A poor man is to be avoided—he lacks principal.

When may a smith be said to commit a felony? When he forges.

A horse's teeth tell how old the creature is, but a woman's tongue doesn't.

Why is a butcher's cart like his boots? Because he carries his calves there.

People speak of the sun breaking out. Will that account for the spots on its face?

Can a tall man have a short memory? Yes, just as a short man can have a long sleep.

It is perfectly clear that every person on earth must be "under a cloud" sometimes.

A concert singer having murdered a tune, subsequently tried his voice, and acquitted himself.

A man was seen going up Camp street lately with three real legs—but one was a leg of mutton on his shoulder.

We often omit the good we might do in consequence of thinking of that which is out of our power to do.

Congestion of the brain is very prevalent in the army just now, and is said to be another name for too much whisky.

An amateur astronomer says, "The light supposed to be a comet's tail, is nothing more than a streak of lightning friz up."

We ascertain the qualities of a bell by ringing it. A young man had better ascertain the qualities of a belle before ringing her.

A New York dryman owns a horse so poor that a knot is tied in his tail to prevent his body from slipping through the collar.

A woman, purchasing some cups and saucers, was asked what color she would have. "Well I ain't particular, any color that won't show dirt."

Digby says it is true that "there is more pleasure in giving than receiving," but he also thinks it especially applies to medicine, kicks and advice.

"Pooh, pooh!" said a wife to her expiring husband, as he strove to utter a few parting words, "don't stop to talk, but go on with your dying!"

A lawyer who had a most absurd case submitted to him, on being asked if the action would lie, answered, "Yes, if the witnesses will lie too, but not otherwise."

The young ladies of the Treasury Department are forbidden, by a printed placard, to whistle while at work—a most tyrannical interference with woman's rights.

"My son," said an old lady, "how must Jonah have felt when the whale swallowed him?" "A little down in the mouth, I suppose," was young hopeful's reply.

A moral debating society out West is engaged in a discussion on the following question, "If a man deserts his wife, which is the most abandoned, the man or the woman?"

A schoolmaster asked one of his scholars in the winter time, what was the Latin for cold. "Oh," answered the lad, "I forget at this moment, although I have it at my finger ends."

"Well, wife, I don't see for my part how they send letters on them 'ere wires without tearing 'em all to bits." "La, me! they don't send the paper; they just send the writing in a fluid state."

A lady wished a seat. A portly, handsome gentleman brought one, and seated the lady. "Oh! you're a jewel," said she. "Oh, no," he replied, "I'm a jeweler; I have just set the jewel."

An old minister asked a woman what could be done to induce her husband to attend church. "I don't know," she replied, "unless you were to put a pipe and a jug of whisky in the pew."

"Sir," said a young wife to her husband, a few days after marriage, "you were honest enough to tell me that your chimney smoked, but why didn't you tell me that you smoked yourself?"

When an ill-natured fellow was trying to pick a quarrel with a peaceable man, the latter said, "I never had a fuss except with one man, and he was buried at four o'clock; it is now half-past three."

A negro who had learned to read at Hilton Head, wishing to give some of his acquaintances, who had never seen a book, an idea of it, said, "Reading is the power of hearing with the eyes instead of the ears."

Floating with the stream isn't always the best fortune. Mariners are not made in smooth seas. We all need to struggle to reach the best there is for us. A tug and tussle with counter elements evolve strength.

"What are you doing?" said a London D. D. to a visitor from the country. "Oh, sir, I am in the ministry now," was the somewhat reluctant reply. "Ah, but, my brother," said the querist again, "is the ministry in you?"

Goodness of heart is man's best treasure, his brightest honor and wisest acquisition. It is a ray of divinity that dignifies humanity, attracts admiration and assimilates him to his Creator; but, like pure gold, he is liable to be counterfeited.

"I expect," said a good Christian, "to pass through this world but once. If, therefore, there be any kindness I can show, or anything I can do for my fellow-men, let me do it now. Let me not neglect or defer it, for I shall not see this way again."

A lady, a regular shopper, who had made an unfortunate choice in timber for a stock, said, "I want the longest hose that is made," she said. "Then, madam, you had better make inquiries at the next engine house."

"My dear madam," said a dentist, "if you kept your teeth clean you would have less toothache." "But, doctor, they say that washing teeth wears them out." "Good gracious, madam," exclaimed the horrified dentist, "if I hope you don't think that way when anything ails your feet?"

An Englishman, traveling in Kilkenny, came to a ford, and hired a boat to take him across. The water being more agitated than was agreeable to him, he asked the boatman if any person was ever lost in the passage. "Never," replied Pat, "my brother was drowned here last week, but we found him the next day."

At Erie, Pa., the other day, a woman entered a dry goods store and asked to see some mourning stuff. The clerk asked how the deceased was related to her, she replied, "The fact is, there ain't nobody dead as I know on, but the doctor says my old man can't live more than a week or so at the furthest, and bein' as 'twas market day, and I was in town, I thought I had better gettin' the funeral fixin's, and make them up, 'cause it's a real bother to go on made when there's dead folks in the house, and I hate to borrow."

