THE CHILDREN ATE ALONE.

Unsatisfactory Result of an Experiment.

The Dobson and Hobson families had a joint dinner on Thanksgiving day. Dobson evolved the idea of having the numerous children eat all alone by themselves at a separate table. It would be harmonious for the children and allow adults to talk scandal which would not be appropriated by young ears. Hobson remarked:

"Dob, we'll try the plan, but you must caution your boy Billy to behave himself. You know he hasn't the table manners of my boys."

"Now I like that, Mr. Hobson. My children are the best behaved in Carson and I hope that they will never be compelled to learn table manners from your boys, who put more food in their pockets than goes down their gullets."

The wives of the two interfered at this point and assured the men that no two families in town had such gentlemanly, bashful and circumspect children. The dinner came off on schedule time, and as soon as the kitchen door was closed the youngsters locked it on the inside. The trouble appeared to have begun as to who should carve the turkey. Owing to some lack of a regular understanding on the part of the heads of the families, four boys attempted the task at once. The adults heard a noise in the next room and attempted to get in, but, owing probably to the locked condition of the door, were unable to do so.

The noise grew grander and more diversified as it progressed. Any practiced ear could tell that war was between the china crockery loaned by Mrs. Dobson and the cheap queensware furnished by Mrs. Hobson, who seemed somehow to have lacked confidence in the children. The noise of the castor traveling back and forth between the walls of the room and the sharp, shrill war whoop of William Hobson, Jr., as he mashed a pickle bottle over the head of the hopeful of the other house was not entirely drowned by the other noises. The parents finally got into the kitchen by the back way and untangled seven boys from the table linen and the cranberries.

The children will not be asked to amalgamate when the families eat their Christmas dinners, unless the new boiler iron kitchen is completed.

Thanksgiving Quotations.

On Thursday there was a general disposition to load up with Turkey, and the stock was in great demand in the afternoon mahogany board. Claret and Champagne had the call after the regular session, and investors laid in all that was offered. After the board numbers of persons, mostly small boys, got out on the street and began to unload. Then stocks struck bed rock immediately, and there was no attempt to bull the market. A number of men joined a pool and attempted to take in all the Egg Nog at the various saloons, and the majority loaded up rather too heavily to handle the goods. Transactions in Rummen Gam, Tommen Jerry and other outside stocks were active as late as 2 o'clock yesterday morning.

A Chance for Rose.

There is great excitement in the sporting world over the announcement that Mace and Sullivan will fight for the championship of the world. The Renoites are already moving heaven and earth to get the ring pitched in their town, with Mr. Powning as referee.

Oriental tooth wash, Tettlow's perfumes and Slavens face powders for sale at Fosters.

Dan De Quille Sustained.

When the tracks at the State Prison were first discovered Dan De Quille advanced the theory that they were not the tracks of man, but of a gigantic sloth. Professor Marsh, an Eastern scientist of considerable reputation, now holds the same view. When Dan made his announcement it created no impression to speak of, but that Marsh makes the same discovery it is heralded all over the country as the weighty opinion of a great man. A man who does not have the "Prof." hitched to his name need never hope to make any scientific discoveries which anybody will be impressed with. During the past twenty-five years Dan has carefully studied meteorological phenomena, the habits of animals and the geological formation of the earth until it is a safe assertion that few of the graduates of the scientific schools can tell him anything which he has not from actual observation studied out himself. There is much credit due Mr. Wright (Dan De Quille) in this line which has been persistently withheld from him.

Strother's Fence.

The main topic of conversation in political circles of the Comstock in the action of Mr. Strother, late candidate for Governor, is erecting a forty-foot fence alongside a neighbor's house, thereby shutting out the light, heat and beautiful Comstock landscape. It is alleged that he erected the fence to keep a woman next door from throwing ashes into the yard. If that woman has any sort of that grit which Virginia people are made of she will rig up a ladder or a derrick, or something of that sort and continue to dump the ashes over the fence and all over Strother's house. A good, active woman ought to be able to keep Strother building stories on his fence until it would make a land mark for the weary wayfarer as far away as the Mound House.

On the Track.

Detective Madison of Chicago was in the city yesterday. He does not state his business, but it is believed that he is on the trail of ex-Senator Spencer, one of the missing witnesses in the star route trial. Spencer has been hiding about Nevada for several months, and not long ago was in Cherry Creek. He seems to have been able by means of the receipt of cypher dispatches to keep pretty well posted on the movements of the prosecution and has successfully evaded arrest. He is now believed to be somewhere in the mountains about Lake Tahoe.

Social Gathering.

On Thanksgiving night a party was given to Miss Mattie Sherman, daughter of the proprietor of the Arlington House. It was attended by a large gathering of the young folks and the affair wound up with a collation which was considered by the guests as a fitting sort of sequel to the general festivities.

Death of A. E. Shannon.

A. E. Shannon, Grand Master of the Odd Fellows, of Nevada, and Grand Chancellor of the Knights of Pythias, died at Eureka yesterday morning. On receipt of the news the flags of the Orders were placed at half mast over the Odd Fellows' hall.

Yesterday Ed. Raum, Sheriff of White Pine county, came into Carson with three prisoners for the Penitentiary. They were C. C. Dalker, sentenced to eight years for attempting to set fire to the residence of Dr. Tufford at Cherry Creek, also Robert Catterton and Charles Nickols, for house breaking, each sentenced to nine years.

Wagner & Co. have a stock of new cheese, and is also giving considerable attention of late to the best brands of California wines.

Persons who have the well-fare of this office at heart will have the kindness not to send any more wine to the composing room on Thanksgiving eve.

A child was knocked down on King street yesterday by an express wagon. Its mother thought it was killed, but a few minutes after it was picked up it began playing as usual.

Alfred Lilienfeld has returned from San Francisco with blood in his eye. He threatens a reduction in the price of his new stock of clothing that will make people purchase clothes which they do not need.

The merchants are laying in a supply of Christmas goods which would seem to indicate that they expect an exceptionally lively season. Leading dealers are ordering a larger stock than ever before.

Rodgers, the man on trial at Aurora for robbing the Candalaria st ge, was acquitted yesterday. The prosecution depended upon a pal of the accused turning State's evidence, but the testimony was not forthcoming when it was wanted.

Crooked Officials.

The Eureka Sentinel has the following intimation of trouble ahead in Eureka:

A petition was circulated yesterday, and quite generally signed by property holders, to secure funds for the employment of attorneys to prosecute certain county officials for alleged misappropriation of county money.
