Society.

A delightful social event of the week was the party Wednesday evening given by Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Jeanmard in honor of their guests, Misses Mabel and Ruth Ransonet of Breaux Bridge.

In the games, which formed a part of the pleasure of the evening, Miss Laurence Comeaux was the lucky winner of the ladies' first prize, a lovely hand-painted pin tray, and Miss Paola Delahoussaye won the booby, a big red heart. The gentleman's first prize was given to Mr. Indes and was a pretty silver stamp holder; Mr. Willie Montgomery captured the booby, a lemon. At the close of the games delightful refreshments were served. Those present were: Misses Marie Louise Mouton, Paola Mouton, Lucy Comeaux, Laurence Comeaux of Broussard, Rosalie Coronna, Hinda Schmulen, Lillian Guilbeau, Paola Delahoussaye, Wilhel Schmulen, Berninger, Neene Melancon, Messrs. Indes, Landry, Albert Boudreau, Leon Schmulen, Robt. Comeaux, Tod Martin, Henry Voorhies, Willie Montgomery, Dr. H. H. Jeanmard.

MT. CARMEL ACADEMY.

Last Friday evening Rev. Father Teurlings had a private reception at the Academy: Miss Katharine E. Cheney, of Crowley, a boarder at the Academy, delivered the welcome address in a most charming and intelligent manner. Then followed other numbers of a neat program which consisted of piano solos. The M. C. A. orchestra gave a grand selection. Miss Onaida Le Blanc in her rich contralto voice sweetly sang "He Shall Give His Angels Charge." Rev. Mother Valeria, Superior General, was present at the reception, having just arrived from New Orleans.

Mrs. G. Josse and Miss Marie Josse have returned from a most enjoyable trip North.

PREHISTORIC WALL OF ROCK.

Remarkable Discovery of Work Done by Unknown Race.

As the cities of Pompeii and Herculaneum were discovered by digging a well, so the most prehistoric rock wall in the United States was discovered in 1857 by a farmer who now lives in Rockwell, Tex., says the New Orleans Picayune. But whether in that portion which is surrounded by this wall is a Pompeii or for what purpose it was built has never been ascertained up to the present.

Here and there portions of the wall are exposed at distances of several yards. Even in some places it is covered up for a mile or two. One day a farmer, not knowing that the wall was there, dug a well along the side of this wall 30 feet deep. Near the bottom of his well he discovered an arched opening, which was two by three feet. This opening has been seen by several of the inhabitants of Rockwell, and it is believed this must have been used as an entrance into the wall. The bottom of the wall was not reached at a depth of 30 feet. This has been the only opening ever found, because the wall has never been exposed, except last fall, when two young men of Rockwell dug about the wall five feet in width and about the same in depth. This gave one a good idea of the wall. The rocks were nicely laid with abridged joints in regular fashion, but the substance between them was not mortar, but clay. A closer examination reveals no sign of any hard tool used upon the rocks, and no doubt wooden mallets were used to give them their sizes.

On the east side of the wall the rock is smooth, while on the west it is rough. They are all composed of sandstone, with streaks of mica and pebbles of iron. It is said that in the surrounding regions no rock can be found similar to this, except in the chimneys and wells which the farmers own.

The rocks at the opening found are from two to six feet long, three feet wide and two feet thick. An effort was made to bring some of them to the surface by the men who dug the well, but they found the task too difficult. On top the rocks are much smaller, running about 18 inches long, three inches thick and eight inches wide. The farmers claim that the wall is about 16 miles long, and they know exactly its course. There is no doubt that this is the most prehistoric wall in the United States, and so far as known, the Smithsonian Institution of Washington, D. C., has never made any effort to expose the length and width of the wall or give any explanation of its origin.

SPECIAL OFFER OF WALDEN'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, LAKE CHARLES, LA.

Dear Sir: In order that young people may know what your school did for me, and WHAT IT CAN DO FOR THEM, and what I think of it, I will say, that, after taking the course in Bookkeeping, Penmanship, Arithmetic and other English branches TEN WEEKS, you placed me in a good position.

I had never studied Bookkeeping before entering your school and notwithstanding the fact that the books of the firm for whom I worked WERE IN VERY BAD SHAPE, I had no trouble in straightening them out and in keeping them correct. MY SALARY WAS RAISED at the beginning of the second month, and again the third month. I really believe that your school IS THE BEST Business College in the South.

Your courses are thorough and practical, teachers competent and conscientious; equipment first class in every respect, EXPENSES VERY LOW, and you have demonstrated time and again that for $100 total cost, one can become a very good bookkeeper or stenographer in FOURTEEN WEEKS or less.

Lake Charles, La., June 16, 1908. JAMES WILLIS.
If you want one of the 25 special $100 Scholarships, total cost for 14 weeks write today. L. R. WALDEN, President.

Full Term Opens MONDAY, SEPT. 14.