Anecdote of Sidney Smith.—It was at a dinner given at the Foundling Hospital, that the great wit met with a retort that he was never tired of referring to afterwards. He had been conversing in the half bantering manner in which he was inimitable, with his vis-a-vis at the table, a Swiss gentleman of education conversed with his country's embassy at the house of St. James, upon the relative merits of Swiss and English soldiers, and urged the superiority of the latter, inasmuch as they fought for honor while the Swiss fought for money. "The fact is," answered the Swiss gentleman, "we each of us fight for what each most wants."

JUVENILE COLUMN.

OUR MOTHER.—Of all the languages spoken by man, from the Hebrew of the Bible times to the guttural accents of the Red Men of the new world; from the musical sounds of the Italian to the harsher sounds of our own Anglo-Saxon idiom—the sweetest word is that name which sends a thrill to the heart as we pronounce it—mother!

What pen can describe the love of a child for his mother, the holiest of all affections on this earth! It seems as if it were a spark of the Divine love, placed in our hearts by the Creator of all things, to live there until the day when the soul, leaving its mortal prison, shall ascend to the presence of Him who is all love. A mother's influence follows her child through life. Gray-headed men, bowed by age, speak with all the tenderness of an infant of the mother who, for half a century past, has slept in the cold grave, and their eyes, bleared by the sorrows of a long and eventful life, shed tears at the sweet remembrance; from the gasping lips of the soldier, mortally struck in the furious charge, the last word faintly heard, is "mother!" "Fare thee well, mother!" when the soul is called to the dread presence, it clings, as to an anchor of salvation, to that sainted affection whose existence purifies the human heart.

Criminals about to commit some fearful act, have paused, struck suddenly by the recollection of a beloved mother, and appeal to her in their remorse. A remembrance of the tender mother, and the raised hand has dropped the murderous knife, the guilty man has wept like a child, and repentance has crept into his hardened heart. In all stations of life, for the priest in his cloister or the tyrant on his throne, "A mother is a mother still."

If a mother's sainted love follows us thus through life, what influence must it not have on us during youth? The infant in its mother's arms forgets pain; the child runs to her in its young sorrows, in youth we have no better friend.

Gallant boys who feel your souls burning with the aspirations of heroism, and who prepare yourself for the battle of life, look upon that kind mother; remember how many sleepless nights she has passed holding you in her arms, you, her treasure, whom she disputed to grim death; remember that sweet smile, your reward when good, and those sorrowful eyes speaking silent reproof when you have erred; remember all this, engrave it in your heart and preserve it as a talisman that will protect you in the hour of danger and temptation.

And you, gentle girl, the constant companion of that dear mother, can you forget her lessons? Do you recollect when at her knees you heard your first prayer? How she guided your young mind and taught you to know and love God? How sweetly you slept with her blessing on your young head and her last kiss on your lips? Treasure that love and let it be your constant guide; honor your mother, let her always have your undivided confidence, love her dearly. A day will come when she will be in her grave, when you, too, will have your first-born at your knee, and feel

"A springing joy,
A pleasure which no language can express,
An ecstasy, that mothers only feel!"

Then, when you stroke his golden curls, and the thoughts of the future recall those of the past, let it be in your power to say:

"I have never given pain to my mother."

KINDNESS REWARDED.—Once during a very severe winter, two village children went to the mill, each carrying under the head a little bag of grain. In passing before the miller's garden, Bertha was filled with compassion at the sight of some little yellow birds perched upon the hedge, that were dying with hunger. She opened her bag and threw some handfuls of grain to them.

Her brother Albert grumbled at this and said: "You are very foolish to have such tender feelings. Remember, you will certainly have less flour, and our parents will punish you."

Bertha, a little frightened, replied to him: "It is true I am not obliged to take pity on these birds; but our good parents will not scold me for doing so, and God may make amends for it in another way."

When the two children came again to the mill to get their flour, they found that Bertha's bag had more in it than Albert's. The boy did not know what to make of it, and his sister was very much inclined to regard it as a miracle.

But the good miller, who had heard the conversation of the children near the hedge, said to Bertha: "Your pity for the little hungry birds caused me so much pleasure that I have doubled your quantity. Though I have only put in some flour, you might certainly consider this favor as coming from God to reward you for your goodness of heart."

A GOOD RULE.—A certain man, who is very rich now, was very poor when he was a boy. When asked how he got his riches, he said: "My father taught me never to play till my work was finished; and never spend my money until I had earned it. If I had but an hour's work in the day, I must do that first thing, and in an hour. And after this I was allowed to play, and then I could play with much more pleasure than if I had the thought of an unfinished task before my mind. I early formed the habit of doing everything in time, and it soon became easy to do so. It is to this that I owe my prosperity."
