold colored plumes.
