

MORNING APPEAL.

TUESDAY.....APRIL 23, 1878

EDITORIAL GLEANINGS.

WARD 39, MAISON DE SAINTE, SAN FRANCISCO, April 18, 1878.

APRIL DAYS.

I prop up and am propped so that I may look out toward Nob Hill from one of my windows, and refresh my soul with a look at the big cross on Lone Mountain from the other. (Lone Mountain has its peculiar exhilarations to a hospital patient; but a little of such excitement, mildly taken in, once or twice a day is enough.) Louis, my friend of the early dawn and the faithfulst person that ever wore an apron, fetches me a cup of hot tea and an account of the weather every morning between 5 and 6 o'clock; and with his coming and the raising of the window curtains, I and the April days now upon us renew our acquaintance. The sky is sullen too much of the time, and though the birds keep up a constant chatter, the lowering clouds are not cheering nor is the pattering rain an encouragement. In the Atlantic Monthly for April I find some extracts from the journal of my favorite author (the charmingest naturalist that ever lived), the late Henry D. Thoreau. Says he: "I hear a robin singing in the woods south of Homer's, just before sunset. It is a sound associated with New England village life. It brings to my thoughts summer evenings when the children are playing in the yards before the doors, and their parents, conversing, sit at the open windows." And so doth Robin Redbreast cheer me, here, flanked by pills and poultices and high-roosted on a regulation bolster of the hospital order. Also I like old Thoreau when he says, in his high disdain of the sordid things of this world: "Men's minds run so much on work and money that the mass instantly associate all literary labor with a pecuniary reward. They are mainly curious to know how much money the lecturer or another gets for his work." I need hardly say to the Faithful and Select, not to say Aristocratical and Cultured Few who read with daily delight the MORNING APPEAL, that this present scribe looks more to their sweet approving smiles for his reward than to the argentiferous treasures of the Comstock, the auriferous deposits of California, or the precious fabrics of the wealth-laden Orient. (This is a trifle obscure, but it is fetched up from the depths of an honest heart and is meant to awaken a responsive chord in the breasts of an appreciative clientele.)

And their expostulations, charges, counter-charges, confessions, recantations, oaths, affirmations, prayerful attitudes, and true inwardness the recent revival of interest occasioned by Mrs. Tilton's startling self-accusation demands some passing notice. And yet the subject is an unclean one and not to the liking of this commentator. I'd rather write of the lesser trifles of daily observation—the street cries and sights; the phenomena of a great city's hourly life; the coming and going of natural events, or a description of some of my fellow-hospitaliers, Frenchy as they were yet within the very heart of Old Paris, or still taking on the lights and shades of Rouen, or even now stretching their dreamy eyes across "The cornfields green and sunny vines, oh pleasant land of France." And so, with the mere mention of the soiled and never-to-be-cleaned surimanes of these sadly notorious guilty or innocent twain, I drop the profitless subject, merely adding that I suspect that Theodore Tilton is as much a man as Adam was when he turned State's against Mother Eve and made her bear the brunt of that little affair in Eden. I won't classify Theodore with Rutherford the Good; for I might, by so doing, do injustice to them both; but I rephend the former as one who has shown himself to be unmanful, shameless and cowardly. I will drop him.

SPEAKING OF RUTHERFORD, I suspect that he will be made to sweat great drops of guilt and shame ere many months. I am uncharitable enough to believe that he has gone deliberately into the huckster business. I know an awakened to a fear that if the truth were known, he had "sunk" that dead soldier's money down in Tennessee. I am afraid he takes out his percentage always when the doing of the same is practicable, as his "grist" when he sets the office-mill a-grinding. If ever we had a peanut and pop-corn President, Rutherford is the man. He causes had coffee and ice-water to be passed round at state dinners between the courses—drawing on the family grocer and pump instead of the wine-merchant and the White House cellar when the Executive mahogany is setting forth the Presidential hospitalities. And the evil tongue of Rumor dares to whisper that the rogue drinks strong waters on the sly behind the pantry door. "Thrift, thrift, Horatio." Yes, I think that what with the persistent efforts of that lean and hungry Cassius, Montgomery Blair, the unceasing aspirations of old Sammy Tilden, the volcanic conscience of our deluded Southern bretheren and the everlasting scorn and contempt of Conkling, Howe, et al., there will be such a ripping up of foul bargains and exposures of rottenness within the Presidential Ring as will make the country's stomach too much disturbed longer to entertain a doubt of the utter debauching and irretrievable nastiness and degradation of this prince of hypocrites, traitors and base schemers, Rutherford B. Hayes. The time draws nigh when they will tear aside the veil from this low pretender's misdeeds, and when the sheltering roof of uncertainty shall no longer hide from the public eye his deceptions wrought in the name of Conciliation and Reform. So vast a mass of corruption will, sooner or later, as by the upheaving forces of disintegration and decay, discover itself to the shame of the Republic and the confusion of the apologists of Hayes's shameless treachery to his party.

Possibly I have been betrayed into something like warmth. Perhaps I had better bridle myself down to a discussion of less personal and eruptive things such as the EASTERN QUESTION.

Now I have all along been saying that John Bull would not go to war with Russia. "Dizzy" is not a war-maker. He is a diplomatic old clo' man. Bluster, well kept up and precedent to a Congress of the Powers, will make England seem to have had the "say" in the matter of a final treaty between Russia and Turkey. But Bismarck will stand as the friend of the Czar, thus putting the key of the situation in the hands of the German Empire. Austria is merely sparring for wind. Turkey will surely be wiped off the map of Europe; Russia will surely find her way unvetted to the Mediterranean; and there will be no more war growing out of the Ottoman question.

WHAT THEY SAY. They say that Senator Sharon will depart hence to Washington the next day after tomorrow, that is to say, on Sunday, the 20th instant.

They say that Col. James G. Fair has gone to Pasa Robles to get relief from his rheumatics and other ills incident to overwork, and that Bill O'Brien, of the honanza firm, is housed, very badly off with his family disease, consumption.

They say that old Broadhorns is actively courting a fair damsel of the Valley of the San Joaquin, promising her a share of the glories of a third term in the Gubernatorial "cheer."

They say that I'll be able to walk a thousand miles in a thousand hours in about a week. Then, in good time I will mount the towering Sierra, homeward bound. M.
